ALLIANCE VOTES DOWN NASON'S PEACE PLAN

Vetoes Individual Conference of Unions with Builders.

VAN NORDEN BUILDING FIX

Owners Will Sue for Damages for Delay —Hotel Astor's Opening Postponed by Strike Troubles.

The peace plan of William K. Nason, the new President of the Building Trades Alliance, for a conference between the employers and strikers was voted down almost unanimously at yesterday's meeting of the Alliance. The plan provided for conferences between committees of the individual unions in the Alliance and the employers, but the Alliance absolutely refused to agree to any peace proposition that did not recognize it as a body.

This was taken as meaning a delay in the building war settlement, and it was also said that it would probably lead to many complications between contractors and owners of buildings that will have to be settled in the courts.

The delay in the erection of the Van Norden Trust Company's building, at Sixtieth Street and Fifth Avenue, through the present troubles has already led to an attempt by the owners to take the contract from the Remington Construction Company. The owners are the Fifth Avenue Estates Company, of which Warren M. Van Norden is President.

Some time ago the owners, becoming angry at the delay, tried, but failed, to take the contract from the Remington Construction Company. Then an attempt to induce this company to leave the Building Trades Employers' Association failed. It is said that Ottomar H. Van Orden of the Fifth Avenue Estates Company first went to the Building Trades Alliance to see if it could not supply men to complete the work. The alliance was only too willing to do so if a new contractor could be found. T. J. McLoughlin, a general contractor, was suggested by the alliance to him. McLoughlin went to the building, but could not do anything, according to the Employers' Association, either the men or the sub-contractors not being willing to work for him, and he gave the matter up.

On Tuesday afternoon Mr. Van Norden appeared at the building and found two policemen guarding the work, as they have been doing for several weeks. He asked the policemen to see that no one carried anything out of the building and went about among the sub-contractors, asking them to sell all undelivered supplies to him. This no one agreed to.

One of the policemen, however, who thought apparently that Mr. Van Norden had the right to "boss matters," seized the foreman as he was going out, taking the plans and specifications with him.

"What's this for?" asked the surprised foreman.

The policeman hauled him back into the building. Mr. Van Norden's lawyer, who had arrived by this time, plucked the blue-coat by the sleeve and told him that the proceedings were hardly regular. The foreman was then released.

Work went on yesterday morning with the trades not locked out. At about noon a representative of the Fifth Avenue Estates Company appeared and asked the foreman to leave.

"I won't," the latter said. "You didn't hire me."

The owners' representatives then went round among the men and the sub-Contractor's and asked them to leave. Baker Smith, a sub-Contractor, discharged four steamfitters, but the rest laughed and scoffed at the order. Mr. Remington and his lawyer then appeared, and the owners' lawyer and several other men arrived. After a long argument it was agreed, and the agreement was put in writing, that the work should go on with the present contractors and that the question of damages should be left to the courts.

A representative of the Fifth Avenue Estate Company said later:

"The matter wound up amicably. Everybody shook hands all round, and we parted good friends."

Another much disappointed man yesterday was W. C. Muschenheim, proprietor of the Astor Hotel on Times Square. The hotel was to have been opened to-day, but the plumbing and electrical work has been delayed by the strikes and lockout.

"I have a staff of 800 or 900 employes on hand," Mr. Muschenheim said last night, "and all they have to do is to turn away people who want to engage rooms. I shall have to postpone the opening until Sept. 10, and it is a chance if everything is completed even then."

DEFENSE OF THE ALLIANCE.

Speakers at Mass Meeting Give Views on Building Trouble.

Between 3,000 and 4,000 people, mostly members of labor unions and their friends, attended a mass meeting of all the trades unions in this city held at the Grand Central Palace last night under the auspices of the Building Trades Alliance. The avowed purpose of the meeting was to elucidate the conditions which led to the present difficulties between the alliance and the building employers.

The heads of the unions in the alliance disclaimed all responsibility for the present trouble, and placed it at the door of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Employers' Association, which board they characterized as prejudiced and unjust. President Eidlitz of the association was made the target of some strong criticism, and the mention of his name called forth a storm of hisses.

William Nason, the new President of the alliance, who superseded Philip Weinseimer, acted as Chairman. District Attorney Jerome and several other men outside of the unions had been invited to attend, but were not present. It was expected that Weinseimer would be there, but he did not appear. His failure to appear was the cause of no little comment.

James J. Daly, President of the Mosaic and Encaustic Tile Layers' Association, made the principal speech. In it he said:

"Are contracts entered into between employers and employes binding only on one side, and are the employers left free to violate their agreements with impunity? We know that they are capable of raising 1,000 real and fancied grievances to every proposition we present. But there never has been a grievance presented by labor yet that has not been justifiable, and has not had the germ of truth in it.

"The man who refuses to become a member of a union and increase his pay is not entitled to the respect or half the gush that is wasted in the daily press. I favor arbitration, but I want the sort that is going to be just between man and man, and not that spurious commodity that has been shoved out from 1,123 Broadway [the builders' quarters] and labeled 'arbitration,' which is secretly cloaked in the ulterior purposes of the employers."

President Beuer of the Amalgamated Painters said that the members of his union had lost $200,000 in wages because of the trouble in the subway. John Armstrong of Electrical Union No. 3 paid a compliment to Weinseimer, who, he said, had manhood, integrity, and the sense of duty to his union which forbade him to shirk responsibility.

After the meeting it was learned that Charles L. Eidlitz and Otto M. Eidlitz had occupied seats in the rear of the hall for a few minutes after the speechmaking began, and that when they heard their names hissed they immediately left.

THIS A REMARKABLE SUMMER.

Record-Breaking Low Temperatures and Heavy Rainfalls.

The advent of to-day closes the most remarkable Summer on record, viewed from the standpoint of temperature and rainfall. There was no period of oppressive heat, and the highest point the mercury reached was 93, on July 19. Once the mercury touched 92, once 91, once 90, and once 88 degrees. The lowest temperature was 52, on June 11, and on June 3, 9 and 10, respectively, the thermometer registered as low as 53 degrees.

On one August day the rainfall was 2.56 inches in a trifle over half an hour, and the precipitation for last month was 7.13 inches. This is greater than often occurs in a period of two or three months. In some sections of the city the rain exceeded this amount, for New York has had many local showers. It has rained at the Brooklyn baseball grounds so hard that no game could be played, while at the Polo Grounds not a drop of rain fell. These local showers are gradually becoming more common as well as occupying a smaller area.

Local Forecaster Emery said yesterday that the old-time query regarding a general and constant change of weather tending toward a uniformity was constantly being revived, but that statistics showed that the weather is and has been generally uniform.

Notwithstanding sudden changes and extremes, the weather, viewed from year to year, does not change materially.

POOR, BUT A GENTLEMAN.

With His Only Coat He Taught the Morbid a Lesson.

Nettie Delaney, three and a half years old, of 14 West One Hundred and Thirty-third Street, was run over and killed by the first of three heavy stone trucks that were driven past her home yesterday afternoon. The heavy wheels passed over the child's head before the driver, Alphonso Greese, could stop the horses.

The driver whipped up his horses, but several men grasped the bridles. He would probably have been roughly handled but for the timely arrival of Policeman Farley, who arrested Greese.

Somebody carried the little girl's body into a drug store a few doors away and put it on the floor. A crowd of men, women, and children crowded into the store. Then a young man about twenty-one years old, evidently a laborer from his dress, stepped from the crowd, and, removing his coat, spread it tenderly over the face of the dead child, hiding it from the gaze of the curious. Then, without a word, he turned and left the store.

About an hour after the accident the young man, in his shirt sleeves, walked into the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Police Station and told the Sergeant that he would like to have his coat if they were quite through with it.

"It is the only one I have," he said, "and as I have no job just now I sleep wherever I can and use the coat for a pillow."

The young man declined to give his name, and said that he had no home at present. The policemen were touched by his act, and the Sergeant made up a small purse for him. He was at first inclined to refuse the gift, but the Sergeant insisted, and he left with his coat and enough money to procure food and shelter for several days.

STOLE TO SEE HIS FATHER.

Picnickers Robbed by Son of Man Now in Jail.

PATERSON, Aug. 31.—Clifford Howard, thirteen years old, was arrested last night for stealing $8 from the clothing of picnickers at Overpeck Park Grove. The clothing had been placed in the boathouse and the door locked, but the boy, it is said, entered by a trapdoor.

Howard is the son of James Howard, who for years lived as a respectable resident of Ridgewood and who robbed a hundred or more houses in Bergen, Passaic, and Essex Counties. He was sent to State prison for a term of eighteeen years. The boy said he stole the money to go to Trenton to see his father, to whom he was greatly attached.

McVICKER WILL STILL SECRET.

Extraordinary Efforts to Keep Contents from the Public.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Puzzling circumstances were added to the Harriet G. McVicker will case to-day, when, after going to the Probate Court to file Mrs. McVicker's will, four attorneys decided in a conference to withhold the instrument for several days. The decision was made after John D. Casey, assistant to Judge Cutting of the Probate Court, said he would not prevent the contents of the will becoming public if it was filed.

Next Friday, it was announced by the attorneys, Judge Cutting will be asked for an order impounding the will under seal for ten or fifteen days, that its terms may be kept from the public.

PRINCESS FLEES GUARD BY LADDER AND IN AUTO

Louise of Coburg May Have Rejoined ex-Lieut. Mattasitch.

WATCHED FOR SEVEN YEARS

Daughter of the King of the Belgians Slips from a Hotel at a German Health Resort.

BERLIN, Aug. 31.—Princess Louise of Coburg, whose relations with Matassich-Keglevitch, the former Lieutenant in the Austrian Army, caused a great scandal in European royal circles seven years ago, and who has since been kept under the closest restraint, has vanished from Bad Elster, where she has been taking the cure.

It is presumed that the Princess is in the company of Matassich and is seeking to gain an asylum where she will be safe from recapture.

The escape of the Princess was accomplished in a mysterious and romantic manner, ladders and a swift automobile being brought into play to effect her release from the hotel where she has been immured almost as a prisoner and to convey her to some refuge regarding the location of which there is as yet complete mystery.

Not the slightest trace of the whereabouts of the pair has been discovered, and nothing is known beyond the fact that the Princess and another guest of the hotel, believed to have been Matassich, have disappeared, and with them the jewels of the Princess and an automobile.

Princess Louise, who is a daughter of the King of the Belgians, accompanied by a lady in waiting and two physicians, who were her warders, came three weeks ago to Bad Elster, which is noted as a health resort.

On account of the long lapse of time since the original scandal, the watch on the Princess had become slightly relaxed, but it was made more stringent than ever when it was noticed that efforts were being made to communicate with the Princess personally and through the medium of notes.

Nevertheless, arrangements for the flight were successfully completed and the room of the Princess was found empty. Various surmises as to her destination are afloat, and it is said that orders have been given to watch the borders of Bavaria, Austria, France, and Switzerland.

The escape of the Princess has created almost as great a sensation here and in Dresden and Vienna as did the original scandal. Detailed accounts in the newspapers of the flight of her Highness overshadow the dispatches from the Far East.

Princess Louise of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha is the eldest daughter of the King of the Belgians. In 1895 she was married to her cousin, Prince Philippe of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who then was fourteen years her senior.

The marriage was not a happy one. Early in 1897 Court circles in Europe were scandalized by a report that the Princess had eloped with Count von Matassich-Keglevitch, a dashing young Lieutenant in the Austrian regiment of Imperial Uhlans.

In February the following year Prince Philippe met Count von Matassich in a duel. It was fought with pistols first, three shots being fired, and when all of these went wild was continued with swords.

Prince Philippe was wounded in the right arm. The scene of the duel was a riding school in the Austrian capital, and by a strange coincidence the date, Feb. 18, was returned from his vacation, drove up to the the birthday of the Princess Louise.

Divorce proceedings were instituted by Prince Philippe immediately. Princess Louise disappeared from public view. At times it was rumored that she had come to this country, but it was later ascertained that she was at Agram, where her elopement was suddenly brought to an end by the intrusian of the Austrian secret police in her apartments at the Hotel Puchner to a lunatic asylum at Doebling, from which place she was later transferred to an asylum for nervous diseases at Lindenhof, near Coswig, in Saxony.

Matassich, who, after the discovery of his relations with the Princess, was convicted of forgery, expelled from the army, and imprisoned, received a pardon from Emperor Francis Joseph early this year. Since then he has succeeded in seeing the Princess at Lindenhof.

2,500 DRUGGISTS IN CONTEMPT.

Association Fined $2,000 for Interfering with Chicago Man's Business.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Twenty-five hundred retail druggists in the United States were declared guilty of contempt of court by Judge Dunne of the Circuit Court to-day and the National Association of Retail Druggists of which they are members was fined $2,000, while Thomas V. Wooten, Secretary of the organization, was fined $500.

The injunction under which the druggists' association was fined was secured by Isaac Platt, a retail druggist of Chicago, in November, 1902, and restrained them from interfering in any manner with the securing of supplies by Platt, who had incurred the association's displeasure. It was charged, because he would not, join it.

Platt has fought the association in the courts for two years, and it was charged in court that the association several times asked him to give up the fight and join the alleged combination, asserting that they would then cease to molest him.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 31.—Meeting accidentally on the Pike at the World's Fair, M. Londoli and Mrs. Caroline Pittman, both of Hoboken, N. J., renewed the interrupted courtship of their youth, and two hours afterward were married in East St. Louis by Judge Beach.

The interruption in their early courtship had been caused by a quarrel. He had filially married another woman and she another man, but both were free when they met.

BELGIAN-GERMAN QUARREL.

Congo Free State Building Forts—Invasion May Be Feared.

CAPE TOWN, Aug. 31.—Official information from British Central Africa says that the Congo Free State is constructing concealed forts of considerable magnitude on the western shore of Lake Tanganyika, and that one of these forts, which is equipped with twenty guns, is within two hours of the German frontier.

It is believed that the Belgians apprehend a German invasion.

A number of natives who are German subjects have been expelled from the Congo Free State.

It is understood that negotiations regarding the matter are now proceeding between Berlin and Brussels.

The west shore of Lake Tanganyika belongs to the Congo Free State, the south shore to British Central Africa, and the east shore to German East Africa.

The area of the lake is estimated at 14,000 square miles.

BREWER'S FAMILY THREATENED

"Black Hand" Writer Demands $10,000 —Alternative, Death.

Police Captain Becker of the Hamburg Avenue Station, Williamsburg, since last Saturday has had detectives trying to find the author of three threatening letters which were received by the family of Mrs. Leonard Eppig, the widow of a brewer, whose extensive business in Melrose Street, near Central Avenue, is carried on by the family. In each letter a demand for $10,000 was made and a threat was made that unless the money was forthcoming the brewery would be blown up and the entire family murdered.

Mrs. Eppig is in Sharon Springs. She received the first letter last Thursday. She sent the letter to her son. On Friday he received a similar letter, which said that the money must be left before Sunday night in either a barber's shop at 61 Central Avenue or in a poolroom at 64 Central Avenue. Both letters were turned over to Capt. Becker, who immediately put detectives on the case and notified the Central Office.

The Eppig family also employed private detectives to guard the brewery and to insure the safety of the family. On Saturday a third letter was received, this by Adam Eppig. He was told to call off all the private detectives, and was warned that unless this was done the brewery would be blown to pieces. This letter was signed "The Black Hand" and contained cross-bones and a skull.

FIRM DROPS LAWSON'S NAME.

Acts on Request of Boston Stock Exchange—Result of Open Letter.

BOSTON, Aug. 31. The Boston Stock Exchange, having requested the firm of Lawson, Arnold & Co. to drop the word "Lawson" from [illegible], the firm sent a notice [illegible] yesterday that it was complied with the request. The new firm will be Allen Arnold & Co.

This action on the part of the Stock Exchange was the direct result of Mr. Lawson's open letter to the Exchange last week. Mr. Lawson was called to account by the governing board of the Exchange last December because of attacks by him upon the alleged methods of certain Stock Exchange houses. That resulted in the withdrawal of Mr. Lawson from the firm of Lawson, Arnold & Co.

On April 28, at the time he retired, statements were made by him which tended to show that his withdrawal was merely nominal, and, in fact, it was so regarded by the Street. It seemed to satisfy the Stock Exchange, however, until the attack of Aug. 24.

POTATO BUGS STALL CAR.

Jersey Trolleyites Held Up by Insect Army—Prophets Disgraced.

RAHWAY, N. J., Aug. 31.—A trolley car which left Boynton Beach at noon to-day on the Rahway and Woodbridge Branch of the Public Service Corporation line was stalled by potato bugs just south of the New Jersey Reformatory while on the way to this city.

Motorman John Barton saw that a number of potato bugs were along the tracks, but, as the poet would say, brave John Barton paid no heed. The car went on. Finally the car refused to go any further, the wheels spinning on the slippery rails. The car was backed out of the danger zone, and then sent ahead at high speed, but the wheels slipped again. The passengers began to object, and at last Conductor Hoffman put a lot of sand on the rails. This was a successful remedy.

Ex-Mayor Holmes of this city was one of the passengers. He said he "never saw the likes" in potato bugs. In the Spring, he said, farmers were saying that there would be no bugs this year owing to the zero weather of last Winter. It seems that they failed to prophesy correctly.

PLAINFIELD MEN MISSING.

Two Went to Visit Daughters—Another Didn't Return from Lodge.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, Aug. 31.—Within ten days three Plainfield men have disappeared. William S. Benton, forty-five years old, head bookkeeper for the A. M. Griffin Hardware Company, left home a week ago to spend his vacation with his daughter, who lives in the Adirondacks, and has not reached there yet. His employers and his family are unable to account for his absence.

Daniel Galbraith of West Second Street, who is sixty-five years old, left his home on Monday, saying that he was going to see his daughter, Mrs. Mercein, of 94 West One Hundred and Fourth Street, New York. His daughter has not seen him, and the police have been asked to search for him.

Mrs. Lynus Walpole of near Scotch Plains asked the police to-day to find her husband. He attended the Elks' outing at Whitestone, L. I., on Monday, and has not been heard from since. He carried a large sum of money and wore valuable diamonds.

Capt. Ludlam shipped the sand to-day by freight. There is a lot of speculation in Oyster Bay as to what will be done with it.

WOMAN WOUNDED THIEF IN DUEL IN LONELY ROAD

She Is Daughter of Dr. Hartwell, Who Was Sandbagged.

TERRORISM TO COVER THEFT

Family Had Received Letters Threatening Them with Death — Posses Looking for Highwayman.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Aug. 31.—Mrs. Anna Spencer, wife of the Rev. G. A. Spencer of Greenwich, and daughter of Dr. Andrew Hartwell of Judd's Bridge, who was recently sandbagged and robbed of $5,000 after he had drawn the money from bank to buy bogus bonds, was held up by a man on a lonely road in the outskirts of New Milford to-day.

The highwayman fired several shots at Mrs. Spencer but she had been on her guard since the receipt of a lot of threatening letters by the members of her family, and fired at her assailant, probably wounding him.

Mrs. Spencer drove alone from the Hartwell home to New Milford this morning and deposited a sum of money in the bank there. While driving home a man who resembled a tramp in dress emerged from a thicket and grabbed her horse by the bit. The animal reared, whereupon the man shot twice at Mrs. Spencer. Neither shot took effect.

The highwayman then went back to the wagon and seized Mrs. Spencer by the wrist, evidently with the intention of robbing her of whatever valuables she might have. The woman pulled a .22-calibre revolver from her pocket and shot the highwayman. She believes the shot took effect in his left breast. The man immediately returned the fire, the bullet grazing Mrs. Spencer's left shoulder and burning a small hole in her dress. He then ran into the woods.

Mrs. Spencer drove back to her father's home, secured a rifle, and returned to New Milford and notified the authorities of the crime. The highwayman got about three hours' start. A posse heavily armed, headed by the Rev. Mr. Spencer and including every officer and constable in New Milford, went out in quest of Mrs. Spencer's assailant.

Most of those who participated in the hunt returned to New Milford to-night empty handed. A supposed trail of blood was found leading from the road to the woods.

That the attack on Mrs. Spencer was premeditated develops from the story told to the authorities to-night by Miss Galvin, daughter of Edwin Galvin, who says she was stopped on the same road this morning by a man answering the description of Mrs. Spencer's assailant who asked: "Are you Mrs. Spencer?" Miss Galvin said she was not, and the man let her drive on.

The Rev. Mr. Spencer, when asked to-night about the affair bravely, said:

"I am not surprised to hear that she hit the highwayman, but I wish she had had a larger revolver with her. She is an expert shot with a rifle, and when she was in charge of a lonely school some years ago I taught her how to shoot with a revolver. I got her a large one, but she could not handle it well, so I got her a small pearl-handled one instead. I admire my wife's pluck, of course. She is not the kind to faint when anything happens."

Dr. Hartwell took the police of Danbury, New Milford, and other neighboring towns into his confidence on Saturday, Aug. 20, telling them that he had been robbed of $5,000 by two men, who had first won his confidence and then waylaid him.

When he first met the men, he said, one was in the garb of a clergyman and the other represented himself to be a business man interested in the purchase of some Litchfield real estate. The supposed clergyman gave his name as C. Woodruff of Ridgefield, and showed a number of apparently genuine Government bonds, which he offered to sell. The offer tempted Dr. Hartwell, and he agreed to purchase, if time was given him to go to New Milford and draw the money from a bank there.

The man in clerical clothes offered to take Dr. Hartwell to New Milford in the physician's own carriage and return with him to his home. Dr. Hartwell drew $5,000 from the New Milford bank, and on the way home was sandbagged and the money taken. On the day following the robbery Dr. Hartwell received a letter from the two men telling him he was "an old fool." The doctor is now very ill, and but slight hopes are entertained for his recovery.

The Hartwells have received a number of letters lately threatening harm to them if they did not call the detectives off the case. The swindlers are thought to be members of the same gang that bunkoed G. S. Burnham, a rich Winsted farmer, out of $5,000 in Hartford about two years ago.

EXPLOSION DARKENS CONEY.

Gas in Manhole Blew Up and Many Lights Went Out.

One of the big feed wires of the Edison Company was grounded last night and caused an explosion of gas in a manhole at West Twelfth Street and Railroad Avenue, Coney Island. The report of the explosion could be heard for blocks around as the 300-pound iron cover of the manhole was sent spinning to a dazzling height and the asphalt pavement for several feet in each direction was hoisted high in the air.

The explosion plunged a large section of Coney Island, with its crowds of merry-makers, into complete darkness. It sent pedestrians in the vicinity scurrying in all directions to points of safety and created a panic on board a Brooklyn Rapid transit train which was coming to a stop about two feet from the manhole.

When the trouble occurred, every light in Luna Park went out, and Will Hill was performing on a tight rope in the mid-air circus. He was fairly high up, and the big audience feared that he would fall. He, however, steadied himself and kept his balance.

WAITERS FOLLOW BELLBOYS.

Only Waitresses Now at the Martha Washington Hotel.

Manager Cadwell of the Martha Washington Hotel yesterday rid the hostelry of twenty-five waiters and substituted as many waitresses. It was but recently that Mr. Cadwell took the same action with the bell boys.

There was no trouble when the latest edict of the manager was made known. The waiters, according to their spokesman, were glad to be invited to go because serving women all the time was more or less monotonous. The monotony, he declared, was aggravated when all the hired help was feminine. The only men left about the building now are the manager and those employed in the engine room.

OPPOSED AMERICAN DUCHESS.

Canadian Ministers' Wives Prevented Marlborough's Appointment.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Aug. 31.—An intimation has come to the Canadian capital that the British Government has reconsidered its decision to appoint the Duke of Marlborough to the post of Governor General of the Dominion, and will send Earl Grey.

It is known that the Duke of Marlborough wants the post and that Earl Grey has declared he does not care for it. The Toronto press, however, has violently opposed the idea of an American hostess at Rideau Hall.

It is well understood that some of the Ministers' wives, fearing their social precedence might be interfered with by the American friends of the Duchess of Marlborough, have brought pressure to bear upon their husbands and they have made semi-official protests against the appointment of Marlborough.

KAISERIN HAD HER WAY.

Her Children Represented as Angels Despite Emperor's Objection.

BERLIN, Aug. 31.—The architect who designed the restoration of the Protestant Church at Spires, capital of Rhenish Bavaria, which was dedicated to-day, selected the portraits of the seven imperial children, each in the fourth year, for the heads of seven angels in the windows around the chancel. The Emperor objected, saying:

"My children are no angels."

The Empress, however, thought the idea charming, and it was accordingly executed.

BEATEN, HAD MONEY IN SHOE.

Highwaymen Didn't Think to Look There for McCarthy's Roll.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, Aug. 31.—Highwaymen administered a terrible beating to James McCarthy of this city, on a lonely road near Fanwood, last night, but were foiled in their attempt to get his money.

Fearing that he might be waylaid, Mr. McCarthy, who had collected a bill amounting to several hundred dollars at Scotch Plains, placed the roll of bills in his shoes. Before leaving Scotch Plains he visited a saloon, and thought it suspicious that several strangers hurried away ahead of him. When near Fanwood three men ran out from a clump of bushes and told him to halt. They demanded his money, and when McCarthy refused they pounced on him, beating him into insensibility. When he recovered consciousness he drove to his home and collapsed. The money was still in his shoes.

WED WITH BULLET IN HEAD.

Put There When Danbury Man Worried Over First Wife's Illness.

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, Conn., Aug. 31.—Less than a year ago Alexander Friedman of this city hovered for many days between life and death as a result of an attempt to commit suicide by shooting himself in the temple with a revolver. The cause of the act was melancholia over the serious illness of his wife, then a patient in a Hartford hospital.

A few hours after the news of her husband's attempt at self destruction reached her, Mrs. Friedman died. The pistol bullet that entered Friedman's head at that time is still there.

Last night he arrived home bringing with him a bride whom he married last Sunday in New York City. Mrs. Friedman was Miss Bella Rubenchek of 227 East One Hundred and Eighteenth Street. Mr. and Mrs. Friedman have been on a short wedding trip, and are now at home at 82 Garfield Avenue in this city.

HEIRESS TO NEW YORK ESTATE.

Mrs. Hubbard, Ignoring Daughter, Leaves Fortune to Grandchild.

Special to The New York Times.

MARYVILLE, Mo., Aug. 31.—Mrs. Hal Struck of this place, a bride of a few weeks, has fallen heiress to a large fortune bequeathed her by her grandmother, Mrs. Lydia Hubbard of New York, who died recently.

The estate to which Mrs. Struck has fallen heir consists of real estate and money in New York. Her grandmother's family home, which is situated on the Hudson, is alone estimated to be worth $75,000 or $100,000, while the total of the estate, according to the letter from the New York attorney, W. D. Anderson, will amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

Mrs. Hubbard was a Southern woman. During the war Northern raiders burned her home and destroyed her property. Her daughter, Mrs. Struck's mother, fell in love with the Captain of the raiders and married him. The mother disowned the girl. At her death she ignored her daughter, who is still living.

BIG TELESCOPE FOR HARVARD.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—The Harvard Observatory is to add to its equipment what is considered the largest efficient telescope in the world, the five-foot aperture reflecting instrument constructed by the English astronomer, A. A. Common.

Before the death of Mr. Common, Prof. Pickering had some correspondence with him in relation to the telescope, which has been unused for some years, and learned that he was desirous that the instrument should come into Harvard's possession. The instrument is now being packed for shipment to Cambridge, having been purchased for a sum below its value.

ELEVATOR BOY KILLED.

Sister Fainted at News—Taken Home in Ambulance.

James Malley, twenty years old, an elevator boy in the Bliss Building, at 286 Second Avenue, was found crushed to death between the floor of his car and the elevator shaft late last night. The police think the boy fainted while running the car and fell to the floor.

Malley's sister Mamie called at the building just after the accident and heard some one say:

"Well, he died with his boots on."

Miss Malley promptly fainted. She was taken home in the ambulance which had been called for her brother.

BATTLE IS STILL RAGING

Russians Reported to Have Captured 46 Guns Near Liao-Yang.

ST. PETERSBURG IN IGNORANCE

Officials Suppress Dispatches from the Front, and Alarming Rumors Dampen Enthusiasm of Populace.

TOKIO, Thursday, Sept. 1—11 A. M.—The battle of Liao-Yang is progressing without appreciable result.

Official Japanese dispatches sent out late yesterday say that neither contestant has realized any visible results.

LIAO-YANG, Aug. 31—Evening.—The battle has continued all day to-day. Over 600,000 men and 1,300 guns are engaged on both sides. Practically the whole Russian force is on the firing line.

The Russians have effected an advance along the railway to the southward.

The Japanese are getting around the Russian left flank. Developments are expected to the west and northeast.

There was desultory cannon firing all last night, the last attack of the Japanese having been made at 7 P. M. on the Feng-wang-Cheng Road. With the first gray of dawn this morning the battle was resumed. The artillery opened, and the firing soon extended along the entire line. The rifle fire began in the southwest. The rain had ceased in the course of the night, and the day broke bright and clear.

The Russians made repeated bayonet advances on the road directly south of Liao-Yang, where the Japanese approached from Sahasshih and Tao, shelling the position in the Russians lines until 4 in the afternoon, when the engagement, which was general throughout the south and southeast, began to advance to the main line.

The Japanese advance on the southeast was by way of the Feng-wang-Cheng road. Immediately in front of Chiao-fan-Tun the Japanese stubbornly attempted to occupy a round-topped hill, which was literally shaved by Russian shells. The Japanese made repeated attempts during the entire day to occupy that hill, on which it was apparently impossible for anything to live.

The cannonading continued from this point to the vicinity of Wang-pao-Tai until this evening without apparent advantage to either side. The Japanese dropped shells within two or three miles of the railroad station, and in the plain near Wen-Tshu Mountain, which is the most important eminence around Liao-Yang, but the Japanese abandoned aggression there on account of the resistance they met.

The casualties here include one Russian war correspondent wounded and twenty-five Chinese women from Chiao-fan-Tun, whom Dr. Westwater, the well-known missionary, is caring for in the Chinese Red Cross refuge.

The day's developments show that the Russians are prepared for all emergencies. Slow rain began to fall at noon, gradually transforming the plain into a wilderness through which the wounded, in carts and walking, are to-night making their way to the hospitals.

Considering the scale of the day's operations the number of Russian wounded is apparently small, while the Japanese losses are believed to be great, especially where they were repulsed on the south road.

Chinese graves, with trees, are being leveled about Liao-Yang in order not to interfere with the defense.

A balloon was sent up this morning from one of the Japanese positions southeast of Liao-Yang, making a target for the Russian mortar batteries.

The spirit of the Russian troops continues excellent. One regiment which had just arrived from Russia went into action to-day with its band playing.

RUSSIANS HOLDING BACK NEWS.

Apprehension in St. Petersburg in Consequence—Wires Not Cut.

ST. PETERSBURG, Thursday, Sept. 1, (2 A. M.)—With the knowledge that the Russian and Japanese Armies about Liao-Yang are locked in a death struggle, the tension in St. Petersburg is strained to the utmost. It is believed here that the fight cannot stop short of the crushing defeat of one side or the other.

All reports so far are favorable to the Russians, though the suspension of all news for many hours has been exceedingly trying, and has given rise to several rumors, somewhat tempering the earlier enthusiasm.

It is stated officially, however, that the report that the railway and telegraph lines have been cut north of Liao-Yang is untrue. A member of the General Staff said to The Associated Press correspondent at midnight:

"I can assure you that up to this hour communication with Liao-Yang has not been interrupted. Gen. Kuropatkin [illegible] taken particular precaution against any attempt to cut the railway. While it is always possible that a small raiding party might slip through the Russian patrols or that hired Chinese bandits might cut the telegraph, it is a fair supposition, in view of all the facts, that this has not been done."

Report from Kuropatkin Withheld.

It is positively stated that the Emperor yesterday afternoon received a telegram from Gen. Kuropatkin, but the contents cannot be learned.

The highest military authorities here consider that the most critical stage of the battle has not yet been reached, and they believe that the fight may continue for some time before either side acknowledges defeat. This is an important consideration by the light of which to interpret any immediate news.

It is thought here, in view of the numbers engaged, the desperate character of the assaults, and the length of the line, about seven miles, that the losses in the two days' fighting cannot fall short of 10,000 on each side.

Both sides are straining every nerve, realizing that the fortunes of war for a whole year are in the scale, and neither side is in the mood or the position to spare men in the effort to achieve a final victory.

The battle of Liao-Yang will probably rank as one of the great sanguinary battles of history. It is estimated by the General Staff that the Japanese armies engaged number 17 divisions of 15,000 men each, or, allowing for inefficients, about 240,000 men. Gen. Kuropatkin's effective forces are variously estimated at from 170,000 to 200,000 men.

Each Japanese division has 36 guns, and there are two independent artillery brigades of 100 guns each, making a total of about 800 guns. The estimates made by the Russian correspondents range from 600 to 1,000 guns on each side.

Russian Successes Reported.

In the preliminary fighting of Monday the Russians captured 200 prisoners, who have already arrived at Harbin.

A dispatch sent from Mukden yesterday afternoon said it was reported there that Gen. Samsonoff had captured two Japanese battalions.

The report persists that the Russians captured 46 Japanese guns yesterday. It is said that the guns were brought up to the railroad station where Gen. Kuropatkin's train was standing.

The Japanese yesterday morning were attacking against three sides of the Russian position. One of The Associated Press correspondents also mentions a Japanese movement to the northeast of Liao-Yang, which was doubtless with the object of working around Gen. Kuropatkin's rear.

One of the surprising phases of the situation is the endurance of the men. They have been battling desperately for two days after more or less severe fighting under unfavorable conditions every day since Aug. 24. It would seem that human endurance would not persist much longer without a respite of some sort.

Japanese Using Balloons.

The Japanese are using balloons to locate the Russian guns and trenches. One of the Russian correspondents of The Associated Press says the Japanese sent up a balloon shortly after daylight to the southeast of Liao-Yang.

The Japanese are reported to be using mortars to drop shells in the Russian positions. These are probably the high-angle fire howitzers which, were reported in action earlier in the week.

It is plain, however, that the Japanese are no longer enjoying the superiority in artillery which stood them in such good stead in the earlier months of the war. It was then hill fighting, and the Japanese mountain batteries, in which arms the Russians were deficient, told with deadly effect. Now the contest is in a comparatively open country, where both the Russian field guns and the Russian cavalry can come into more effective use.

JAPANESE REPULSED TUESDAY.

Attacked Desperately, but Were Beaten Back—Flanking Move Failed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 31.—Success crowned the Russian arms the first day of the great battle of Liao-Yang.

Nemirovich Danchenko, the well-known Russian war correspondent, describing the battle, says:

"The enemy, drunk with their former successes, attacked from three sides like madmen. When they were hurled back fresh troops, of which they seemed to have an inexhaustible supply, were sent forward."

M. Danchenko says the combatants had about 600 guns on each side, and adds:

"It was our first victory. The enemy were beaten back everywhere, many of their batteries were destroyed, and in some cases their infantry were put to rout."

From dawn until dark yesterday the battle raged, first on the centre and left, and then on the right of the Russian line. The Japanese charged gallantly and desperately in an effort to break the centre, and then, in the afternoon, came a movement against the opposite flank.

This attack was delivered from the west, but Gen. Kuropatkin had evidently anticipated just what happened, for he not only met and repulsed it, but actually was able by superior force to overlap and envelop the Japanese.

Gen. Kuropatkin's forces occupied positions forming a semi-circle about Liao-Yang, the flanks resting on the Tai-Tse River, east and west of the city. The battle divided itself into two periods. After a preliminary bombardment of the Russian lines on the right and centre, the Japanese infantry advanced to the attack, charging the Russian centre. Although repeatedly checked, they came on with bulldog tenancity, hurling themselves against the Russian position with the bayonet. There were many bloody hand-to-hand encounters. By noon the Japanese actually succeeded in occupying a portion of the Russian trenches. Then Gen. Kuropatkin sent forward some reserves, delivered a series of counter attacks, recaptured the lost positions, and drove back the Japanese all along the line.

Tried to Turn Russian Right.

The attack on the centre having failed, the second half of the fight began at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the Japanese tried to turn and roll up the Russian right. Here also they failed, but only after a desperate struggle, which was continued until 9 o'clock at night. Reserves dispatched in time by Gen. Kuropatkin at last succeeded not only in checking the Japanese, but in enveloping and driving them back in confusion.

During the progress of the battle Gen. Kuropatkin encouraged his men on the fighting line by sending out the news of the repulse of the attack upon Port Arthur on Aug. 26.

The Japanese flank movement from the west began Monday from Chandiapuddi, three miles southeast of Shakhe, which is eleven miles northwest of Liao-Yang.

Russian correspondents say that two regiments of Japanese at daybreak yesterday attempted to capture the batteries of the Sixth Artillery Brigade, located on the extreme left flank of the Russian army. The attempt was only discovered in the nick of time.

Some of the Russian troops fought continuously for thirty-six hours.

The concussion of the guns shook windows at Liao-Yang, though the artillery was six to eight miles away.

Report from Sakharoff.

Lieut. Gen. Sakharoff has sent the following report of yesterday's battle:

"From 5 o'clock this morning until 9 to-night the Japanese forces attacked our frontal positions before Liao-Yang and on the left bank of the Tai-Tse River. Both their artillery and rifle fire were intense. Their main efforts were directed against our centre positions and left flank, but numerous attacks were repulsed along the whole line. Our troops made several counter-attacks, culminating in bayonet fighting.

"Many positions which had been occupied by the Japanese were retaken at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. During the artillery attack our batteries did very effective work. About 4 o'clock this afternoon the enemy were observed attempting to turn our right flank with considerable forces, but several battalions of reserves advanced and, after a fierce engagement, checked the Japanese and compelled them to retire. The battle continued until after dark, and only ended at 9 o'clock.

"The spirit of our troops is excellent, and the men are rejoiced over the news of the heroic behavior of the garrison at Port Arthur, the repulsing of Japanese attacks there having been made known to them.

"Our casualties to-day have been considerable, reaching about 3,000. The Japanese losses must have been heavy."

No attempt was made by Gen. Sakharoff to estimate the Japanese losses definitely. No Russian general officers fell.

The General Staff does not doubt that the losses yesterday were heavy on both sides, but declares that in the absence of direct information the figures mentioned are largely guesswork.

Russian Losses Great.

LIAO-YANG, Aug. 31.—A Russian correspondent says:

"The Japanese all day yesterday carried on the fight with an energy approaching desperation, but the Russians were buoyed up by the belief that a point had been reached where there would be no more retreating, and the Japanese attacks were met with shouts and hurrahs from the trenches and the rifle pits.

"Five times the Japanese hurled themselves against our line, but each time they were repulsed at the point of the bayonet.

"There were about 1,000 guns in action on each side, but we have more guns emplaced than have the Japanese.

"The losses cannot yet be computed, but they have been great everywhere, especially among the artillerymen. For instance, in the First Artillery Brigade every officer was either killed or wounded, and some of the guns were silenced absolutely, owing to the death of all the gun crews.

"The spirits of the men are of the highest at all points."

PEACE EFFORT NOT LIKELY.

Very Doubtful If the President Would Intervene at This Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—At the State Department nothing has been heard from M. Francottee, one of the delegates from Belgium to the Peace Conference to be held at St. Louis next month, who is said to be the bearer of credentials to President Roosevelt from the King of the Belgians requesting the President to use his good offices with a view to ending the war between Russia and Japan. The department has not been advised of the reported action of the King of Belgium in this matter.

If M. Francotte has been commissioned as reported it is probable that he will seek the services of Baron Moncheur, the Belgian Minister at Washington, by whom he would be presented to the Secretary of State.

The President will not be in Washington until Sept. 23, when M. Francotte could be presented through Baron Moncheur and deliver whatever message he may be charged with from the King of Belgium.

It is not believed that the time is opportune for making peace overtures to either belligerent, and it is very doubtful whether President Roosevelt, in view of what is known of the feeling at St. Petersburg, would undertake to offer good offices at this time.

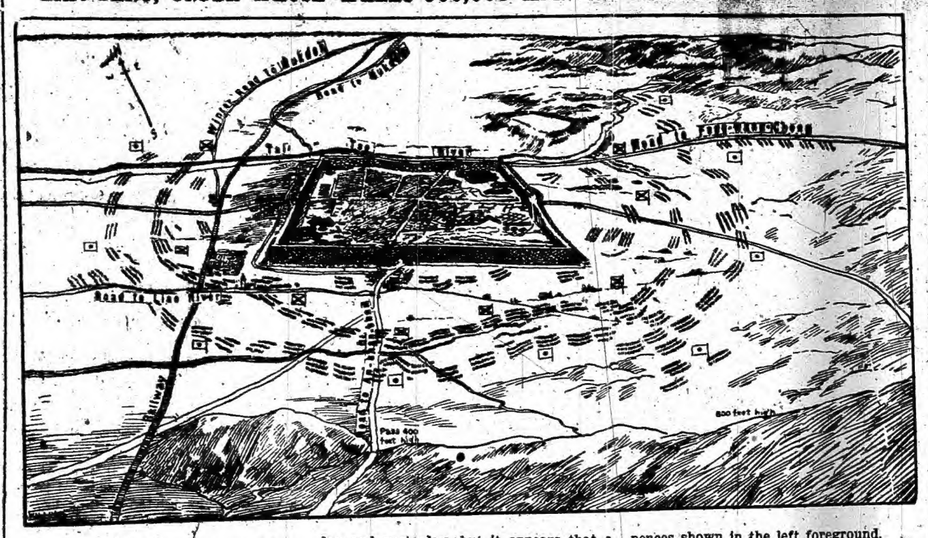
Japanese Arrested in St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 31.—Two Japanese residents of this city have been arrested as spies. It is said that some of the letters seized on board the North German Lloyd steamer Prinz Heinrich in July by the Volunteer Fleet steamer Smolensk were from them.

Boris Going Back to the War.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 31.—The Grand Duke Boris, who arrived in St. Petersburg yesterday, will return to the front in three weeks.

LIAO-YANG, UNDER WHOSE WALLS 500,000 MEN ARE BATTLING FOR EMPIRE.



The above map shows the City of Liao-Yang, looking northeast, and, approximately, the direction of the Japanese attacks and the disposition of the Russian forces. It is probable that the most important developments in the gigantic conflict now raging will be in the north.

Part of Gen. Kuroki's army is believed to have been engaged in the battles of Tuesday and yesterday, but it appears that a considerable portion of his forces has not been accounted for, and it is possible that they are making the flanking movement reported in last night's dispatch from Liao-Yang.

The walls of Liao-Yang are built of very hard brick, with inner faces of stone. In front of them is a moat, partly dry and partly filled with water. Mount Wen-Tshu, mentioned in the dispatches to-day, is probably Mount Shou, the highest of the eminences shown in the left foreground.

From the chain of hills to the walls of the city a well-cultivated level plain extends. On the hills are a number of old Chinese forts, while the Russians have built strong works all around the city.

Any detailed description of the defenses arranged by the Russians, however, has of course been carefully kept from the knowledge of outsiders, and only a general idea of the dispositions of the two armies can be given.

SHIPS TAKE REFUGE OUTSIDE PORT ARTHUR.

Major Seaman Saw Four Battleships Near Harbor's Mouth.

RUSSIAN OFFICERS CAPTURED

Were Trying to Take Dispatches to the Fortress—Wireless Station at Che-Foo Dismantled.

CHE-FOO, Aug. 31.—Major L. E. Seaman of New York returned to Che-Foo to-day after an adventurous attempt to enter Port Arthur.

Leaving Che-Foo Aug. 25, Major Seaman proceeded to Taikin-Tao, one of the Miato-Tao islands. Unable to obtain a junk there, he secured a lifeboat belonging to a steamer recently wrecked, and with four coolies as oarsmen and the third mate of the wrecked steamer, he started for Port Arthur. He carried a makeshift American flag with twenty-two stripes.

A head wind and a strong tide compelled Major Seaman to return to his starting place at nightfall. He slept on the pebbly beach. On Aug. 28 he secured a small junk, and with a favorable wind sped toward Port Arthur.

He passed a Japanese cruiser unnoticed and saw four battleships in the vicinity of the harbor's mouth. His junk drifted too close to the shore, and it was fired upon by Japanese riflemen.

Discovering the impossibility of landing in the face of the shore guard and warships, Major Seaman reluctantly returned.

Major Seaman has made every possible effort to make medical and hygienic observations of battlefields in the present war, and, despite seemingly insurmountable obstacles, has been partially successful. The result of his observations will be told in the military section of the Medical Congress at St. Louis.

The advance positions of the Japanese before Port Arthur are now near Fort No. 5 on the east, at Pali-Chwang on the north, and at Hukiaton (Lu-kia-Tun?) and Yanktowang on the west.

Chinese who left Port Arthur on Aug. 28 say that neither side was then occupying Fort No. 5.

The fort at Tungkia Tashan (Tong-chia-Tse-Shan?) was destroyed by the Japanese, who proceeded to mount guns on an adjoining hill.

The report of the presence of Russians in the Etse-Shan Hills has been confirmed.

A junk which has arrived here heard firing at Port Arthur on the morning of Aug. 29. It reports that food is scarce there, a bag of flour being worth $5.50 in gold.

It is reported here upon good authority that the Japanese have captured some Russian officers bound to Port Arthur with important papers. These officers left Mukden and attempted to get into Port Arthur by junk. For some time past a Japanese torpedo boat had been at sea watching for this junk, and, according to the report, she overtook it at one o'clock this morning and took the officers, the papers, and the junk to Dalny.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The State Department has received a cablegram from Consul General Fowler at Che-Foo, saying that the Russian wireless telegraph station there has been dismantled.

JAPANESE SHIP HELD.

Vessel Carrying Food for Niu-Chwang Detained at Che-Foo.

CHEE-FOO, Aug. 31.—The steamship Independent, under charter to the Osaka Steamship Company to carry food from Japan to Niu-Chwang, has been held here by the Che-Foo Commissioner of Customs. The Independent put into this port to discharge passengers and local freight.

The Commissioner asserts that if the steamship is allowed to depart the neutrality of China will be violated, and he has demanded that the contraband in her cargo be landed here.

FEARS SLIGHT TO VISITORS.

Bartholdt Wants Many Congressmen at Parliamentary Conference.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Arrangements have been practically completed for the reception of the 225 members of the various Parliaments of Europe who will come to this country next month to attend the twelfth inter-parliamentary conference for the promotion of international arbitration to be held at St. Louis in September, but it appears there is grave danger owing to the political campaign of a very inadequate representation of the American Congress at the conference.

Representative Bartholdt of Missouri, who was chiefly instrumental in having Congress invite the delegates to meet in this country and provide an appropriation of $50,000 for their entertainment, said to-night:

"I sent out a circular letter two weeks ago, and many members of Congress have responded that owing to the campaign they could not be present at St. Louis. After having invited here distinguished members of all European Parliaments, it would, in my judgment, be a National disgrace should Congress not be well represented, and the foreign delegates would be sure to feel the matter keenly as a slight to themselves."

TURKEY WORRIED ABOUT CRETE

Fears Another Attempt Is to be Made to Secure Annexation to Greece.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 31.—The departure of Prince George of Greece from Crete, of which island he is Governor, on a mission which is said to be with the object of inducing the powers to consent to the annexation of Crete to Greece, has aroused Turkey to energetic diplomatic action.

I was told this afternoon at the Turkish Embassy by the Charge d'Affaires, in the absence of the Ambassador, who is away from Paris, that a note was received here this morning from the Sublime Porte to the effect that, according to information from Crete, a certain number of Cretans had decided to raise the banner of revolt against the Sultan, to proclaim the independence of Crete as a preliminary to demanding the annexation of the island to Greece, and to send a petition to Prince George, who is en route for Copenhagen, acquainting him with this decision and asking him to accept the new state of things and incorporate it in the basis of his negotiations.

The Porte does not guarantee the strict accuracy of this information, but instructs the Turkish Embassy in Paris, in the event of such a proposition as is outlined being made to the French Government, to protest most energetically against any interference with the integrity of the Ottoman Empire.

The Porte adds that it cannot believe the European powers will break their oft-repeated pledges to maintain the status quo in the Near East.

BRITISH TO LEAVE LHASA.

Demands on Tibet Have Apparently Been Acceded To.

SIMLA, Aug. 31.—According to present plans, the British mission will leave Lhasa on Sept. 15.

The foregoing apparently indicates that the Tibetans have acceded, or are about to accede, to all the British demands. The proposed convention consists of nine articles, granting the trade privileges which the British have all along required and various other concessions.

SWITCHMEN REFUSE TO STRIKE.

Donnelly's Effort to Prevent Shipments from Stockyards Fails.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—The efforts of President Donnelly of the Butchers' Union to spread the strike against the packers throughout all trades that are in any way connected with the packing house industry was only partially successful to-day.

The first step was in calling out the men employed by the independent packers and the stock handlers who were still at work for those packers against whom the original strike was made. The total number of men who quit work to-day in response to the appeals of President Donnelly was about 3,000.

It was also announced by President Donnelly that he had made arrangements for a strike of the switchmen on the railroads doing business in the stock yards, and that in a short time the packers would find it impossible to ship out their product. The switchmen, however, have refused to strike. After a long meeting to-night, which was attended jointly by members of the Switchmen's Union and members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, it was decided that the members of both organizations would remain at work.

DEGREES AT BARGAIN PRICES.

Postal Officials Investigating Dr. Farr and His "Universities."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Dr. William Farr of Washington University, the George Washington University, the University of Washington, and the Washington Memorial University appeared before the Post Office Department to-day to show cause why he should not be debarred from the use of the United States mail.

Not only is Dr. Farr about all there is to three or four "universities" in Washington, but he has also operated in Nashville, Tenn., and other cities. His specialty is conferring honorary university degrees for prices ranging from $5 to $20. In all it is believed about 20,000 degrees have been issued to persons in the United States and foreign countries.

Holmes Conrad, counsel for the Columbian University of this city, which to-morrow changes its name to the "George Washington University," appeared as prosecutor of Dr. Farr. The latter contended that he had engaged instructors and was running a bona fide institution.

STRAY BULLET MAY KILL.

Policeman Shot at Negro—Boy Found Dying Soon After.

John Hallanan, fifteen years old, of 1,525 Dean Street, Brooklyn, was found unconscious on the street near his home at midnight last night. He had received a bullet wound in his abdomen. The doctors think he will die.

The police think he may have been struck by a bullet from the revolver of Policeman James McGowan, who, they say, at 11 o'clock last night shot several times at a negro who had assaulted him and who then escaped.

BELMONT TURNS DOWN SUBWAY PAY DEMANDS.

Long Conference with Brotherhood Men Ends Without Agreement.

STRIKE IS STILL REMOTE

Chief Stone Says Engineers Will Back Up Motormen—Another Meeting to be Held.

Another step in the movement to have officials of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company give in to the demand of a $3.50 rate for motormen on the subway was taken yesterday by Grand Chief Warren S. Stone and Assistant Grand Chief J. J. Hurley of the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, when they carried their troubles to August Belmont, President of the company. A five-hour conference followed in Mr. Belmont's office, and although this admittedly led to no agreement, the danger of an immediate strike was said to be as remote as ever.

The men's demand that motormen in the subway receive the same pay as those employed on the elevated roads, or $3.50 for a working day of nine hours, was flatly turned down on Tuesday by General Manager E. P. Bryan of the Interborough Company, who told the labor representatives that the company under no circumstances would pay more than $3 for a ten-hour working day and that they had in fact already sufficient applications to fill all available jobs at that figure.

The conference, which began shortly after noon, was held in Mr. Belmont's office in the Equitable Building and lasted until nearly 5 o'clock. Prior to the conference the Directors of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company met and remained in session for an hour.

At the conference between Mr. Belmont and the labor representatives, Grand Chief Stone and Assistant Grand Chief Hurley were accompanied by the respective heads of their local organization. W. L. Jencks for the engineers, and W. H. Pinney for the firemen, and a joint committee representing the locals of both brotherhoods. For the company there were present, besides Mr. Belmont, Mr. Bryan and Superintendent Hedley. Grand Chief Stone was the first one to speak. He laid the demands of his men before Mr. Belmont and added that he had gone to the conference feeling assured that a peaceful settlement could be arrived at without much trouble.

Mr. Belmont in reply said that he felt very much the same way, but declared that he could not see his way clear to recede from the position already taken by Mr. Bryan in his negotiations with the men, and announced that the rate of $3 for a ten-hour working day in the case of the motormen had been irrevocably fixed, and that all the men that were needed could be obtained for that money. Several of the representatives from the other side then spoke. Mr. Stone said that the subway in reality was a municipal enterprise, that the city undoubtedly would hold the operating company to strict account for the safety of the passengers they carried; and that the company would need a higher grade of men than those employed on surface roads, and that for this reason a higher rate of wages should obtain.

Mr. Stone declared that the Brotherhood of Engineers was behind the elevated employes in their demand, and would use its full power to enforce it.

No direct threat of a strike was made by any of the Brotherhood men. Mr. Belmont, after they had finished, talked long and earnestly and in a very friendly tone regarding the folly of taking any radical action to enforce their demands.

It was recalled to them that the company in changing the motive power on the elevated system had voluntarily granted the motormen as members of the Brotherhood of Engineers a $3.50 rate in recognition of long and faithful service. These motormen, Mr. Belmont said, were better paid than any other motormen in the world. He told the men frankly that in case of a strike the company would change its present policy, inspired largely by sentiment, toward the elevated motormen, and asked them whether they were willing to assume the responsibility of putting the positions of men who were perfectly contented in jeopardy in order to enforce a higher wage rate for men who were not even members of their organization. Men could be had in plenty, he said, who would be glad to fill motormen's places on the Manhattan elevated lines for $2.50 a day.

Both Mr. Stone and Mr. Hurley were urged to arrange another meeting with the members of their respective brotherhoods employed on the elevated railroad and to put the matter up to them before they took any further action. After some further discussion the representatives of the employes decided to follow Mr. Belmont's advice, and the conference was brought to a close. Mr. Belmont upon leaving the conference room said:

"We have not reached any definite conclusion and will have to confer again. I don't think there will be any trouble. Everything will come out all right—at least I hope so. I don't see why it should not."

Messrs. Jencks and Pinney hurried away without making any statement. Chief Stone said:

"While we did not reach any agreement to-day, negotiations have not been declared off and we will have another conference before long, at which we hope everything will be settled. In the meantime I will remain in this city so as to be in touch both with Mr. Belmont and the members of the Brotherhood."

Mr. Jencks said last night that he and his associates would meet Mr. Belmont again at 11 o'clock this morning.

A man familiar with the situation said last night that there was little probability of a strike. The brotherhoods, it was pointed out, have clauses in their constitutions prohibiting sympathetic strikes, and any strike that would follow a disagreement in this case would be purely of that order. A strike, it was said, would be as unwelcome to one side as the other, and the opinion was expressed that possibly the matter would be adjusted by some compromise; for instance, the company might agree to pay $3.50 a day in the subway for a ten-hour working day, and make the working day for the motormen on the elevated road ten hours instead of nine as now.

INTERBOROUGH BREAKS AGAIN.

Stock Closes with Net Loss of 2¾ Points for the Day.

In explanation of the sharp break of points in Interborough Rapid Transit on the curb yesterday to 141, following the 3-point decline of the previous day, a report was spread to the effect that the Interborough would have trouble in obtaining motormen with which to operate their trains on the date given for the formal opening.

On Tuesday the stock closed at 146¾, but yesterday, when a market order appeared at the opening, the best bid was 145. The next apparent order in the market was at 143, which was the next sale. Stop orders were met, and a further drop to 141 occurred, from which figure there was a quick recovery to 144. At that price the stock closed with a net loss of 2¾ points. This is the first serious setback which the stock has had since the upward movement to the high record of 150 was started.

NINE KILLED IN WRECK.

Speeding Trains Meet on Grand Trunk Road.

MONTREAL, Aug. 31.—Nine persons were killed and twenty-three injured in a head-on collision on the Grand Trunk Railway near Richmond, Quebec, to-day. The trains involved were a special excursion from Montreal bound for Sherbrooke and Passenger Train No. 5, running between Island Pond, Vt., and Montreal.

The collision, it is said, was due to neglect of orders on the part of the train crew of the excursion train, which left Richmond without awaiting the arrival of the passenger train.

The excursion train was made up of ten coaches and a baggage car. On board were about 1,000 persons bound for the exhibition at Sherbrooke. The Island Pond train was made up of five coaches and a baggage car, and did not have many persons on board.

The excursion train had barely cleared the Richmond yard when, rounding a curve, it met the Island Pond train running at a high rate of speed. Both engineers reversed, and with their firemen jumped, escaping with only minor injuries. The shock of the collision was plainly heard in Richmond, more than a mile away.

The killed are J. B. Blanchet, who represented St. Hyacinthe in the Canadian House of Commons, and who was elected only last Spring; T. H. Hackett of Montreal, the express messenger, who was a prominent Montreal Mason; Charles A. Simard, St. Hyacinthe; A. Theodore Richard, Lisgar, P. Q.; Fred Bowring, South Deerham; unknown man from Beldeil, P. Q.; W. T. Mountain of Montreal, boy named Dubford, from Arthabaska, and Ephraim Gaudette, St. Theodore de Acton.

BLUE AND BROWN MANOEUVRE.

Each Seeking Advantage Before Hostilities Begin.

GAINESVILLE, Va., Aug. 31.—As the time draws near for the "Declaration of War" between the "Blue" and the "Brown" armies, at Manassas and Thoroughfare, the divisions of each are working for mastery of the territory included in the manoeuvre zone. Infantry, cavalry, and artillery are out daily studying the topography of the country.

Positions for batteries are selected, sweeps of country for cavalry charges are marked with care, and places for concealment of troops for the purpose of surprise are decided upon. When the declaration of war is made, it will be impossible for the respective sides in the mimic warfare to have free access to the "enemy's" country.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Some officers at the War Department are surprised at the orders just issued by Gen. Corbin, commanding at Manassas, requiring all officers to appear at formal dinner at 7 o'clock during the encampment in dress or white uniforms. Ladies will be present at every dinner, and it is intended to make these affairs socially brilliant after the style of European manoeuvres.

It is reported that $15,000 has been set aside for social functions. Young officers are divided in their remarks regarding the orders, some of them being glad of an opportunity to indulge in social pleasures, while others are aghast over the expense involved.

GAVE THE PARK AS HER HOME.

Strange Girl Had No Employment, Had to Leave Boarding House.

Several women told Mounted Patrolman Ferguson of the Central Park Station yesterday afternoon that a young woman was acting queerly in the Park. Ferguson found the young woman, who said she was Hattie Barnes, twenty-three years old, sitting on a bench. He concluded that she was not making any disturbance, and went away.

When he returned half an hour later he found Miss Barnes lying on the ground. She said she was cold and wanted to keep warm, and began to cry bitterly, begging not to be arrested. Ferguson took her to the arsenal and preferred a charge of disorderly conduct.

To Acting Sergeant Dunn the young woman said she was a Michigan girl and came here several months ago to get work. She had not been able to obtain employment, and had been forced to leave her boarding place. She gave the park as her home. The girl was well educated, and said she was a college graduate. She would give no information as to her family.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

Long Islander Lost Money, Pin, and Checks for $1,500.

Harry Drucker of 680 Union Avenue, Ravenswood, L. I., complained to the police of the West Thirtieth Street Station yesterday that in the early hours of the morning he had been robbed of a diamond pin, valued at $90, $25 in money, and $1,500 in checks, by a young man whom he had met casually. He thinks he was drugged.

Drucker says he took a drink in a First Avenue saloon with the man. Then they rode to Broadway. He was then staggering. His new friend ran away at that point.

MRS. F. H. GILBERT LOSES JEWELS.

Thinks Fake Telephone Man Took Them from Carlton Hotel.

Mrs. F. H. Gilbert, who lives at the Carlton Hotel, Broadway and Fifty-fourth Street, reported to the manager of the hotel yesterday that during the afternoon a man, who represented himself as an employe of the New York Telephone Company, knocked at her door, and said that he wanted to test the wire. She admitted him, and left him there with a bellboy.

When she returned she found that her bureau drawer had been rifled of jewelry to the value of $570. The matter was reported to the police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, and detectives were assigned to the case.

GERMANS FOR 'ROOSEVELTISM.'

Audience Indorses His Personality and Sings "Unser Teddy."

Under the auspices of the State and New York Committees of the National Roosevelt League, about 1,200 German-Americans met last evening in Maennerchor Hall to ratify the candidacy of President Roosevelt for re-election. Although there were speakers before and after Edward Lauterbach, who spoke in English, he seemed to catch the tenor of the sentiment of his hearers by emphasizing what he called "Roseveltism," and who, addressing a lithograph of the President on the wall, repeated over and over again: "Yes, you, Teddy Roosevelt; you who agitate and then fought to free Cuba; you, who during the reciprocity agitation fought valiantly that justice should be done her. It is you, the man, whom we want as President!"

A great ovation followed the conclusion of Mr. Lauterbach's speech, and then the audience sang to the tune of "Die Wacht am Rhein" five verses paraphrased to suit the occasion, and entitled "Unser Teddy."

The meeting was opened by Baron von Briesen, who said that it augured well in his opinion that the first meeting of the campaign was being held in a place in which they had often met before during campaigns which had turned out victories. Vice President Albert Leisel arraigned Mr. Parker for his tardy notification to the convention of what his position was on the gold question, and gave it as his belief that if Mr. Parker had made his attitude known before the delegates were tired out drinking good and bad whiskey" he never would have been their standard-bearer.

Senator N. B. Scott of West Virginia also made an address.

The resolutions which were adopted at the meeting spoke of President Roosevelt as "the manly and noble type of the progressive American and the most democratic citizen of our glorious Republic." The Chairman read a statement in which he said that 20,000 citizens already had been enrolled as members of the Roosevelt League in this city and throughout the State.

MAN DEAD, WOMAN MAY DIE.

One Knocked from Car and the Other Run Over.

William Wendell, thirty-seven years old, of 997 Decatur Street, Brooklyn, was instantly killed yesterday afternoon at Broadway and Hart Street, Williamsburg, by being knocked from a trolley car. At about the same time Mrs. Christina Costello, sixty-seven years old, of 52 Lombardy Street, was run over and mortally injured by a car at Grand and Keap Streets.

Wendell was on the running board of the car when he was struck in the back by the pole of a three-horse coal truck. The force of the blow broke Wendell's spine, and he fell to the pavement dead.

While Mrs. Costello was crossing at Keap and Grand Streets she got behind a wagon. When she emerged she was in front of the car, and the fender knocked her down. Two wheels passed over her legs. While she was pinned down she asked some one to send for her married daughter, Mrs. N. Halle of 468 Bedford Avenue, whom she desired to see before she died.

While an ambulance surgeon was attending Mrs. Costello the daughter arrived. Mrs. Costello drew from the bosom of her dress a small bag containing her jewelry and family heirlooms, and handed them to Mrs. Halle. Her recovery is doubtful.

HILL CHOOSES SEPT. 20 FOR STATE CONVENTION

Democratic Delegates to Meet Then at Saratoga Springs.

MURPHY'S VEILED OPPOSITION

Tammany Believed to Have Favored Syracuse — State and Executive Committees Meet To-day.

When the Democratic State Committee meets at the Hoffman House at noon to-day it will call the State Convention for Saratoga Springs on Sept. 20. This word was passed along to the Committeemen last night by ex-Senator David B. Hill on his arrival from Whitney's Point, where he spoke during the day. Senator Hill promptly exploded the proposition to take the convention to Syracuse, although there was a pretty well defined movement apparent last night on the part of the Tammany men to favor Syracuse merely because Hill and McCarren want Saratoga.

It was shortly after 8 o'clock when Senator Hill reached the Hoffman House, and he saw many of the members of the State Committee and other lieutenants during the evening. It was brought to Hill's attention that Charles F. Murphy was believed to be favoring secretly the selection of Syracuse as a convention city, and Mr. Hill then and there told all hands that Saratoga would be the place and Sept. 20 the time.

To his callers last night Senator Hill said that the naming of three Presidential Electors, to fill vacancies, had been left absolutely to Tammany, as all of the vacancies had occurred in Manhattan. These vacancies are because of the resignations of Harry Payne Whitney and James T. Woodward as Electors at Large and of Isidor Straus as a District Elector. All resigned because they were Directors in National banks. As far as could be learned last night, Tammany has made no move to select their successors.

Senator Hill was pleased last night to refer to his speech earlier in the day at Whitney's Point. He told his friends that the crowd had been record-breaking, although it was in a Republican stronghold, in the Congress district once represented by Senator Platt. Furthermore, the Senator said, his audience had cheered especially his references to Gov. Odell. To all who tried to draw the ex-Senator out on the subject of the Governorship he turned a deaf ear, saying he would not discuss this subject until after the Republican nominee had been placed in the field. Senator Hill looks for the nomination of Lieut. Gov. Higgins to head the Republican State ticket.

There was a decided clash of party sentiment over the probable action of the coming State Convention on the subject of naming a party candidate for Senator, and it is a question whether to-day's convention call will provide for such action or not. Senator McCarren yesterday ventured the suggestion that the convention would ignore the Senatorship, saying that the State Committee was absolutely without power last September when it adopted a resolution in favor of naming party Senate candidates in convention hereafter, these candidates to be voted for by the party legislators on joint ballot the following Winter.

"None of us ever will see a change in the present system of naming Senators," said Senator McCarren with emphasis.

Senator Hill, on the other hand, expressed himself as convinced that the party should carry out the principle laid down by the last State Committee. He told his callers last night that he always had favored the election of United States Senators by popular vote, and that until popular elections of Senators could be held he favored the method suggested by the State Committee of nominating in convention. He did not think, however, that it would be necessary for the State Committee at to-day's meeting, to make any provision for such action. The Tammany men, however, will insist on this action being taken to-day, and the Senate provision being inserted in the call.

Charles F. Murphy, who presented the Senatorship resolution last year and secured its adoption, will attend to-day's meeting, as will Senator Hill. The Tammany leader is a member of the State Committee, but Senator Hill is not. He will, however, have the proxy of George Hall of Ogdensburg.

The Executive Committee will hold its first meeting this afternoon, and Senator McCarren will preside. Among Tammany men last night it was said that Senator Victor J. Dowling, who is on the Executive Committee, will make some sort of a motion for the deposing of McCarren and the selection of another as Chairman.

With the gathering of the Democratic leaders at the Hoffman House last night there came a strong boom for Justice Martin Jerome Keogh of the Supreme Court as a possibility for the Gubernatorial nomination. Many expressed the opinion that Justice Keogh might go into the convention with the solid backing of the 105 Tammany Hall delegates, which would be a powerful support out of a convention of 450 delegates.

Senator McCarren last night declared that Kings County would be for Grout for Governor, and he also expressed the belief that Grout's candidacy would not be affected one way or another by the placing of Judge Cullen of Brooklyn on the Democratic Court of Appeals slate if he should be so placed.

ERIE DELEGATES CHOSEN.

Go Uninstructed to Republican and Democratic State Conventions.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Delegates to the Republican State Convention were chosen in the eight Assembly districts of Erie County to-day. They were uninstructed.

The Democrats also elected delegates to the Democratic State Convention in six of the eight Assembly districts. No instructions were given them. The Seventh and Eighth Districts conventions will be held to-morrow.

Under the harmony agreement reached recently half of the delegates from Erie County were selected by friends of Charles W. Goodyear, candidate for Governor, and half by the friends of John Cunneen, candidate for Judge of the Court of Appeals.

SENTIMENT VEERING TO PARKER

Much Depends on His Letter of Acceptance, Livingston Thinks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Representative Livingston of Georgia, the senior member of the minority on the Appropriations Committee, and one of the leaders of his party in the House, believes that the people of the country are gradually becoming more and more favorable to the election of Judge Parker.

Mr. Livingston said there was no disguising the fact that the people are inclined to believe that President Roosevelt stands ready to find a way of doing what he wishes to have done without regard to law. It was this popular belief that was causing conservative men to look with favor on the candidacy of Judge Parker.

"But, while I believe there has been a drift of sentiment toward Parker," said Mr. Livingston, "his future, in my judgment, will depend largely upon his forthcoming letter of acceptance. If that letter is written with the clearness and boldness that characterized his telegram to the St. Louis Convention on the subject of the gold standard, and if it strikes a popular chord, as the telegram did, then he will be swept into the White House by a sentiment that nothing can defeat."

JUDGE PARKER AT FAIR.

Great Crowd at Ellenville Tenders Him an Ovation.

Special to The New York Times.

ELLENVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Judge Parker was the chief attraction at the county fair to-day, and his presence drew a great crowd.

The Democratic nominee for the Presidency, accompanied by Mrs. Parker, his brother Frederick, and a number of friends, left Esopus for Kingston by the 10:27 train. The run from the West Shore station at Kingston to the New York, Ontario and Western station was via trolley line.

At Napanoch the nominee's party left the train and entered carriages and were driven to the residence of Col. Thomas E. Benedict. Luncheon was served, and about an hour later the candidate was driven amid considerable excitement into the fair grounds.

For a time his course about the exhibits was marked by a long line of the curious. To shake hands with Judge Parker was the ambition of all. The few who did not achieve their ambition had only their own timidity to blame. At the appointed time Col. Benedict accompanied Judge Parker to the reviewing stand, and there for more than an hour the candidate was engaged in viewing the passing show and acknowledging the homage paid him from the opposite grand stand and the surging crowds below. Despite the great crowd, the gathering seemed almost like a big family party.

Everybody seemed to know everybody else. Therefore all were in good humor, and the Judge most of all. The presence of a martial band and detachments from the Tenth Separate Company of Newburg, the Fourteenth of Kingston and the Twenty-fourth of Middletown served further to enliven the proceedings.

Following the distribution of prize ribbons, Judge Parker held an impromptu reception in the centre of the race course, just west of the entrance. Democrats rushed up to get hold of his hand, ex-Bryan men crowded about to tell him of their reform; Republicans told him they intended to vote for him, and the few Populists about confessed they were in doubt about Tom Watson. In fact, Democratic leaders here expressed the belief that Judge Parker made many scores of votes by his pilgrimage.

On his return to Rosemount this evening Judge Parker, who did not disguise the pleasure his trip had afforded him, said he had "had a fine time meeting a lot of old friends."

SHEPARD ON ROOSEVELT.

Compares President to Napoleon—Protests Against Ideal of Force.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 31.—From the steps of the Bennington County Court House this evening Edward M. Shepard of New York spoke on National issues, and urged a crowd that nearly filled the square to support the Democratic Party ticket in the State election next Tuesday.

Mr. Shepard was warmly greeted, and frequently applauded. He spoke in part as follows:

"One of the most important Republican arguments is President Roosevelt himself. To many, whether for or against him, it is the first argument, although prudent Republican advocates dare not, or at least do not, give it that rank.

"What are we to say, Secretary Hay, of your tribute to the 'ardent and able young statesman' who is your chief, that 'in times of doubt and difficulty the thought oftenest in his heart is "What in such a case would Lincoln have done?"'

"If, after the new fashion of which we are advised, your manuscript were not submitted to the President—still doubtless you were right that in that amazing assertion you were 'violating neither the confidence of a friend nor the proprieties.' But would it have violated either if you had let us know what act or utterance of Lincoln was in the President's heart on his three days' recognition of Panama, or on his executive extension of the pension law, or on his threat against the South American republics, or during his long-continued and truly 'ardent' advocacy of a great navy, or in his long and systematic preaching of the 'strong man armed' and the 'big stick,' or when he sent to his somewhat dull convention at Chicago that true-Rough Rider's telegram that 'we must have 'Perdicaris alive or Rais Uli dead'?"

"Was not Gov. Black right? For did he not speak of a President who has declared his contempt for 'that mock humanitarianism' which would prevent the great liberty-loving nations of the world from going to war, who despises, as he himself has told us, the 'cloistered virtue' which dare not go down into 'the hurly-burly where the men of might contend?'

"Was he not speaking of a President who, in a hundred speeches, has talked of the 'craven' and the 'weakling,' and the 'coward who babbles of peace,' who has preached the 'just man armed' as his dearest gospel, who would have a great army, although, as he has said, we do not need it in the least for police purposes at home, but because we need to use it abroad; who, three years before our marauding venture at Panama, declared that 'we must build the Isthmian canal' and must grasp the points 'of vantage,' meaning that we must violate the territory of another nation; who has talked in season and out of season of the 'cant about liberty' and the 'consent of the governed,' who, speaking as the Chief Magistrate of a republic of law and order and peace, which in its men and resources is the most powerful of nations, declared that its maxim should be, 'Speak softly and carry a big stick,' and who has of late in plain terms threatened our neighbors at the South that unless—in their relations not with the United States but with others, for whom we are in no way called upon to act—they acted with decency in industrial and political matters, unless they 'kept order and paid their obligation,' unless they 'governed themselves well' and were 'prosperous and orderly,' they might expect our forcible intervention?

"Where is the parallel for utterances like these by the ruler of a great country since Moscow and Waterloo brought to an end the insolent addresses of the first Napoleon to the monarchs of Europe and the terrified envoys at his Court?"

In conclusion Mr. Shepard urged that in place of the ideal held by the Republican Party and promoted by President Roosevelt, "the ideal of force and lawlessness and war," the country return to the simpler and nobler ideal, which, in spite of some exceptions and inconsistencies, the Republic followed for its first century and longer, and under which and by reason of which the American people have come to "a splendid wealth and prosperity and their Nation to a just and honorable power."

PRESIDENT'S LETTER HERE.

Printers Putting It in Type—Visitors at Oyster Bay.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Aug. 31.—Several visitors interrupted the usual quietude of Sagamore Hill to-day. They included G. D. B. Hasbrouck of Kingston, one of the Judges of the New York Court of Claims; James A. Whipple of Salamanca, Clerk of the New York State Senate; Willard A. Marakle of Rochester, and the Rev. Dr. William D. Ward, pastor of the Reformed Church of Brookville, L. I. While some of the visitors talked politics incidentally, their calls for the most part were purely social.

Having transacted all business of pressing importance that has been pending since his arrival at Sagamore Hill, the President will give more time henceforth to visitors. Members of the International Arbitration Conference, which is to be held in St. Louis in the next ten days, will be received by the President at the White House on Sept. 24. The delegates will be the guests of the Nation while in this country, Congress having appropriated $50,000 for their entertainment.

The President's letter of acceptance was taken to New York last night by Assistant Secretary Barnes and placed in the hands of a printer. It will require several days to make it ready for distribution and publication.

HILL CALLS ODELL GRAFTER AND SQUEALER

Also Fiercely Attacks Roosevelt at Broome County Fair.

"CAMPAIGN ONE OF HUMBUG"

Intimates the President Inspired Article Defending His Attitude in the Postal Frauds Case.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Aug. 31.—In a campaign speech at the Broome County Fair, where he was a guest to-day, ex-Senator David B. Hill fiercely attacked President Roosevelt, Gov. Odell, and Senators Depew and Platt.

Speaking of Senator Depew's candidacy for re-election Mr. Hill said:

"Decent men of all parties would greatly prefer him to the grafter and groceryman now at the head of the Republican organization in this State, who speculates in the securities of trusts and takes his chances, and then 'squeals' on his associates to induce them to share his own losses."

He characterized the present campaign on the part of the Republicans as one of humbug and false pretenses—"peculiarly Rooseveltish in all its essential characteristics."

"The President," he continued, "through himself and his late private secretary, manage and direct every detail, while experienced political managers of long service in the party are brushed aside and ignored. His programme requires that he should be constantly kept to the front—his virtues extolled and his achievements magnified, while belittling the deeds of previous Administrations and of other prominent men who have preceded him in the public service.

"When the President has particularly desired to impress upon the country the greatness or goodness of his deeds, but has preferred to refrain from communicating to the public directly through his messages or addresses, he has employed the agency of certain magazine writers. The latest performance in that direction is an article on the subject of 'How Roosevelt Uncovered the Postal Frauds,' contained in the September number of McClure's Magazine, by Mr. William Allen White of Kansas.

ARTICLE'S POLITICAL PURPOSE.

"The political purpose of the article is plain. It is an effort to convince the people that the President was not responsible for the postal frauds in his Administration, and that, notwithstanding his long neglect to prosecute them, he was really the exalted instrument which exposed them. As the newspapers would say: 'This is important, if true.'

"The article is compelled to concede that tremendous frauds existed in the Post Office Department at Washington, even to a greater extent than the Democrats had charged, and that nearly all the Republican Senators and Congressmen—all but about twenty—knew of it.

"This startling accusation against the integrity of the Republican majority in Congress would seem to be a dangerous admission when most of them are candidates for re-election before the people, but the statement was evidently regarded as necessary in order to protect the President by reason of the long neglect of his Administration to take any notice of these grave charges of malfeasance which were being discussed by everybody.

"It is further said that, although the Postmaster General had heard of the 'gossip,' (the postal scandal,) yet 'recrimination is so common in politics that one becomes accustomed to hearing honest men called thieves,' and that 'he desired to put away from him the tumult of an investigation'; that 'he had conducted a few investigations' which had 'ended by finding that the charges were exaggerated,' and that 'he had no stomach for going to the bone of any matter.' All this, of course, is scarcely an excuse, but only a very mild criticism of the Postmaster General, and, therefore, it appropriately paved the way for a subsequent vigorous laudation and defense of the President.

"In extolling the President an attack is made upon the two Republican United States Senators from this State—Messrs. Platt and Depew—who were active Republicans before either Mr. Whitney or Mr. Roosevelt was born. Here is what is said:

"'When it (the investigation) touched the President's friend and political sponsor, State Senator Green of Binghamton, N. Y., and when he was about to be indicted for crookedness, the two Senators from New York and every prominent Republican in the State begged for mercy, and then threatened President Roosevelt for following Bristow to indict Green.'

"If true, this is a most serious accusation. It virtually accuses our two Republican United States Senators and also every prominent Republican in the State with a crime. While I differ with Messrs. Platt and Depew upon the important questions which divide the two great political parties—a difference which I trust is both honest and respectful—it is difficult to credit this latest impeachment of their integrity.

CHALLENGE TO DEPEW.

"Of course if Senator Depew admits the accusation and confesses his guilt then I withdraw my denunciation of the publication in question. He speaks on these Fair grounds to-morrow on behalf of the Republicans and he must either admit or deny the allegations against him.

"If Senator Green, or Senators Platt and Depew in his behalf, ever 'threatened' President Roosevelt because of Senator Green's indictment it was the President's personal and official duty to have immediately exposed the dastardly attempt to intimidate him at the time it was made and not have waited until after his nomination was secure and the necessity for the manufacture of some political sensation in the President's behalf in this campaign was deemed desirable."

EMPORIA, Kan., Aug. 31.—William Allen White, referring to the statement in ex-Senator Hill's speech at Whitney's Point, N. Y., that the President had furnished facts for Mr. White's magazine article concerning the President's course in the postal fraud investigation, said:

"The article was not inspired at the White House and the President furnished none of the facts.

"It was well known before the indictment against Senator Green was issued that he was getting political influence to prevent the indictment. His friends claimed that Green was innocent, and so represented the case to the New York Republican politicians who interceded in his behalf. It is not discreditable to any man, be he Senator or Governor or politician, to try to help a man whom he sincerely believes to be innocent.

"The men who tried to help Green did so in the best of faith, and after the evidence was presented to them in the Bristow report the effort in Green's behalf immediately stopped."

DEMOCRATIC CALL FOR FUNDS.

Treasurer George Foster Peabody Issues Formal Appeal.

Treasurer George Foster Peabody of the Democratic National Committee yesterday issued the formal call of the committee for funds with which to conduct the campaign. The appeal says in part:

"At the next National election over 14,000,000 votes will be cast, and the task of presenting to this vast electorate the various issues of the campaign and the records of the respective candidates is one which involves the expenditure of a large sum of money.

"Unlike its well-intrenched antagonist, the Democratic Party has no favored or protected interests to whom it may turn for a campaign fund. Its reliance for the necessary funds must be upon patriotic citizens who believe that the cause of Constitutional, honest, and economical government, and the just and equal enforcement of law, is involved in this campaign. The committee appeals for such contributions as each citizen may be able and willing to make.

"The call for funds was decided upon at an informal meeting of the members of the Executive Committee held yesterday morning.

TAMMANY NOT AFTER STATE.

Doesn't Want Any Nominations, Murphy Tells Braves.

Freed from the work which the primary elections entailed, Charles F. Murphy has called a meeting of the Tammany Executive Committee to be held this afternoon at Tammany Hall. This meeting is for the purpose of enabling the Tammany leader to lay before his district chiefs a plan of action for the State Convention and the State campaign. The keynote of this, as plainly stated by Mr. Murphy at the Wigwam yesterday, will be to ask no place on the State ticket for any Tammany man, not even if there should be a chance to secure the Governorship itself for a member of the organization.

The Tammany leader was told that McCarren was out for Grout and that that seemed more like a State matter than a Brooklyn matter.

"No, that's distinctly a Brooklyn matter, too," replied Mr. Murphy. "As for Tammany's position in regard to the State ticket, I can say that the organization has no candidate for Governor nor for any other place on the State ticket. You may rest assured of that."

Senator McCarren did not appear at all exultant when he reached State Headquarters in the Hoffman House yesterday afternoon, although he had undergone a cross-fire of congratulations all day long, both at his Brooklyn headquarters, where he had spent the morning, and at the State headquarters later. At his Brooklyn headquarters the Senator issued a statement on the primaries of which the following is a part:

There is no political division in the State of New York, or, for that matter, in the United States, that will more jealously guard its right to exercise every political prerogative than the Borough of Brooklyn, and any attempt on the part of any man or any organization outside of the Borough of Brooklyn to dictate its policy will always be vigorously resented. The voting yesterday was in no wise due to my personal stand, because anybody might have taken the attitude I assumed and he would have found that the people of Brooklyn would have sustained him as well. I think that this may also be spelled out of the result.

Later in the afternoon James Shevlin and Deputy Fire Commissioner William A. Doyle both issued statements.

"Under all the circumstances the opponents of Senator McCarren have good reason to be satisfied with the results in Brooklyn," said Mr. Shevlin. "It is a thing to remember that McCarren, with the connivance of Republicans, had a law passed which enabled him to seize the entire election machinery of the party, so that yesterday, in every closely contested district his opponents were without Election Inspectors. In this he violated the principle of autonomy which he declares was the issue. Now, however, every good Democrat must get out and work for Parker."

Doyle declared that he would continue his fight with McCarren for the Brooklyn leadership, saying that there could be no compromise. He also announced his intention to investigate the vote in the Thirty-first Ward, the Coney Island end of the Seventh Assembly District.

"I am convinced," he said, "that the 759 plurality recorded against me there was not honestly obtained, and I purpose to follow the matter up to the end. We shall fight at all times for a fair deal and an honest count."

Rumors were started again yesterday that more McCarren men in the city offices will be ousted by Murphy orders as retaliation against McCarren. Col. James D. Bell, the Assistant Corporation Counsel in charge of the Brooklyn office, and Tax Commissioner James B. Bouck were named as possible victims.

A WOLCOTT FOR PARKER.

Ex-Senator's Life-Long Republican Brother Gives Up Roosevelt.

Repudiating Roosevelt and advocating the election of Judge Parker to the Presidency, Henry R. Wolcott of Colorado informed his friends that the business interests of the West demanded the defeat of the Republican National ticket. Mr. Wolcott is a brother of ex-United States Senator Edward O. Wolcott of Colorado, and has even a larger Republican following in his State than has the ex-Senator. Mr. Wolcott's interests are largely in Colorado mining properties.

"I have been a Republican all my life," said Mr. Wolcott last night, "but I want to see Parker elected this year and shall vote for him. Also I shall urge my friends to vote the Democratic National ticket. This is in spite of the fact that I shall support and work for the election of the Republican State ticket in Colorado.

"That, however, does not at all affect the National situation. President Roosevelt, to my mind, has altogether too many eccentricities and too little balance and responsibility to be elected President. We have seen his reckless disregard of the rights of nations and of individuals during the three years he has held office as President McKinley's successor, and we can only conjecture with fear what course he might pursue were he to be given a term in office on his own election. The business men of the West do not dare vote him into office, for they firmly believe that both business and international peace would be upset by another term of Roosevelt.

"Judge Parker is looked upon as cool, careful, and level-headed. The Western business men with whom I come in touch feel the same way, an astonishingly large percentage of them.

While Mr. Wolcott was talking in the corridors of the Hotel Wolcott, which, by the way, he largely owns and which was named after him by James Breslin, who is the lessee, he was joined by Col. "Jack" Chinn of Kentucky.

"Well, Henry, I hear you have come over to us," said Chinn with a laugh. Wolcott assented. Turning to the others in the group Chinn said: "Here I have been working to convert Wolcott for a long time. I've got him to Parker and Davis anyway, so there's lots of hope for him yet.

"Parker is going to be elected. I never before knew the Democratic Party to be so thoroughly united. Parker will be elected because the people who are behind him are the very men who elected every President since the civil war."

BRYAN TO STUMP FOR PARKER.

Writes That He Will Devote Next Month to That Task.

William Jennings Bryan will take the stump for the Parker and Davis ticket, devoting his time during the month of October to this campaign work. Chairman Taggart of the Democratic National Committee last night made public a letter to this effect, written by Mr. Bryan on Aug. 26, and dated Centreville, Iowa. It reads:

I have just wired you expressing my regret that I cannot attend the meeting of the Democratic editors Sept. 5. I am going to the mountains for a rest, but will be ready to enter the campaign by the 1st of October. I shall be glad to devote to the National campaign as much time as I can spare. Let me know where you think I can help.

Mr. Taggart said that as yet no itinerary had been suggested to Mr. Bryan, but that many requests for him as a speaker had come from Indiana, Illinois, Connecticut, and New York. General satisfaction was expressed at National Headquarters over Mr. Bryan's offer, as there had been more or less talk of apathy toward the ticket on the part of the Bryan following. The party managers now believe that the appearance of Mr. Bryan on the stump will have the effect of securing for Parker the Bryan men who in many cases might otherwise stand by the Populists.

ELECTION ODDS STAND.

Wall Street Firm Bets $1,000 to $600 Against Parker's Chances.

Odds on the outcome of the election remain steady with little or no betting on the curb. A wager of $1,000 to $600 was made yesterday by Bunnell, Buchanan & Co. with James L. McCahill, who took the Parker end.

A feature of the betting on the election is the presence of moderately large sums of money which are being placed quietly as the bettors do not desire to have their [illegible] known.

ODELL LEANING TOWARD HIGGINS FOR GOVERNOR

Lieut. Governor Has Been Summoned to Headquarters Here.

CHAIRMAN LIKES KNIGHT, TOO

Buffalo Mayor a Vote Getter, but Higgins Fits in Better with Odell's Plans—Woodruff's Chances.

Gov. Odell's closest advisers are now giving out the information that he has about made up his mind to cast his influence in favor of the nomination of Lieut. Gov. Higgins as the Republican candidate for Governor. Mr. Higgins, who is spending his vacation in the White Mountains, has been telegraphed for, and is expected here Saturday.

Evidently the efforts which ex-Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff has made during the past ten days to convince Gov. Odell that his nomination and election would in no way interfere with the Governor-Chairman's political future have been unavailing. As an instance of his independence of Platt influence Mr. Woodruff has recalled to Gov. Odell that he sided with him against Platt two years ago at Saratoga in the fight against the nomination of George R. Sheldon for Lieutenant-Governor. Furthermore, he made the positive pledge to the Governor-Chairman that if he were elected he would not make any attempt to set up in business for himself politically, but would leave Mr. Odell the undisputed master of the State machine.

Whether it is because he mistrusts Mr. Woodruff's professions, or because he does not believe that Mr. Woodruff could win, the fact remains that the Governor Chairman has been unconvinced that he ought to give Mr. Woodruff's candidacy his approval.

Gov. Odell, although inclined to favor Lieut. Gov. Higgins at this juncture as the best the party can do in the way of a Gubernatorial candidate, still has a leaning toward Mayor Erastus C. Knight of Buffalo. The reason for his disposition to view Mr. Knight's candidacy with favor is, that being an intensely practical politician, the Governor-Chairman is a student of form. Despite all that has been urged against Knight by advisers who believe that Higgins is the best man who can be nominated both from the party and the Odell standpoint, the Governor-Chairman is seemingly unable to get away from the fact that Mayor Knight has proved a remarkable vote-getter.

The returns when Mr. Knight was a candidate for State Controller in the first Odell campaign show that Mr. Knight ran 13,509 votes ahead of his ticket. His popularity was by no means confined to his home County of Erie. He beat Gov. Odell 24 votes in the Governor's home county, Orange. He ran 1,726 votes ahead of the State ticket in Monroe, 1,703 in New York County, and 937 in Kings. In fact, there were not more than twelve counties in the State in which he did not run ahead of his ticket.

When he was nominated for Mayor of Buffalo while he was serving as State Controller there was a good deal of apprehension among the Republicans as to the result, but Mr. Knight was elected by over 5,000 majority, being 1,000 more than he had received over the Republican State ticket in Erie for Controller.

The chief argument which is made against Mr. Knight is that because he has been Mayor of Buffalo and therefore prominent in the movement for the 1,000-ton barge canal, the anti-canal counties of the State would not take kindly to his candidacy. That of course is a supposition, and to the mind of Gov. Odell it has not presented the force of the vote which Mr. Knight has received on both occasions when he has been a candidate before the people. Nevertheless, as has been stated, if the Governor-Chairman carries out his present intention the man whose nomination he will recommend to the Republican caucus in Saratoga will be Frank Wayland Higgins, although undoubtedly he will say a good word for Knight.

He will not try to force the nomination of Higgins. He realizes that with Higgins as the nominee the issue of the contest will be doubtful, and his plan is to "play safe." What he will tell the delegates at Saratoga, in all probability, is that after canvassing the situation thoroughly it is his opinion that the convention could not do better than nominate Higgins.

If the caucus agrees with him and Higgins is made the nominee the representative Republicans of the State will then have equal responsibility with him for the success of the ticket. They cannot lay at his door the full responsibility for defeat, if defeat should come. On the other hand, if his advice should be rejected and Woodruff should be chosen and defeated at the polls, the Governor-Chairman could then claim that had his advice been followed the issue might have been different. In either case his hold on the State organization would be strengthened.

There were several up-State leaders at headquarters yesterday, and they one and all bore out the statement of ex-Senator Thornton of Sullivan County that since it had been definitely learned that Elihu Root would not be a candidate not much interest was being taken in the contest. As between Lieut. Gov. Higgins and Mr. Woodruff there is no decided sentiment in favor of either, and [illegible] of the American [illegible] Roose-

DEPEW CRITICISES PARKER.

Also Pays His Respects to Hill at Hornellsville Fair.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Senator Depew addressed a large number of people at the Hornellsville Fair to-day. In the course of his remarks he referred to the published statement that ex-Senator David B. Hill would retire from active politics after January, and said he felt as though he were at a funeral. He regretted the loss of so picturesque a figure from the Democratic platform. He congratulated the Republican Party on the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary, and spoke of the many achievements due to the policy of the party. Democrats, he said, had begged for a change in 1892, and it had been granted, with the result of changing from prosperity to adversity. Then came McKinley two terms and Roosevelt and prosperity again.

Referring to Judge Parker's telegram on the gold standard, he said free silver had been all right for Judge Parker in 1896 and 1900; but he had awakened two days after the convention. It remained to be seen whether the people would trust the Government to a man who had just ascertained where he stood. He spoke of President Roosevelt's action in the Perdicaris and Beirut cases, and said Judge Parker would have written to try the cases before acting. While President Roosevelt acted at once. DOUGLAS CHARGES FRAUD.

Will Investigate Some Gilman-Quigg Primary Pluralities.

Congressman William H. Douglas, who made the fight against Theodore P. Gilman in the Nineteenth District for Republican district leader, while conceding yesterday that the Gilman-Quigg forces undoubtedly triumphed so far as the leadership of the district was concerned, said that he and his friends expected to control the district conventions to choose an Assembly candidate and delegates to the State Convention.

"Besides one tied delegation," said Mr. Douglas, "there are two election districts in which we will start contests on technical grounds, and several in which we believe we will be able to show that the result was brought about through fraud.

"There were some errors in published lists of Republican leaders who will constitute the new Executive Committee. The member from the First District is Edwin S. Marvin instead of Michael H. The Car of Satisfaction

The FORD

We have already sold more than one hundred Ford Motor Cars this season here in New York City, and as many more from our Philadelphia Store.

The Ford is exactly the car for popular use, and each one sold helps to sell another. The chiefest secret of the excellence of the Ford Cars is in the Double-Opposed Motor, which not only gives unusual power, for a car of this size, but prevents unpleasant vibration and makes the car run almost as smoothly as a steam carriage.

In the thirteen years that Mr. Ford has been building motors of this type, he has succeeded in getting them as near perfect as it seems possible to produce them. The simplicity of the working parts and the ease of control, make this car pleasant to run and inexpensive in the matter of repairs.

The man who wants to get the most out of automobiling without extravagance, finds most positively that the Ford is "the car of satisfaction."

We will be glad to give you a demonstrasion of the Ford at your convenience.

The Best Fall OVERCOATS $15 Will Buy

Every year we make a sensation with the "Wanamaker Special" Men's Overcoats at $15 each. They are intended to be the "leader" in our overcoat stock, and they fully deserve their title.

In materials, style and tailoring they are far and away above the overcoats usually sold at the price—in fact, many stores would charge $20 for them, and with perfect justice. We prefer the prestige and your approbation to the other five dollars.

The Fall styles in these fine $15 Coats are here. Made of fine melton finished cloth, in a dark Oxford mixture with pure silk lining faced to edge, or silk-lined with cloth facing. 38 to 40 inches long; collars carefully hand-padded and closely-fitting, shoulders well shaped. Overcoats that appeal especially to the man who cares for his personal appearance. You'll need to take a coat away with you over Labor Day. Better look at these today.

Interesting New SILKS:

Burlingham Sacking
Burlingham
Kelton Silk Suiting

Until quite recently, the raw silk from which these fashionable plain silks are made had never been used for dress purposes, except that Italian peasants have woven the "Kelton" silks on hand-looms into a crude, but durable fabric, like furniture burlap, for their rough clothing.

Yankee ingenuity has triumphed, and one would not recognise these soft, brilliant, beautiful new silks, in the newest plain colors, for dresses, as the product of such impossible stuff as the original silk, which required, to weave it, the substitution of wire for the usual twine harness on the looms.

The coming of Autumn suggests many betterments that you'd like to have made in your house before the period of winter occupancy sets in. Re-decorating, new wall papers, new hangings—and perhaps your ideas haven't descended from the general "Something-has-to-be-done" to the particular "That's-what-I-want."

We should be glad to help you, if you wish. Expert decorators will talk over the situation with you, make suggestions and estimates, and you are not bound to accept any of them if you don't want to. If you do, we can promise an absolutely satisfactory outcome for you, as to execution of the contract. Better think about it seriously today.

CAUGHNAWAGA BY A NECK

McChesney and Gunfire Finished Far Back in Twin City Handicap.

ARTFUL WON FILLY STAKES

Goldcroft, Backed at 40 to 1, Captured The Opening Race at Sheepshead Bay Track.

With two winners of former Twin City Handicaps, richest of the big open races of the Fall, behind him, Caughnawaga, from Stephen and John Sanford's great private breeding farm at Amsterdam, N. Y., beat the best field of the Autumn season, in the twenty-first running of the stakes at the Sheepshead Bay race track yesterday. The race made a splendidly spirited contest from start to finish, and in the fight at the end Caughnawaga was hard ridden to stall off the determined effort of the last chance outsider of the field, the California filly Dainty, and in a whipping struggle to the winning post was first by only a neck, while far back of the two, Gunfire, winner of the Twin City in 1902, and McChesney, winner of the stakes last year, finished among the unplaced horses.

The Great Filly Stakes, with a gross value of something more than $13,000, was on the card as companion attraction of the Twin City, but the famous handicap far overshadowed the newer event in both value and the quality of the race that it produced, the contest for the Great Filly, won by H. B. Duryea's Artful, heroine of the Futurity last Saturday, being only mildly interesting.

For the Twin City the entire field named on the programme made the race, seven in all starting, with McChesney, the "Big Mac" from the West, that a year ago was talked of as a rival to Waterboy for the championship honors, being the top weight, with 127 pounds, and the favorite, at 5 to 2 at post time, while Caughnawaga, in receipt of two pounds from McChesney, started second choice after opening as equal favorite with the Western horse.

Gunfire, the fast mare that a year ago was the star of William C. Whitney's stable, made her first appearance in public this year in the race, and on the strength of her trials in private was the third choice, Hurst Park and Eugenia Burch being the next best backed, while Dainty and Graziallo were the outsiders. McChesney, though he has been under suspicion nearly all the year, made a splendid showing in his warming up, while Gunfire also seemed fit to run up to her reputation.

Going to the post, however, Gunfire was ill-tempered and fractious, and McChesney put his feet down rather tenderly. All the other horses, save Caughnawaga, which began his season at Saratoga, had campaigned steadily through the Eastern racing year and were seasoned and ready. Gunfire at the post continued to misbehave, and delayed the start until she had a shade the best of it, breaking in front then and going away with the same flight of speed that she showed in all her best races of a year ago. After her went Hurst Park and McChesney, Hurst Park making an effort early in the contest to take the lead from the mare, while McChesney surprised even his stanchest admirers by the early speed that the usually slow beginner showed.

Sprinting from the first jump, Gunfire carried her pursuers a fast pace around the first turn, and led clear of her field at the head of the back stretch. Racing to the far turn, the others slowly closed on the pacemaker, Caughnawaga working his way to the front rank in the run through the back stretch, while half way through McChesney began to drop back and out of the struggle. In the meantime, Dainty, which had broken last with much the worst of the send-off, had picked up her field, and as the far turn was reached was lapped on Graziallo, the two running third and fourth, behind Gunfire and Caughnawaga, Hurst Park at this point also dropping out. On the last turn Caughnawaga went up to Gunfire, and as the bend for the turn into the quarter stretch was made, showed in front of the Duryea mare. From then on Gunfire was beaten, Graziallo next passing her, and then Dainty.

Entering the stretch for the run home, Caughnawaga led by a half length, with Graziallo second, and Dainty, Gunfire, and Eugenia Burch close up, every horse of the field then being hard ridden, though seemingly only the two in front had any chance. In the run through the last quarter Caughnawaga shook off Graziallo, but his early effort after Gunfire and the battle with Graziallo left him much distressed horse, and when Dainty in turn challenged, Burns on the New York-bred horse was forced to the whip at once. Dainty closed to Caughnawaga's shoulder, and with both fighting on under the whip they finished, Dainty slowly gaining to the end, but they passed the winning post before she had time to get up, with Caughnawaga first by a neck, while Graziallo was third, four lengths behind Dainty.

McChesney pulled up a trifle sore, but nothing was found wrong with him when his trainer examined him. For Gunfire it was said by her stable that no excuses were to be made. The time of the race was 2:05, which has been beaten by but one Twin City Handicap winner—McChesney's 2:04¾ of last year. The fractional time, 0:12, 0:24 2-5, 0:37, 0:49 3-5, 1:02, 1:14 1-5, 1:26 3-5, 1:39, and 1:52 2-5, shows that Gunfire was racing like a sprinter for the time that she was in front.

For the Great Filly Stakes, six furlongs, for fillies two years old, only five ran, including the added starter, Belle Strome. The H. B. Duryea pair, Artful and Rose of Dawn, coupled, were favorite at 5 to 1 on. Artful broke first, but was steadied at once, and indulged Belle Strome with the lead into the last quarter, where she took command and led to the end. Belle Strome, under the whip, seemed to gain on the Futurity winner a trifle at the last furlong pole, but Hildebrand had only to let down Artful in the closing strides to go away and win handily by a scant length. In the race Artful carried 124 pounds, or ten pounds more than she had in the Futurity, and ran the same course in a fifth of a second better time, 1:13.

In the opening event Goldcroft, from the stable of Sydney Paget, was backed for a good thing, the early backers getting 40 to 1 and ridden by the light boy Gisbourne. Goldcroft led from end to end and won, ridden out. Garnish made most of the running and cleverly took the selling mile and three-sixteenths, and Orr Wells and Collector Jessup, both favorites, took the other races. Summaries:

SWEET MARIE'S GREAT VICTORY

Unbeaten California Mare Won Five-Heat Race in Fast Time.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 31.—In a splendid five-heat race at Narragansett Park to-day, the unbeaten California mare Sweet Marie was returned winner for the $5,000 Roger Williams Stakes for 2:12 trotters. Ten thousand visitors saw the contest, which was the feature of the third day of the Grand Circuit races. Seven horses started for the big event, but the betting men figured it between Consuelo S., Tiverton, and Sweet Marie, Consuelo S. starting favorite against the field.

Consuelo S. was rank in scoring for the opening heat, and delayed the start for some time. When finally the word was given Tiverton shot across to the pole, with the favorite second. These positions were maintained to the wire, Tiverton winning by a length. The second heat was a duplicate of the first, and then the judges took a hand in the affair by removing Smith from behind Sweet Marie and substituting Alta McDonald.

For the third heat Tiverton and Sweet Marie raced together to the seven-eighths pole. At this point the New York gelding weakened and Sweet Marie won by a length. The time for the heat, 2:06¼, is the trotting record for the year. This was the decisive point in the contest, as, while Tiverton tried his hardest in the next two heats, Sweet Marie held him safely.

The aggregate time for the five heats is the world's record, lowering that in the famous stallion race at Readville in the Cresceus-Charley Herr battle.

The 2:14 pacing race went over until to-morrow after three horses had won two heats each. Prince Alert, driven to beat the world's pacing record of 1:59¼, failed by 1¼ seconds. Summaries.

Dan Patch Makes New Record.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 31.—In an exhibition mile on the State Fair grounds to-day Dan Patch lowered the record for a half-mile track and clipped three-quarters of a second off his own best time for the same kind of a track made at Des Moines, Iowa, last week. He covered the mile to-day in 2:05¼ on a track still a trifle lumpy from recent rains. He was accompanied by a runner, but had no wind shield. The time by quarters was 0:32; 1:04; 1:35; 2:05¼. Fifteen thousand people saw the performance.

ATHLETES LOWER RECORDS

Remarkable Performances at the World's Fair Olympic Games.

GREAT SPRINT BY HAHN

Ralph Rose Makes New Figures for Shot-Put—Hillman Wins Hurdle Race.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 31.—Again have the athletes competing in the track and field events of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition revival of the Olympic games demonstrated that they are the peers of any previous aggregation of international character. To-day, the third of the 1904 Olympiad, one world's record fell before the prowess of an American, three Olympic records were broken, the laurels going to two Americans and a Greek, and one Olympian and one world's record was broken, but owing to an unfortunate accident, the time of the latter will not be allowed.

As an indication of what the day was to bring forth, H. L. Hillman of the New York Athletic Club ran the 400-metre hurdle in 0:3 2-5 under the Olympic and world's record. Hillman was forced the entire distance by Frank Waller of the Milwaukee Athletic Club, who finished second, and in the excitement of the race Hillman failed to jump the last hurdle cleanly and the barrier fell to the ground, barring his record, but not affecting the result of the race.

In the 200-meter run, Archie Hahn of the Milwaukee Athletic Club won the first heat in the record time of 0:22 1-5. He fought the distance with W. J. Cartmell of Louisville, Ky., and only won by inches. The second heat was a trifle lower, but Hogenson was not pushed. The final (the distance by American measurement of the 200-meters being 218.73 yards) resulted in the lowering of the Olympic record by three-fifths of a second. Hahn won the event, but secured an advantage at the start of two yards over his three competitors, the latter having made a false start and receiving penalties.

Herikles Kakousis of Athens, Greece, had everything his own way in lifting the bar bell. The other entries were two men from the Milwaukee Athletic Club and one from St. Louis. Kakousis won by lifting a weight of 186 pounds. He did this with apparently so little difficulty that Otto C. Osthoff of the Milwaukee Athletic Club withdrew after having lifted an equal weight after several attempts. Kakousis then went to 196, a new Olympic record, which is also regarded as the world's record. He first lifted 200 pounds, and then had the weights adjusted at 246 pounds, four ounces more than the record made by the Danish athlete, V. Jensen of the Copenhagen Athletic Club at the Athens Olympiad in 1896. His first attempt was successful.

Ralph W. Rose of the Chicago Athletic Association broke the Olympic and world's records in the 16-pound shot-put. His first essay buried the Olympic record and came within two inches of the world's record. He tried twice more before he succeeded in smashing the latter with a put of 48 feet 7 inches. The former Olympic record was 46 feet 3¼ inches, made by R. Sheldon of the New York Athletic Club at Paris, in the 1900 revival of the Olympic games, and the former world's record was 48 feet 2 inches.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Between races at the Sheepshead Bay track yesterday the great filly Tanya, of the H. B. Duryea Stable, was worked a mile in 1:39 flat. In this history the winner's share has gone to the Whitney Stable. The value of the Twin City Handicap to the winner was $13,875.

Three imported thoroughbred mares from England, which were specially selected by Clarence H. Mackay for his breeding stud, have arrived in New York and been shipped to Kiatontown, N. J. The mares are intended for the Silverbrook Farm, now managed by Charles H. Hill, who formerly trained Mr. Mackay's racing stable.

A. C. Franklin, well known as a horse trainer and part owner in the ranch Western colt Oiseau, died yesterday at Sheepshead Bay after a short illness. The dead horseman came from Tennessee; where he formerly was interested in breeding thoroughbreds.

LABOR DAY REGATTA ENTRIES.

Record-Breaking List of Crews for Middle States Races.

Entries for the fifteenth annual regatta of the Middle States Regatta Association, to be held over the Speedway course on the Harlem River on Labor Day, were opened at a meeting of the Regatta Committee, held at the Pabst, on West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, last night, and were found to number 68, as follows: Junior single sculls, 10; intermediate single sculls, 9; association single sculls, 4; senior single sculls, 6; junior double sculls, 8; senior double sculls, 3; intermediate quadruple sculls, 3; junior octuple sculls, 4; junior four-oared barges, 5; senior four-oared barges, 4; junior four-oared gigs, 3; senior four-oared shells, 3; intermediate eight-oared shells, 2; senior eight-oared shells, 4.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

LAMONT, NICOLL, SHEPARD.

MR. STANCHFIELD seems to be very popular with the Democrats, and it would not surprise me to see him nominated for Governor. He would make a very logical candidate.—DAVID B. HILL, reported in The Herald.

Oh, come now, AUGUSTUS VAN WYCK or COLER would be every whit as "logical" as STANCHFIELD, and there is no logic, no sense, no sanity in the mention of any one of the three as a possible nominee. It is the habit of politicians when reporters ask them about candidates to open the door of the fossil room and gravely invite attention to the impossibilities. In that way political leaders often gain an undeserved reputation for complete amentia.

The Republicans are still conjuring with the name of Root, who is known to be out of the question, and they are plagued by the dreadful fear that they will have to come down to HIGGINS or WOODRUFF. Meanwhile, in Democratic discussions of the Governorship nomination three names of the first class, names of men of note and distinction in the party and beyond the bounds of party, are continually on men's lips. They are DANIEL S. LAMONT, DE LANCEY NICOLL, and EDWARD M. SHEPARD.

Col. LAMONT is of National repute. He was an efficient Secretary of War, he was wise in the President's council room. He has been occupied with public affairs or interested in them from his youth. He is known throughout the State, he is trusted, he does not make mistakes.

This community cannot have forgotten the remarkable testimonial offered to DE LANCEY NICOLL at the close of his term of office as District Attorney of New York County. It was a public dinner, notable and memorable for the number of the city's chief men who attended it. Words of praise and admiration such as the bar seldom hears from the bench were addressed to Mr. NICOLL that night by Judge GEORGE C. BARRETT of the Supreme Court, and in the language of all the speakers there was a note of deep and sincere commendation, of gratitude, even, as though the occasion had honored one that had delivered the city from some public peril. Mr. NICOLL served the people faithfully as public prosecutor, he would be faithful to his trust as Governor.

The late WILLIAM C. WHITNEY was a good judge of candidates. After reading the speech made by EDWARD M. SHEPARD when he was running for Mayor in 1901, Mr. WHITNEY advised his friends in politics to keep Mr. SHEPARD in view for the future. "At last," he said, "we have a Democrat of high character and ability who holds and can express opinions on public questions." Wouldn't it be a joy to the righteous to see that upright, resolute man cudgel away from the public trough the crooks and tax-eaters who for eight years have been converging on Albany?

The broils and strifes of faction do not concern these three men. They are qualified and acceptable in the eyes of all Democrats.

WANTED—AN EXPLANATION.

Now that so many of the actual and former members of the Cabinet are engaged in explaining to the country that Mr. ROOSEVELT is the most modest and moderate of the long list of incumbents of his high office, it might be well for Mr. JOHN D. LONG, who was Secretary of the Navy from 1897 to 1902, and was a personal witness of Mr. ROOSEVELT's active career in that department, to renew his personal reminiscences on the subject.

He has already told us that Mr. ROOSEVELT was "heart and soul in his work," that "his typewriters had no rest," that "he worked indefatigably, frequently incorporating his views in memoranda which he would leave every morning on" the Secretary's "desk." He has recorded the fact that most of Mr. ROOSEVELT's "suggestions had, so far as practicable, been already adopted by the various bureaus, the chiefs of which were straining every nerve and leaving nothing not done." Mr. LONG thought it was only fair to others in the department to suggest to Mr. ROOSEVELT that "some future historian, reading his memoranda, if they were put on record, would get the impression that the bureaus were inefficient," and he adds that the Assistant Secretary "accepted the suggestion with the generous good nature which is so marked in him," but he does not say whether the danger was avoided by putting the superfluous memoranda in the waste basket. Nor does he comment on the business capacity of a new and young official in neglecting to find out whether the veteran officers of the department had by any possibility anticipated the proposals he was making as to their work. But he took his superior's delicate reproof with "good nature," and Mr. LONG is quite right in saying that that is characteristic of him.

There is a passage in Mr. LONG's reminiscences, however, that seems to call for some development and explanation, and we suggest it for treatment when that gentleman comes to the support of his former subordinate in the present canvass. Mr. LONG says of Mr. ROOSEVELT: "He was zealous in the work of putting the navy in condition for the apprehended struggle. His ardor sometimes went faster than the President or the department approved. Just before the war he, as well as some naval officers, was anxious to send a squadron across the ocean to sink the ships and torpedo-boat destroyers of the Spanish fleet while we were yet at peace with Spain."

This passage is not quite clear. To the general reader it will undoubtedly convey the impression that Mr. ROOSEVELT proposed that "while we were yet at peace with Spain" a squadron should sink the ships and torpedo-boat destroyers of the Spanish fleet. It is, however, susceptible of the interpretation that the proposition was made in time of peace, while the destruction was to be carried out only after war had been declared. The latter might be regarded as merely taking precaution while at peace for war which might become inevitable and preparing to strike effectively the first blow. The former would, of course, be absolutely unjustifiable. It is unfortunate that Mr. LONG should have framed his statement in a way to lend his authority to the more damaging reading. When proper occasion arises, we assume that he will see the desirability of putting the matter in a perfectly clear light. On the face of it, Mr. LONG's highly important assertion has too strong a suggestion of the spirit shown later by Mr. ROOSEVELT in the Panama matter to be agreeable reading.

THE JUDGESHIPS.

In a Presidential campaign it is better to use the forces that work with you than to unshackle those that work against you. The nomination of Judge CULLEN and Judge WERNER for the Court of Appeals by the Democrats would be so heartily approved throughout the State that Judge PARKER's campaign for the Presidency would no doubt be helped. The nomination of two Democrats for the vacancies, on the other hand, would be injurious to Judge PARKER, for it would instantly be construed as an attempt to gain partisan control of the highest court in the State.

The people look with disfavor upon the policy of treating Judgeships as party spoil, and the bar resents the introduction of political and partisan considerations in a judiciary canvass. This has been made plain in the State at large and in various judicial departments by the universal approval evoked by the decision of both parties to unite upon Judgeship nominations.

The Republicans have already indicated their intention to nominate Judge CULLEN and Judge WERNER. The nomination by the Democrats of these two Judges, who have already seen service upon that bench, would be so appropriate and natural that even if there had been no advance intimation of the Republican purpose any other choice by the Democratic Convention would be surprising. There are no reasons why the Convention should make any other choice except reasons of politics. The managers of the Democratic campaign may depend upon it that if political considerations sway them and guide their choice they will be punished for it. The bar and intelligent voters generally have reached the conclusion that Judge WERNER and Judge CULLEN, in respect to fitness and equipment, are the right men to nominate; that should they be named and be elected the court would be stronger than if some other choice were made. This is no disparagement of Attorney General CUNNEEN nor of Judge HERRICK, both of whom are able and highly respected. But Judges CULLEN and WERNER have already served nearly four years upon the Court of Appeals bench by designation of the Governor. In the absence of any reason to the contrary, that reason alone ought to prevail in favor of their nomination by both parties. There is no reason to the contrary. It is known and universally acknowledged that they are amply qualified for the high judicial services they have already so acceptably performed.

A discontinuance of the discussion of other nominations as probable would be hailed as an evidence of a wise discretion on the part of the Democratic campaign managers.

HUNTING FOR COTTON.

At the meeting of the British Association recently held at Cambridge the subject of increased supply of cotton was taken up in the Economic Section and an important report was made by Mr. HUTTON, the Chairman of the British Cotton-Growing Association. The situation is sufficiently serious. It was pointed out that during the last four years the world's consumption of cotton had increased about 400,000 or 500,000 bales, and the greater part of this increase was in the Southern States of this country, where the bulk of the cotton crop is produced. At the same time the production had not responded to the increased demand for consumption, and this fact was explained largely by the reported fact that there was not labor sufficient for increased cultivation and harvesting.

In view of this situation the Cotton-Growing Association had made thorough inquiry and some earnest experiments with reference to the possibility of securing cotton in the future from British possessions where it is not now produced or produced in small quantities. In India there is much land suited to cotton, but it is of an inferior kind and the seed is poor. Experiments are making by the association and by the Government to improve the quality, and with some success. In the Soudan and in Central Africa the soil and climate are suited to a fair quality of cotton, but labor and transportation are inadequate. The Government was co-operating to remove the second difficulty. West Africa was more promising. But the most important suggestion made by the Chairman of the association was with reference to the West Indies. He said:

> Some excellent cotton had been grown in some of the West Indian Islands—Barbados in particular. This cotton had been sold at prices ranging from 11d. to 16d. per pound, and the planters had netted substantial profits, and there was a prospect of cotton cultivation supplanting sugar-growing in certain districts. Machinery and financial assistance were being given by the association, and should the present hopes be fulfilled there was every possibility of our being able to obtain the bulk of our supplies of the highest grade cotton from that part of the world, and so be not absolutely dependent, as we now were, on Georgia and Carolina.

Mr. HUTTON did not think that any interference by law with dealing in "futures" would have the slightest good effect. It would rather complicate the situation and probably do much more harm than good.

A GOOD USE FOR LABOR DAY.

The announcement that the unions affiliated with the Building Trades Alliance will take no part in the Labor Day parade commends itself to approval. This holiday never had any very clear purpose, but the reasons given for its legal recognition were chiefly that the monotony of a work-a-day year would be relieved by setting apart one day in the 365 in which the hard-working mechanic might rest and seek recreation out of doors and incidentally celebrate himself by marching in processions behind brass bands and bearing banners and flags.

The best use the mechanics employed in the several branches of the building trades in New York can make of Labor Day is to change the established habit of recent months and devote it to profitable industry. For men who are idle as much of the time as they are the best kind of recreation would be found in putting in a solid day's work. It would represent "the flower and quintessence of change," and do them a great deal more good than a procession and a picnic. How much more good it would do their wives and children need not be referred to. The devotion of Labor Day to labor would make long stretches of voluntary idleness less tedious, and the suggestion is one which may be pondered by the union membership with advantage.

THE OUTLOOK FOR THE RAILROADS.

The popular notion that there can be no recovery of general business activity until the railroads give evidence of increased business and larger earnings involves some confusion of causes and symptoms, but it is near enough to the truth to pass as a safe generalization. That the outlook for the railroads is more satisfactory at the moment than it has been for some two years is the opinion of railroad men, and the current statistics of freight movement show that the existing business activity is much greater than those who have not made a study of these figures have assumed.

The Western and Southern railroads look forward to a very large and profitable movement of traffic from now until the cold weather sets in, and their weekly reports already show an important increase of tonnage. The corn and cotton crops are assured, and the movement of farm products has begun in large and increasing volume. The roads of the Northwest, depending largely upon wheat, are less optimistic, and their gloomy view of the outlook is to some extent confirmed by the small movement over the Northwestern, which in current gains makes the poorest showing of any of the important systems. On all the trunk lines operating west and south of Chicago the condition of equipment is reported good. Cars and engines have been put in order, and the repair shops have been kept busy. The managers claim to be better prepared than ever before to handle an immense volume of business. Judged by the test of increased earnings these roads have abundant warrant for the confidence expressed concerning them.

The roads operating east of Chicago are showing a steady gain in traffic and earnings. There is a marked increase in the general movement of merchandise and of coal. Iron and steel freights are not offered in satisfactory volume. The small manufacturing plants throughout the Middle West are reporting a gratifying increase of orders, which means for the railroads a gain in traffic both ways. Up to this time there has been no inconvenience experienced from a shortage of cars or engines, but the prediction is made that before Winter sets in there is likely, should the present improvement continue, to be a congestion at some points. The collapse of the beef strike is indicated by the fact that the movement of live stock is again normal, or nearly so. Cattle, sheep, and hogs have been coming forward very freely of late, and notwithstanding the serious inconvenience which the packers are admittedly suffering the total receipts at Chicago are only about 2,000 head per week behind last year. The deficit is likely to be made up very quickly by the large current shipments. The total receipts of food animals at all the packing centres of the West are much heavier than last year at this time.

If it be true that a substantial revival in general business activity cannot lag long behind a marked improvement in the railroad situation, the promise of a marked change for the better beginning in the last quarter of the present year would seem to be in a fair way to be verified.

OUR WINTER CLIMATE.

Mr. WILLIAM B. STOCKMAN, District Forecaster in charge of the Division of Meteorological Records of the National Weather Bureau, in response to the inquiry of a correspondent asking if the popular impression that American Winters are becoming less rigorous than formerly, has made a compilation of temperature data covering nearly half a century, which establishes beyond question the invariability of our Winter temperatures. The points chosen for a comparison of averages were Fort Snelling, Fort Leavenworth, New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, New Bedford, Washington, and Charleston. This distribution was made to show the general conditions obtaining over the country generally east of the Mississippi Valley. The net results are fairly summarized in the following table:

Station.	Average of 50 Winters, 1854-5 to 1903-4.	Mean of first 25 Winters, 1854-5 to 1878-9.	Departure from average of 50 Winters.	Mean of second 25 Winters, 1879-80 to 1903-4.	Departure from average of 50 Winters.
Fort Snelling.	13.4	12.9	—0.5	13.8	+0.4
Ft. L'v'w'rth.	29.3	29.1	—0.2	29.6	+0.3
New Orleans.	55.4	55.2	—0.2	55.5	+0.1
St. Louis.....	53.5	53.5	0.0	53.5	0.0
Chicago ...	25.2	22.0	—0.2	25.5	+0.3
Cincinnati ...	34.4	34.8	+0.4	34.0	—0.4
Cleveland ...	28.2	28.2	0.0	28.2	0.0
New Bedford.	29.3	29.1	—0.2	29.5	+0.2
Washington .	34.5	34.2	—0.3	34.9	+0.1
Charleston ..	51.2	51.1	—0.1	51.3	+0.1

From a study of the variations from the normal average the conclusion is warranted that our Winters now are not materially different from those of former years. So far at least as most of the cities named are concerned, the variations in the average for the first as compared with the second twenty-five year period are too slight to be of consequence. These are undoubtedly facts. All the same, last Winter was exceptionally cold, and it is, or at least appears to be, a matter of experience that the Winters now do not average as cold as they did when we were boys, that the snows are not as deep, and that just what Mr. STOCKMAN shows has not happened is really happening.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Attention is called by Harper's Weekly to the rather significant fact that there has been "no tumult of rejoicing among the saloon keepers of New York because their calling has received a new respectability under the patronage of Bishop POTTER." Some expressions of gratitude and admiration might have been expected from the purveyors of Rum if the establishment of the Subway Tavern were really having or likely to have the effect so vehemently prophesied by its voluble enemies—the effect, that is, of mitigating such public condemnation of the "moderate" indulgence in intoxicants as now exists—for it is a fact that no small number of saloon keepers are more or less sensitive to the general criticism their class receives and would probably feel and voice some satisfaction over anything that really tended to support their contention that the vending of liquor is not necessarily and wholly an evil business. The saloon keepers, however, have indicated no hope that the respectability of the new saloon would spread its edges over themselves, but have shown, when they said anything, that, as Harper's Weekly says, they viewed the tavern coldly as a mere addition of an extremely well-advertised competitor. And it remarks, shrewdly, "When the saloon keepers and all the more vociferous foes of rum are on the same side of any liquor question, examine the other side closely. It is apt to have strong points." There is a large possibility that the regular saloon keepers see little that is really novel in the character of the Subway Tavern. Other saloons, indeed, are not "dedicated," or even "inaugurated," by Bishops, nor do their managers make more money out of the sale of "soft" than of "hard" drinks, but there are a good many saloons where all disorder is firmly repressed and where women who would be considered respectable by all except the most fanatical of total abstainers occasionally go without receiving any obvious harm. With these places of the quieter and better sort the Subway Tavern does compete on practically even terms, and their proprietors may well grieve over the forgetfulness of their existence that has enabled so many people to discuss the new institution as something entirely novel in this city. Novel in some ways it certainly is, but they are ways that affect the customers little, or not at all, and cannot be regarded as much more than details of administration. This may account for the small amount of comment that has been made on the Subway Tavern by the saloon keepers, and also for the circumstance that most of the small amount was very cold. They are quite right in failing to see how the addition of one "respectable" saloon to those already possessed by New York will appreciably improve their moral or social status.

—People interested in this and other phases of the temperance question could profitably devote some attention to the character and promise of the American Society for the Study of Alcohol and Other Narcotics. The society is composed of doctors and was formed last June by an amalgamation of the American Association for the Study of Inebriety and the Medical Temperance Association. These organizations have done much good work in the effort to put the temperance movement on a foundation of facts and science, as distinguished from fancies and emotion, and if the new body receives the support it deserves its success should be marked. Its special object, as formulated by a correspondent of The Medical Record, is "to create greater interest among physicians in the study of one of the greatest evils of modern times. Its plan of work is to encourage and promote more exact scientific studies of the nature and effects of alcohol in health and disease, particularly of its etiological, physiological, and therapeutic relations. Second, to secure more accurate investigations of the diseases associated or following from the use of alcohol and narcotics. Third, to correct the present empirical treatment of these diseases by secret drugs and so-called specifics, and to secure legislation prohibiting the sale of nostrums claiming to be absolute cures containing dangerous poisons. Fourth, to encourage special legislation for the care, control, and medical treatment of spirit and drug takers." The Record's correspondent thinks, and we think correctly, that the public is turning more and more to the medical profession for authoritative advice as to the exact nature of the temperance problem and the best methods of handling it, and, as he says, its importance is such as to demand a concerted effort by qualified experts both to secure information on all branches of the question and to formulate and execute plans for remedial action. The old religio-political societies have done much and their intentions are still admirable, but in existing conditions of public sentiment many of them are more than a little unpractical, and they repel the sympathy and assistance of all unwilling to deny the possibility of any temperance out of total abstinence.

—Among the excuses made by or in behalf of the mob that burned two negro murderers at Statesborough, Ga., is the one that the authorities refused to grant the demand for a public hanging. The curious feature of this excuse is that, though made by people claiming a special and almost exclusive knowledge of negro peculiarities, it ignores the unquestionable fact that for ninety-nine out of a hundred negro criminals a hanging of the kind prescribed by law—a hanging, that is, in strict seclusion and in the presence of only a few dispassionate witnesses—would be a much more severe punishment than the excitement and glory of figuring as the central personage of a public function, where bravado would count as courage and the terrors of death would be lessened by the intoxication of a childish pride in prominence of any kind. The demand of the Statesborough mob was therefore a mistaken one from the avenger's point of view, as well as indicative of a barbarous desire to witness a hideous and degrading spectacle. To make capital punishment most repressive of crime among negroes it would be necessary, perhaps, to conceal even the date of the execution of murderers belonging to that race—to have a speedy condemnation the end of the public record so far as was known by any except a few officials sworn to secrecy. Such a disappearance would be terrible, indeed, and it might at least be asked if some such arrangement might not make the death sentence more feared by the potential criminals of all races. The possibilities that secrecy would or could be abused are negligible in this age, and there would be unquestionable advantages in making the Judge's pronouncement the last "scene" in the murderer's career.

—Despite the fact that the first condemnation of a Newport chauffeur to five days' imprisonment has quickly been followed by a second imposition of the same penalty upon another member of the class, it is reported that the innovation has had a marked effect in reducing the average speed of automobiles in the Newport streets, and that the city authorities are hopeful that a few more lessons of this sort will be enough to work a permanent reform. The expectation seems somewhat hasty, but it may not be without foundation. The chauffeurs are a haughty lot, with most pronounced ideas as to their own importance and personal dignity, and perhaps even a short term of imprisonment seems to them something to be avoided with the greatest care. Presumably their salaries go on while they lie in seclusion, since that would be the least that could be done by the men really responsible for their misdeeds who have always been perfectly willing to pay their fines in the past, but salary is small compensation for disgrace, and imprisonment is disgrace, even in the eyes of those to whom arrest and fines are small annoyances. And the master cannot lie in jail for the man as he could pay the man's fine. Therefore, if the reports from Newport are true, the imprisonment of the agent instead of the principal may be effective after all, even if it is illogical, unjust, and generally unsatisfactory.

INJUSTICE TO WOMEN'S HOTEL.

Inmates Dislike Being Classed with the Freaks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The average reader of daily newspapers has been entertained for many months with the so-called "doings" at the Hotel Martha Washington. At first these articles were amusing, but after a second repetition it was no longer funny, and the comfortable guest no longer recognized the hotel in the reports of it. The observation automobiles have now included it among the places of interest to point out to the out-of-town sightseers, and one would suppose that the inmates were a new kind of freak that had not yet been classified in a museum or menagerie.

When we remember that the women who are guests of the Hotel Martha Washington occupy the highest positions of trust and are women of talent and education we know that they would never consent to the management that is reported in the papers. They are busy women—as teachers, musicians, artists, reporters, designers of fashions, secretaries, writers, doctors, stenographers, and in many other professions all are striving to do their work nobly, and appreciating the comforts of this woman's hotel, so superior to the New York boarding and lodging house that it cannot be considered in the same breath. For those whose womanly instincts have longed for a refined house hotel where the bright rooms could be made into a semblance of home this has filled the want—not perfectly, to be sure, but certainly better than anything else that has been offered. Drove Dogcart Over Glaciers.

From The London Pall Mall Gazette.

BERNE, Aug. 18.—A unique feat has just been performed by an Italian officer who served with the British Royal Artillery through the Boer war. He undertook to drive a dogcart over the passes and across the Aletsch Glacier into Meiringen. Great was the astonishment of the simple villagers living near the glacier when they observed a mounted cortege slowly winding its way across the rough ice, for never before within living memory had so strange a sight been seen. Drawn by three ponies and accompanied by six others carrying his kit, the venturesome officer had crossed the Simplon and the dangerous passages of the Grimsel. His cart having no brakes, the steep descents had to be manipulated in many places at a gallop, an experience which few who know the locality would envy him. He came through, however, without mishap, and trotted gayly into Meiringen as though he had never been off the high road. His offer to take any one who liked with him on the return trip has not been accepted.

French Plague of Vipers.

From The London Chronicle.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—The tropical heat in France has been favorable to reptiles. One of the masons engaged in repairing a dam on La Sioule, near Moulins, noticed the head of a snake appearing through a fissure in a stone close to where a little girl was sitting. In alarm he called the child away, and went for his mates, who in a few minutes killed twenty-three vipers.

Continuing their search, they discovered and destroyed no fewer than 406 vipers, the smallest of which measured ten inches. They also collected 186 eggs, from every one of which, within twenty-four hours, had issued a tiny reptile, only to be crushed under foot as soon as born.

As a reward of 2½d. is awarded by the authorities for every reptile killed, the masons have done very good business.

Luck of No Account.

From The Chicago News.

"It is better to be born lucky than rich," remarked the man with the quotation habit.

"Don't you believe it," rejoined the contrary person. "If a man is born rich he doesn't have to worry about luck."

Worse Experience.

From The Philadelphia Press.

"My wife and I went to call on the Dumleys last night. I can't imagine anything more tiresome than spending an evening with them."

"You can't! Wait till they come to spend an evening with you."

MR. COCKRAN AND THE SENATE.

His Succession to D. B. Hill's Post Viewed with Favor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I observe by your paper of yesterday's date that Mr. David B. Hill has announced he is not a candidate for a second election to the honorable post of United States Senator. I understand, too, by your article that he would be inclined to favor Bourke Cockran for the post. No more suitable selection could be made, and if Mr. Murphy favors it, it speaks well for the Tammany leader's political sagacity. Mr. Cockran possesses in a high degree all the requisite qualifications—experience, intelligence, probity, and a degree of eloquence that has won for him a most enviable position before the whole country. He would fill the post with honor to himself and profit to his party and his adopted country. More than once I have urged him to try for the position; but in each case he has modestly poohpoohed the idea. But now fate seems to favor his selection.

Will you pardon a reminiscence, more or less pertinent? It must be quite twenty years since I whispered the same ambitious thought to our unique Chauncey M. Depew. We were sitting side by side at one of the New York Press Club's dinners, when I told Depew he ought to make his party put him in the United States Senate. He lightly laughed aside the suggestion at first, and then said seriously that his connection with the Vanderbilt railroad interests would effectually strangle such an ambition should be ever fellow himself to entertain it. I told him I thought he was mistaken; that his own personal popularity and exceptional qualifications would overcome the natural prejudice against a railroad lawyer. He has lived to see that I was right, and I sincerely hope that Mr. Cockran's experience will not be less happy.

2c FOREIGN LETTER POSTAGE.

Genuine Effort to That End Would Meet with Favor Abroad.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of the statement in the Sunday TIMES that the German Department of Posts will oppose a universal 2 cent letter rate, I think there must be a mistake. In any case L'Union Postale of June, 1899—the organ of the International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union—contained the following statement.

"On the first day of May, 1890, Germany extended her internal letter post-service to include German New Guinea, German West Africa, Cameroon, Kiatschu, the Marshall Islands, and Ki Togo.

As a consequence of this a half-ounce letter—now two-third ounce—from Berlin to New Guinea costs only 2.38 cents, an eight ounce letter, 4.76 cents, a post card, 1.2 cents, a three ounce book packet, .6 cent, a one-half pound "sample," 2.38 cents, and a two pound book, 7.5 cents.

I note also that the local letter rate of Germany for an eight ounce letter is 1 cent; eleven pound parcels are exchanged between Austria and Germany for 12 cents.

With these facts in mind it seems impossible that the German Postal Department should be opposed to a uniform 2 cent letter rate for all the world.

England inaugurated a 2 cent letter rate with her colonies on Christmas Day, 1898. New Zealand proclaimed a 2 cent letter rate to all the world, Jan. 1, 1901. To-day New Zealand 2 cent letters are delivered by our Post Office in New York, but we charge 5 cents for sending back a reply to New Zealand.

There can be very little doubt, we believe, that a genuine effort on the part of the United States Post Office Department for a uniform 2 cent world letter rate will be accepted and duly acted upon at Rome in 1906. The postal departments of the Old World may, however, seriously question the genuineness of proposals for postal advancement coming from a Government that appoints as its representative to the World Postal Congress at Rome a gentleman who says as to postal facilities: "If I had my way, postal facilities would be fewer than they are to-day."

But whatever be the attitude of Germany as to a 2 cent letter rate, there can be no question as to Great Britain, and full 27 per cent. of our entire foreign mail goes to Great Britain. Great Britain will unquestionably make a reciprocal postal treaty with the United States similar to our present treaties with Mexico and with Canada. Great Britain will, indeed, go further than that. She will undoubtedly join in a treaty for handling four ounce letters for 2 cents. If I mistake not, our Congressmen extended the weight limit on their franked correspondence last Winter from one ounce to four ounces. What is good for our public servants at Washington would seem to be good for the public. To our mind Postmaster General Payne is earnestly at work to prevent postal advancement. Not a whit of credit is to be given him for the extension of the Free Rural Service. What he has done, has been done because an irresistible public opinion compelled it. Nothing less than an irresistible public opinion will induce either Congress or the Postmaster General to take any further steps in postal advancement in the future.

It will be the business of the Postal Congress League to at once arouse public opinion as to postal possibilities and to so organize it that it will continue to be irresistible.

Coal Dust and Lung Diseases.

From The London Standard.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—Some very surprising results which have attended a series of investigations made by a medical man in the mining districts of Upper Silesia are about to be made public. Among the many illnesses prevalent in his district lung diseases occupied proportionately a very low place, and consumptive persons on coming to reside near the coal mines recovered their health after some time without undergoing any special cure.

These facts he is prepared to verify by statistics. The cures are attributed by him to the coal dust contained in the atmosphere, which, he alleges, has a drying and disinfecting influence on tubercle developments in the lungs. The probability of this statement is increased by the fact that the well-known lung remedy, creosote, is derived from coal tar, and it may possibly be present in a crude state in the coal dust in the atmosphere. It is now proposed to erect a sanitarium for consumptives in the district referred to, in order practically to test the efficacy of the new cure.

Cremation in England.

From The London Chronicle.

It will be surprising if the remarkable weight and number of names practically subscribed to the cause of cremation within the past few months—names like those of Spencer, Edwin Arnold, Leslie Stephen, Watts, Henley, and Antoinette Sterling—are not some day noted as almost marking an epoch by the historian of what promises to be the method of the future. The Roman Catholic Church, as is well known, still refuses its last rites to those who thus defy one of the dogmas of the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds, and students will be interested to learn the fate of the petition just sent by the Berlin Cremation Society to the Pope, wherein not far short of 10,000 persons pray for the abolition of the Church's official disapproval thus expressed.

Lived Too Fast.

From The Cleveland Leader.

"Poor fellow, he is quite broken down, and the doctor says that his condition is due to fast living."

"Fast living?"

"Yes; you see, he is a traveling man, and he was obliged to eat so many dining car meals and lose so much sleep in sleepers that his constitution gave way."

ROOSEVELT ON PRESI...

Significance of His Depreciation of Jefferson and Madison.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial entitled "Roosevelt's Sayings" you say you "do not think many votes will be changed by the circulation in a campaign document of the unkind things said in the past by Mr. Roosevelt as to some of the Democratic Presidents previous to Mr. Lincoln."

With the exception of the dignifying of Roosevelt's jejune performances as "history" and your inference that one may with propriety speak disrespectfully, or even contumeliously, of the dead, if a sufficient period of time—the exact extent not stated—has elapsed since their decease, I believe that those who are conducting the Democratic campaign would raise no controversy with THE TIMES in consequence of this editorial. They might say, indeed, that this is not an action for damages in a case of libel, and that therefore the contention that the defendant was so little known, and his defamatory writing so flippant, little damage to plaintiff's reputation could be done, was not tenable.

But, concretely speaking, the real issue in this great trial is, as Mr. Roosevelt himself has declared, his record. This includes necessarily the personality of the man who made the record, and of this the mental qualities and temperamental idiosyncrasy count for much. These flippant depreciations of the author of the Declaration of Independence and the Fathers of the Constitution—Jefferson and Madison—may not be the most important piece of evidence to be adduced, but really I can't see how they can be excluded on the ground of irrelevancy; or, when admitted, how they can fail to make a deep impression on many minds. They alone do not prove our case, perhaps, but usually we cannot prove our case "all at once."

SUPERIORITY OF THE TIMES.

Correspondent Commends Its News and Views; Differs as to Roosevelt.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My breakfast would lose a good deal of its enjoyment without the accompaniment of THE TIMES, to which I have been for several years a subscriber.

I like your selection of news and the way you display it. I like your editorial page. It touches upon matters with which I am in sympathy, and I consider it the brightest, cleanest, strongest, and best editorial page in New York.

I strongly favor the attitude taken by THE TIMES on strikes, and the labor question generally; it is sane, reasonable, and just.

Your war news is, I suppose, the same as that in the hands of all the newspapers, (except those papers which have the gift of creating news,) but THE TIMES's editorials concerning war matters have been particularly helpful to me, especialy those bearing on the seizure of ships' contraband, and the international law governing such cases.

I must say, however, that your continuous carping at President Roosevelt is extremely offensive, verging as it does on the spiteful and abusive.

THE TIMES knows as well as I do that men of the Roosevelt stamp, men that are politically clean—men of honor, of singleness of purpose, of true patriotism—are all too rare in our beloved Nation.

Although I am a Republican, I do not take this stand for this reason, but because President Roosevelt is an upright, truthful, fearless man, who would be so whether he were a Republican or a Democrat.

W. S. WHITNEY.

Fordham, Aug. 30, 1904.

One Estimate of D. B. Hill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am a good Mugwump, so you will consider what I am about to say as coming from a Republican source. I appreciate your endeavor to be always eminently fair, and no doubt you believe that in your editorial of this morning you are eminently fair to David B. Hill. But there is such a thing as being too fair, and, to put it very mildly, you are certainly a bit too fair to that redoubtable "statesman." It will seem very strange to most of your readers that you have put on a brand-new pair of kid gloves to handle him with.

The public career of such a man as David B. Hill ought never to be glossed over, least of all by such a paper as THE TIMES. What matter if he personally is not living on the "taxpayers' money, wrongfully obtained?" Will you deny that what is known of Hill's career is bound to exert a demoralizing and depressing influence on our public life? Have you forgotten the Dutchess County election returns and the theft of the Legislature? Have you forgotten the unspeakable Maynard? Have you forgotten that Hill carried the State at the same time that Harrison did? Was it or was it not David B. Hill who prevented the confirmation first of Mr. Hornblower and then of Mr. Peckham because these gentlemen as leaders of the Bar Association did their best to defeat Maynard? It would be impossible to recite the long list of other offenses.

French Must Have Chartreuse.

From The London Chronicle.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—The civil tribunal of Grenoble has ordered that the consignments of new liqueur made by the Carthusian monks of Tarragona, Spain, seized by the French authorities, shall be given up. The court also decided that the same products are to be allowed to enter France for the future.

Curiously enough, the court gave this judgment in accordance with the special request of the Government liquidator of Grande Chartreuse. French cafés will therefore once more have an abundant supply of their favorite liqueur.

"R."

Oh! don't you remember the month has an "R,"
And the oyster once more you can get?
'Midst crab, clam, and lobster, it is quite the star,
A savory, succulent treat!

Four months in the year we must give it a rest,
So says a conventional law,
But now our digestions can have a good test,
We can swallow it down, cooked or raw!

A squeeze of a lemon, tabasco a dash,
Bread and butter, a bottle of stout,
If you eat but a dozen, you won't be called rash,
Not even if prone to the gout.

So, hail to the oyster, the bivalve of fame,
And down with the prohibitive bar,
All other sea food on its birthday is tame,
With a tiger. "Hip, hip, hip hurra—" R!"

TOTS FROM EVERYWHERE IN ASBURY PARK'S SHOW

Nearly 500 Babies Parade on Beach and Not a Whimper.

PRIZE FOR NEW YORK TWINS

Toddlers in Line Dressed as Bears, Football Players, Prizefighters, and One in Hod Carrier's Garb.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 31.—Babies from every nook and corner of Uncle Sam's domain and some from across the sea, all in their best raiment, paraded the ocean front this afternoon and were reviewed by Queen Titania, who, dressed in royal garb and accompanied by her Court, looked down upon them from her throne. There were nearly 500 good humored tots in the procession, and there was not a whimper as the one hundred thousand spectators looked on.

The parade was composed of nine divisions. Six boy policemen marched at the head of the line, followed by a company of boy rough riders and 100 girls in Japanese costume from Ocean Grove. Then came dolls in coaches, wheeled by their proud young owners; express wagons and bicycles, baby coaches and go-carts, children in fancy costumes, some dressed in college colors, tots in burlesque garb, twins, floats, and pony turnouts. There were three pairs of twins in the parade, two of the children having spent the first few weeks of their lives in an incubator.

Formed in the Arcade, the parade passed down Ocean Avenue, which was covered with burlap, to Asbury Avenue, and counter marched to the court of honor, where the prize ribbons and loving cups were awarded. The prize winners were then formed in line and marched by the court of honor.

The first prize in the doll coach division went to Ethel Rugarber of Asbury Park, whose doll reclined in a coach trimmed with yellow roses. Hattie A. Conover of Long Branch received second prize, and Dorothy Brower of East Orange third. Florence A. Dickinson of Newark, who rode in a gold seashell drawn by butterflies, received first honors in the express wagon division. George Baughan of New York, in a bathing suit and playing on a make-believe beach, was second. The third prize was captured by Annie and Cyril Wildeman of New York, who, dressed as bears, drew a wagon in which was an imitation of "Goldielock."

Dorothy McMillan of Newark, who rode in a coach fashioned after an immense American Beauty rose, captured the first prize in the baby coach division. Walter Weber of Ocean Grove was second, and Margaret C. Cleveland of Asbury Park was third. Wearing a German peasant's dress and pretending she was a fruit vendor, Chrystie Grapel of Red Bank took first honors in the fancy costumes division; Ray C. Hayward of New York, dressed as Princess Louise, was second, and Anna Nicolini of Asbury Park, a gypsy girl, was third.

The three first prizes for costumes in college colors went to boys and girls wearing Princeton's orange and black. The winners were Donald Dickson of Newark, Manley Tyler of Bradley Beach, and Frederick J. Schoen of Brooklyn. Young Dickson was made up as a Princeton football player. In the novelty class the winner of the first prize was Samuel C. Peden of Brooklyn, two years old, who tramped over the route dressed as a hod carrier. Joseph Rubin of New York and Julius Goldberg of Asbury Park received second and third prizes, respectively.

The prize twins were Myriam and Mildred Grote of New York. They rode in a huge coach built to resemble a swan. John and Isaac Severs of Sheepshead Bay, L. I., received the second prize, and Allen and William Conklin of Roseville, N. J., the third. There were nine floats in the parade, and each received a prize. The blue ribbon was given to Adelaide E. Dickinson of Newark, whose float represented "Rock of Ages." The second trophy went to Eddie and Harry Glashen of Bradley Beach, who, attired as prizefighters, were pushed along in a float representing a prize ring. The third award was given to a dozen children from Sunset Hall, who, attired as rustics, rode on a float built like a barn.

Roger Pryor of New York, son of Bandmaster Pryor, secured first place in the pony division. He was rigged up as a bandmaster, and three companions, each playing an instrument, occupied the cart with him. The second prize was awarded to Althea E. Ayres of Asbury Park, who was dressed as a Queen in a flower-trimmed pony drawn by three ponies. Edward B. Fahr of Hackensack, attired as Buster Brown, received the yellow ribbon.

ARMY MUST HOLD MANILA.

Without It and Other Seaports No Insurrection Can Succeed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—In his annual report Brig. Gen. William H. Carter, commanding the Department of the Visayas in the Philippines, says that no insurrection or invasion can succeed if deprived of the control of Manila and the principal seaport cities, and that the occupation is a military necessity. Temporary construction and makeshifts of every kind only serve, he says, to develop and confirm in the minds of Filipinos the idea that Americans do not intend to hold the islands permanently.

Gen. Carter closes his report with this tribute to the soldiers in the Philippines:

"It would be impossible to find in the ranks of any army a more self-respecting, intelligent, physically fit and professionally trained body of men than those serving in the organizations assigned to duty in this department."

CAUSES OF ARMY DESERTIONS.

Lack of a Canteen the Principal One, Says Brig. Gen. Lee.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Brig. Gen. Jesse M. Lee, commanding the Department of Texas, in his annual report says that desertions continue without any marked decrease, and that the principal factors are drunkenness, evil associations, frequenting vicious resorts, and insensibility to the sacred obligations of the oaths upon enlistment and thereafter.

The effect of the abolition of the canteen is to increase unauthorized absenteeism and promote drunkenness and disorder, Gen. Lee says, all tending directly to induce desertions.

MRS. SENHAUSER, WIFE NO. 5.

Woman Stabbed by Rudolph Siegel Won While Ill from Wound.

Special to The New York Times.

EGG HARBOR, N. J., Aug. 31.—Mrs. Henry Urish, sixty years old, became the fifth bride of Emil Senhäuser of this city to-day. Mrs. Urish was stabbed last April by her neighbor, Rudolph Siegel, son of Gen. Franz Siegel of New York, while in a fit of insanity.

Mrs. Urish lingered between life and death for several months. One of her daily visitors was Senhauser, to whom she was married to-day by a Justice. Senhauser is sixty-five years old, and his four previous wives are dead.

MISSING CASHIER RETURNS.

Willis C. Stevens of Walden Was in a Sanitarium.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Willis C. Stevens, the cashier of the National Bank of Walden, who disappeared mysteriously on April 8 last, has returned to Walden.

After he left his accounts at the bank were found correct, and it was supposed that he had wandered away while mentally unbalanced, the result of an attack of grip. Mr. Stevens has been in a sanitarium since he disappeared, and has recovered his health.

JUDICIAL HAROUN AL RASHID.

Justice Sanders, in Disguise, Visits Hall Complained Of—His Decision.

As a result of a little detective work on his own account, Justice Leon Sanders, in the Seventh District Municipal Court, yesterday morning ordered Walter McAdee, manager of the West End Casino, to put a damper on the festivities at his place of entertainment after 11 o'clock each night and cease the revelry which, neighbors claimed, continued on many occasions until the milkman had made his rounds.

The case came up a week ago before Justice Sanders and he put off decision for a week, during which time he said that he would visit the place and see for himself the condition of affairs. Scouts were posted to watch for him.

When the case was called yesterday Manager McAdee came up smiling and greeted the Justice warmly.

"I visited your place on Friday night last," said the court, "and find that the allegations are sustained. I thought it best that I should not be known, so I altered my appearance slightly; but I was there, and it is the order of the court that all playing of musical instruments, singing, and other noises must stop at 11 o'clock."

Justice Sanders got himself up as a mechanic and was accompanied by several friends.

LINGUIST HOSPITAL "HELPER."

Prof. Zordan Will Interpret at Bellevue While Writing Book.

Ermenegeldo Zordan, a Professor in the University of Padua, who speaks English, German, Italian, Spanish, Polish, Yiddish, and modern Greek as well as he does French, his native tongue, has been appointed official interpreter at Bellevue Hospital, an office that the institution has needed for many years. Prof. Zordan, who is on a two years' leave of absence from the University of Padua, Superintendent Richard says, is without doubt one of the most talented linguists who ever came to America.

The principal reason for Prof. Zordan's being in the United States is to study American customs, in order to embody the knowledge acquired in a book on European literature which he will write. Not being a wealthy man, he finds it necessary to work while in this country. A friend gave him a letter of introduction to Mr. Richard, and he obtained the place of interpreter. As there was no provision for an interpreter, Mr. Richard, in order to avail himself of Prof. Zordan's much needed talents, put him down on the pay roll as a "helper."

"I had been in New York," said Prof. Zordan yesterday, "about a month when I found out that in order to pursue my studies I would be compelled to get work. Accordingly I went to Mr. Richard, and my present position is the result. I have been working on my book for seven years, and have completed the sections referring to Germany, France, and Russia. The parts on America and England, among others, are to follow next."

Prof. Zordan is about forty-five years old. He has traveled all over the world.

PAID $17.50 FOR A KISS.

Ansonia Youth Overpowered the Maiden and So Was Fined.

Special to The New York Times.

ANSONIA, Conn., Aug. 31.—Archie McElroy won a wager and paid a fine of $17.50 in the City Court this morning for kissing pretty Miss Anna Wedin.

Miss Wedin, accompanied by Miss Augusta Speed, was on her way home Saturday evening, and while standing under an electric light McElroy and Michael Sweeney got into an argument with a crowd of young men, and finally McElroy made a wager that he would kiss Miss Wedin before she went home.

He and Sweeney grabbed the young girl. McElroy succeeded in kissing her on the cheek. The cries of Miss Wedin and her companion brought assistance, and the young men were arrested.

MANY DEER IN NORTH WOODS.

Season Opens To-day and Rush of Sportsmen Has Begun.

Special to The New York Times.

SARANAC LAKE, Aug. 31.—The deer season in the Adirondacks opens to-morrow, and already the usual rush of guides and sportsmen into the woods has begun. Many of the newspapers have recently published stories to the effect that during last Winter deer had perished in large numbers, and that this would be a very poor season. These reports were incorrect.

The game protectors report that the deer not only wintered well, but that they have greatly increased in number. Deer frequently have been seen within a mile of this village, and campers along the lakes often see a number of deer standing in the lakes with their heads just above water, feeding on lily pads, of which they are very fond.

Guides in the neighboring counties report that not for many years have the deer been so plentiful. The deer have been well protected by the game wardens during the close season, which runs from Nov. 16 to Aug. 31.

WHITE MEN NEGRESS'S HEIRS.

Cut Off Daughter in Favor of Men She Had Adopted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The will of Mary Amarolla, a wealthy negress, who died recently, was to-day offered for probate by George E. Sullivan, her counsel. Practically the entire estate, supposed to be valued at $75,000, was left to Louis and Joseph Alexander, two white men who were adopted and reared by the decedent.

There were minor bequests amounting to $300. Five dollars was willed to her daughter. Irwin B. Linton is made executor without bond. The daughter will contest the will.

OLDFIELD HELD BLAMELESS.

Killing of Two Men at St. Louis Auto Races Not Laid to Him.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 31.—The Coroner's jury which investigated the killing of two men by Barney Oldfield's automobile at the races on Sunday last, returned a verdict of accident to-day, but held that the track had not been properly policed. Oldfield is still in the hospital, and the inquest went on without him.

Testimony brought out that Oldfield had closed his eyes before his machine ran off the track; that Scott, one of the men killed, had disobeyed orders in standing at the point where he met his death, and that the management of the races had arranged to sprinkle the track, but revoked the order at the special request of Oldfield and Webb.

CHICKENS DUG UP DIAMOND.

Young Woman Who Lost Ring Fourteen Years Ago Has Been Notified.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Aug. 31.—A diamond ring valued at $150, which was lost by Miss Rebecca Rennough at the home of Wright Griffen, in Great Barrington, Mass., fourteen years ago, was unearthed by chickens vigorously scratching in the soil Monday.

The jewel was found by Frederick Burghardt, who has notified Miss Rennough. The ring is in perfect condition.

Coal Prices Go Up.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 31.—In accordance with custom the anthracite coal producing companies will to-morrow put up the price of coal to the regular Winter rates. On the 1st of April each year the price of coal is reduced 50 cents, and thereafter increased 10 cents a ton each month until September, when the regular prices are reached.

PLAYGROUND STUDENTS HAVE "COMMENCEMENT"

800 Diplomas in Athletic Science Well Earned by Children.

BIG CROWD SEES EXERCISES

Flag Salute and Sports Delight All Who Watch—Bloomer Girls and Dancers Earn Applause.

Eight hundred patriotic young athletes, the boys and girls who for two months have made up the classes in the Board of Education's great Summer playground school, ended their season yesterday with an exhibition on the playground which has been assigned to them under the Manhattan end of the Williamsburg Bridge.

A big crowd of proud mothers and fathers and sisters and brothers, cousins, and friends, saw the exhibition. One estimate of the size of the audience is 20,000.

The children pledged allegiance to the flag first of all. They did this with such enthusiasm and reverence as to give even their elders a spurt of love for the Stars and Stripes. It was done in true military style, the youngsters first saluting the flag, the boys holding their caps over their hearts as they passed the National emblem. Then they pledged allegiance to their flag and country. Martin Lush, a youngster whose pride gave him most of his strength, had the honor of holding the colors. Beside him stood two boys holding two guns about two sizes too big for them. These boys were Charles Scheuer and Nathan Geluskay. When the army of children had filed before the colors they made this pledge:

"I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

This was followed by a cheer that seemed to shake the bridge. A moment later Superintendent Maxwell appeared. Somebody gave them the tip. Then followed a real Simon-Pure college cheer. It was:

"I yell, you yell, all yell Maxwell!"

Almost every little girl wore a white dress with a liberal allowance of ribbon adornment. This advantage of the girls over the boys seemed well recognized by the teachers, who grouped the girls together for their exhibitions in calisthenics to the music of some familiar tune. Miss Florence A. Jacob, with her class of girls, about thirty in number, from Public School 32, gave a "radium dance," which took the crowd by storm. The girls wore capes and cone-shaped hats fashioned out of tissue paper.

The class of "bloomer girls" of Miss Clara Carter from School 151 looked like a group of young Indian girls. These girls, ranging in age from ten to fourteen, gave a real athletic exhibition, turned somersaults, stood on their heads, and did other feats that caused the crowd to cheer them lustily.

The boys carried out the usual programme—a fifty-yard dash, relay race, running high jump, potato race, distance race, parallel bar exercise, basket ball, and the like. Evert Jansen Wendell acted as judge.

No prizes were awarded, but the places of honor were striven for just as keenly.

These were the results:

Fifty-Yard Dash.—First and second place to Playground 147. Potato Race.—First and second place to Playground 147. Relay Race.—First place to Delancey Street; second place to 137. Distance Race.—First place, 147; second place, 137. High Jump.—First and second place, 147. Basket ball, with School 188 and 1 pitted against each other; score, 7 to 5 in favor of 188. Another game, with 137 and the Delancey Street as opponents; score, 9 to 1 in favor of School 137.

Several members of the Board of Education and many of those interested in playground work were present.

NO ATLANTIC AGREEMENT YET.

But Desire to Reach a Settlement Is Shown at the Conference.

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN, Aug. 31.—The shipping conferences continue. Both sides show a disposition to reach a satisfactory solution.

The German, British, and other companies have made a compromise proposition to Lord Inverclyde, Chairman of the Cunard Line, which the Cunard Company will take into consideration.

Adjournment is not yet in sight.

BERLIN, Aug. 31.—Details of the proceedings of the shipping conference at Frankfort are published by The Boersen Courier, as follows:

When the Cunard Line representatives sat down to discuss the possibility of an agreement they found that the representatives of all the other participating companies had reached an understanding to receive the lines in traffic relations with them into the combination against the Cunard Company without further formalities.

The White Star and Hamburg-American Lines were disposed to fight to a finish, and the conferences which had previously taken place in London seemed to have brought no result. Every principle had to be discussed from the beginning.

One fruitless proposition was that the Cunard Line should retire from the Mediterranean service altogether, the allied companies taking over its Hungarian emigrant contract and paying the Cunard people a minimum figure for each emigrant carried. Another proposition was to pay the Cunard Company a certain fixed percentage of the earnings of the emigrant business, and still another idea was that the allies buy the Cunard Line's Mediterranean steamers. This last plan did not find favor.

If the conference is unable to agree on a general compromise strong efforts will be made at least to agree to maintain the present Winter rates.

THE PHOENICIA NEARING PORT.

Liner Which Was Said to be Drifting Passes the Lizard.

PLYMOUTH, England, Aug. 31.—The Hamburg-American liner Phoenicia, which left New York on Aug. 20 for Hamburg, and which was reported by the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm, at Bremen yesterday, to have been sighted on Aug. 27 apparently drifting, passed the Lizard at 7 A. M. to-day.

IMPERIAL'S ADDITION OPEN.

Hotel Now Covers a Broadway Block—Managers Entertain.

The new seventeen-story addition to the Imperial Hotel was opened for business last night. The hotel now occupies the entire block on the east side of Broadway, between Thirty-first and Thirty-second Streets, and 3,000 guests helped the management celebrate the event last night.

With its 600 rooms the Imperial ranks next to the Waldorf and the Hotel Astor. The managers took great pride last night in showing the visitors the Leather Room and the Red Room.

It is in the Red Room, however, that the architects have spent their greatest efforts. It is 60 feet long and 50 feet wide, surrounded by a balcony. The ceiling is divided into seven panels, and there is a massive Louis XVI. mantel. The furniture alone, consisting of over one hundred pieces, cost $14,000. Myriads of electric bulbs supply the illumination.

Robert Stafford is the proprietor of the hotel and Morgan Rose the manager. The architects of the new building are Warren & Wetmore. Safier the French sculptor did the stone work, and the decorations were done by L. Marcotte.

SOCIETY TABLEAUS A SUCCESS.

Many Prominent Newporters Take Part in Show for Charity.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Aug. 31.—The tableaus at the Casino Theatre to-night in which a number of the prominent society people participated proved a success. As the price of tickets was $5, a goodly sum will be realized for the district nursing fund of the Newport Hospital and the Presentation Day Nursery of New York.

The committee in charge of the entertainment, consisting of Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster, Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman, Miss Edith Wetmore, Mrs. W. Starr Miller, and Mrs. Blair Fairchild, worked early and late for the success of the tableaus, and were gratified by the liberal response to their efforts. There were ten reproductions of famous paintings in a massive frame, each with appropriate scenery. During the intermission Gustave Bordes, the French baritone, sang.

The first tableau was a reproduction of a piece of Gobelin tapestry, called "Les Enfants." In this the children of Mrs. George S. Scott, Mrs. J. C. Mallery, Mrs. Sidney J. Smith, Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, and Mrs. F. Burrall Hoffman were prettily grouped. The second was "The Picnic," by Morland, in which Miss Rosamond Street, Miss Thayer, and Charles De L. Oelrichs and Louise S. Bruguiere made an effective picture.

In "A Wedgwood Plate," by Flaxman, Miss Helen Brice, Miss Maria Moran, and Blair Fairchild posed. Miss Helen Brice next appeared as a Spanish dancer in "The Infanta," by Velasques. "The Invocation to the Night" was represented by Miss Cynthia Roche and Miss Alice Blight.

The next tableau was called "La Vie des Boulevards," and represented a Paris café. This was the largest group of the evening, and the various figures were represented by James V. Parker, Comte de Chambrun, Count Sala, Mrs. J. F. D. Lanier, Prince de Bearn, Hermann Oelrichs, Jr., and Murray Hoffman. Mrs. J. Ellis Hoffman appeared as "Miss Farren," reproducing a picture by Sir Thomas Lawrence.

Miss Alice Grosvenor and Miss Cottonet represented a piece of Chinese embroidery, and Mrs. Philip M. Lydig was "A Venetian Comedienne." The last tableau was a hunting scene in which Mrs. J. De Forest Danielson, Miss Louise Bancroft, Mrs. P. F. Collier, Willing Spencer, and Ralph N. Ellis appeared.

In order not to interfere with the dinners early in the evening, the tableaus were not started until 9:30, and it was nearly midnight when the curtain was dropped on the last picture. Then came a number of suppers in the Casino grill rooms. Mr. Collier had thirty guests at his table. Miss Edith Wetmore was in charge of a "Dutch treat" supper in which forty participated, and smaller parties were under the charge of Mrs. Edward S. Spencer, Mrs. George A. Huhn, and Mrs. E. R. Thomas.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

St. Grouse will be celebrated to-day in the Adirondacks, and as a consequence there are many shooting parties arranged at the different camps for the month of September. In this country St. Grouse has a different signification, or rather a more varied one, than in England. Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mrs. Hoe, Mrs. Stanley Mortimer, and others have parties in progress. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt are expected at their camp, Sagamore Lodge, next week. Mrs. Antonio Yznaga has with her Sir John and Lady Lister Kaye.

Mrs. Mary King Waddington is to visit Newport, where she will be the guest of James J. Van Alen at Wakehurst.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick and Judge G. S. Batcheller, a member of the International Court at Cairo, Egypt; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hammill, and W. S. B. Stevens are among those who are booked to sail to-day on the Deutschland for Hamburg.

The engagement is rumored, but not announced, of Miss Catherine Morgan Dix, the eldest daughter of the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, rector of Trinity Parish, to William H. Wheelock, the son of Dr. and Mrs. George G. Wheelock of 75 Park Avenue. Mr. Wheelock is a Harvard graduate and a member of the University Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark G. Voorhees, (Miss Maude Folsom,) who are now on their wedding tour, will spend September at Lyne, Conn., where Mr. Voorhees has his country home and studio.

There was an influx of people to town yesterday. From Newport came Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Mrs. William Carter, and others in town were Miss Bryce, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Carroll Brown, and Mrs. James W. Gerard, the Misses Greta and Mamie Pomeroy, Mrs. Maxwell Stevenson, Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, Mrs. Belmont Tiffany, the Misses Cameron, and many others.

The marriage of Miss Elise Postley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Postley, and Ross Ambler Curran will take place on Nov. 1 in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, at Forty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue.

Engagement Announcements.

Mrs. Alfred Henderson of 46 West Seventy-second Street has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Edith Davis Henderson, to Victor Sutro of this city.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Fannie Meeker, daughter of Mrs. William Butler Meeker of Riverdale-on-Hudson, to Franklyn Adair Farnsworth of Yonkers.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

TEPPER—WHITTINGHAM.

PUEBLO, Col., Aug. 31.—Miss Hannah Harrison Whittingham, daughter of Mrs. Edward T. Whittingham of Millburn, N. J., and a granddaughter of the late Right Rev. William Rollinson Whittingham, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, and Arthur Tepper of Pueblo were married to-day by the Rev. Dr. Hardcastle. The ceremony was performed in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. The bride's mother and sister, Miss Caroline A. Whittingham, accompanied the bride on her trip West and attended her at the wedding. There were no bridesmaids.

Mr. Tepper left the East some time ago to take a position with the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad. He was well known socially in Essex County, N. J., and was for years a member and officer in Essex Troop, the crack New Jersey military organization. His bride is a member of one of the most prominent families in the State of New Jersey.

MOORE-VREDENBURGH.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Aug. 31.—One of the most brilliant weddings of the season took place here this afternoon, when Miss Agnes Remsen Vredenburgh, daughter of Judge and Mrs. William Henry Vredenburgh of 861 West End Avenue, New York, was united in marriage to Dr. Albertus Adair Moore of New York. The ceremony took place at St. Peter's Church, the Rev. Howard E. Thompson, Rector of the Church, officiating.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Harley H. Hawkins of Montclair as matron of honor. Miss Elizabeth Vredenburgh, a sister of the bride, as maid of honor. Dr. Baxter Moore of New York, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were Dr. Jones of Reading Penn.; Richard V. Evans of New York; Capt. Peter Vredenburgh, United States Army, and William H. Vredenburgh, Jr., brothers of the bride, and Peter Vredenburgh, second, of Jersey City, a cousin. During the ceremony Miss Marguerite Hofer of New York sang "Oh Perfect Love."

The bride's gown was white liberty silk gauze, trimmed with rose point lace. She wore a veil caught with orange blossoms and diamonds, and carried lilies of the valley and roses.

A reception was held at the Summer home of Judge and Mrs. Vredenburgh in Manasquan.

After the French minister will sail for Europe on Saturday, where she will spend the Winter.

SLOCUM COMMITTEE SPENT NEARLY $124,205

$20,000 Left in the Treasury for Future Needs.

FINAL REPORT TO MAYOR

120 Men Lost Entire Families—897 of 958 Bodies Identified—$200,000 Found on the Dead.

The committee appointed by Mayor McClellan to administer the funds subscribed for the relief of the sufferers from the Slocum disaster of June 15 last made a report yesterday to the Mayor of its work. The total contributions amounted to $124,205.80, and nearly all of this has been expended. The remaining $20,000 has been set aside for the future needs of those who were made to some extent dependent by the disaster.

Under a resolution adopted by the committee at its final meeting on Aug. 5 the balance was turned over to a special committee of St. Mark's Church appointed to receive the money in trust. This committee received $15,750, and Thomas M. Mulry, President of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, received $1,500 to be expended for the benefit of two Catholic families included in the list of beneficiaries.

The list of dead is officially placed at 958. In all 897 bodies were identified and 61 were buried without identification. The loss of property amounted to about $800, and the aggregate amount represented in money and bank books found on the dead is estimated by the Coroner to be about $200,000. As to the class of persons who received relief the report says:

While in some instances the mothers or older children who were lost in the disaster were wage-earners, even this was the exception rather than the rule, many of the grown daughters in the families affected not being engaged in wage-earning occupations. Two-thirds of the families subsequently aided in the burial of their dead (255 families) carried insurance, and in 185 of these families the amount of the insurance exceeded the total funeral expenses. In the case of five other families there were bank accounts which supplemented or took the place of insurance, and in several cases the amount of life insurance obtained was upward of $1,000. These facts indicate clearly that the families affected by the disaster were self-supporting, and in many instances prosperous members of the community, not likely to become dependent upon charitable relief even when overtaken by unexpected misfortune.

There were represented on the Slocum on the day of the disaster 590 families, and three-fourths of these, or 437 families, were aided by the committee. Of the remaining 25 per cent. very few asked for aid. The committee buried 705 persons belonging to 388 families at an expense of $31,279.99. The average cost of each funeral was $115.29, the minimum $16, and the maximum $331.50.

Medical attendance and supplies were furnished to 38 families at an expense of $1,264.17. Temporary aid has been given to 133 families to the amount of $2,042.58. Transportation was provided for 2 persons, costing $126, one of whom was sent to take a position in Chicago, and the other to his father's home in Russia. Fourteen persons were reimbursed for the loss of clothing, musical instruments, &c., at an outlay of $571.66, and a surgical injured in rescue work was repaired at a cost of $60.48. To care for dependent children and adults in 39 families appropriations of $18,231 were required, and $3,520 was expended to assist 26 additional families in necessary readjustment after the loss of a wage-earner or because of illness or loss of work consequent on the disaster. There was expended for the Cooper Union memorial meeting the sum of $275, and the operating expenses were $1,062.

The report gives the first authentic information of the losses by various families. It shows that 120 men lost their entire families. One wife only, 39 lost wife and one child, 32 wife and two children, 10 wife and three children, 3 wife and four children, and wife and five children; two widowers lost each two children, and one lost four children, while the remaining three left alone as the result of the disaster lost other relatives with whom they were living.

There were twelve families in which orphan children were left, the number of orphans being 27.

IN THE SHOPS.

When one is thinking of linens, a bargain in a towel is always acceptable. Here is one for the woman who has had her linen stock diminished this Summer—a strong, heavy huck towel, 20 by 37 in size, 25 cents, regular price, 38 cents. These are Webb's "Dew Bleach" linen, and are worth while.

Another towel, one of the kind that is a delight for a sensitive skin, is the big old bleach towel, 27 by 45, a big English size, at 75 cents instead of $1. This is a double, hemstitched towel, soft as silk.

There are odd things in colored linen cloths that some women may like to pick up. There are blues and grays, and an attractive cloth has a red line border. This is two yards by three, a snow-drop pattern, with red line border of several inches width. It is a fringed cloth and costs $3, reduced in price from something more than $4. It is good value for the money.

Some of the blue cloths are for small tables. One, reduced to 50 cents, is a small square cloth. A larger one is 75 cents from $1.50, and so on.

There is a bank for a child that will put a premium on saving money. It is a registering bank in the form of a house, and with three openings in the top at the front, where the different coins are registered as they go in. The price is 75 cents.

For 60 cents there is a library and school companion combined. The library is a box, which, when closed, looks to be a shelf of small books. Open, it shows a number of colored crayon pencils, a regular lead and slate pencil, with a bit of sponge and an eraser.

The old English Welsh rabbit plates are among the best. They are the ones with bright-colored English scenes, and as a rule little—presumably Welsh—rabbits playing around on the lawn. The plates cost $1 each. A large round plate for the service of Welsh rabbit costs $3.50, and a smaller platter $3.25. There is a verse around each, beginning: "Season me with pepper and salt and just a pinch of mustard yellow."

A round medallion with the letters in solid embroidery cut out inside are still seen on the fine monogram handkerchiefs.

Solid embroidered letters in silk are seen on the fine French blankets that are as soft and warm as down, and which every housekeeper would like to buy if she could, and every one who can does buy.

Ten souvenir postals for 5 cepts is about the lowest price for these much-used cards. They show various views of New York, a picture of the new Williamsburg Bridge being among them.

Black walrus traveling bags are among the smartest and most expensive for women's use.

Tan shoes fasten with three small leather-covered harness buckles and straps at the side, instead of buttoning or lacing. That is one of the whims in shoes now worn.

A new Fall suit shows one of those becoming little coats fitting and basquing a few inches below the waist. This is black, trimmed with a narrow green and black braid, with a vest of a fancy green material and glass buttons of green fastening it.

A net waist in something of a mode shade is tucked and shirred, lined with thin white silk, and costs $5. It is not one of the new waists, but pretty, simple, and useful.

One of those Hungarian linen cloths for small tables is in two shades of red. The cloth is linen in the natural color, and the heavy hand embroidery is in a deep red lightened with a shade which is on the order of salmon pink. It is a good combination, and costs, cloth and cozy and all, $4.75.

THAT POLICE FORCE AGAIN.

Meets Its Wife in Court—Some "Inside Information."

The charge of abandonment made against the Police Department of Sea Cliff, L. I., by its wife was heard by Magistrate Higginbotham in the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn, yesterday. Sea Cliff's "force" is Joseph Brundage. He is the whole department. When he appeared before Magistrate Higginbotham his wife's lawyer said pathetically:

"Your Honor, this poor woman is ill and unable to earn her living, while her husband is Chief of Police of Sea Cliff."

"So, he's Chief of Police, is he?" asked the Magistrate, eyeing Brundage, who had drawn himself up and thrown out his chest.

"Yes," responded the lawyer, adding enigmatically, "He gets it all, your Honor. He's his own wardman, you know."

"He gets all what?" inquired the court.

"Why, all that's coming to him," explained the lawyer, and the court and Brundage both smiled at the joke.

It was suggested that Brundage pay his wife $9, but the police force thought the figure too high.

"I get only $50 a month," he said, "and I'm expected to give up to keep the job."

Again the court smiled. The case was adjourned until Sept. 21.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Dr. Tomas Herran.

Dr. Tomas Herran, who represented Colombia at Washington for several years up to the time of the Panama incident, died to-day at Liberty, N. Y. He had been ill for some time and went to Liberty in the hope that a sojourn there would aid in the restoration of his health.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Few Pan-American diplomats enjoyed such intimate friendship with the officials of the Washington Government as did Dr. Herran. He was the only member of the Diplomatic Corps whom Secretary Hay received regularly in his private office.

Dr. Herran first came to Washington at the age of three, his father having served here as Minister from 1846 to 1863. Although born in Colombia, most of Dr. Herran's early life was spent in Washington up to the time of his graduation from Georgetown University in 1863, when he went to London as private secretary to the Colombian Minister to Great Britain.

In 1900 Dr. Herran was attached to the Colombian Legation at Washington, and throughout the régime of Minister Concha was the executive head of the legation. Upon the sudden departure of Minister Concha, Dr. Herran was made Chargé d'Affaires ad interim, and in this capacity signed with Mr. Hay on Jan. 22, 1903, the Panama Canal treaty between the United States and Colombia, which, despite all that the Chargé could do, was rejected by the Colombian Congress. This was the disappointment of Dr. Herran's life, and from that, and the severe strain under which he labored throughout the negotiations he never fully recovered.

Sudden Death of Washington Hancock.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—The sudden death of Washington Hancock, grandson of the late Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, at his lodgings in London was the subject of an inquest to-day. The autopsy showed that Mr. Hancock died from heart disease, and a verdict to that effect was accordingly rendered.

Greater New Yorks Play Fast Game Against Cleveland and Win.

The Greater New York team gave another brilliant exhibition of playing in the last game of the series with Cleveland yesterday, and won by a score of 3 to 1. Besides the excellent pitching of Chesbro the display at third base by Conroy was a prominent feature. Seldom has the position been played more perfectly and his stop and throw to second base, whereby Lush was retired, was of a remarkable order. Hess hit the ball sharply, which dropped just within the foul line, and Conroy, with outstretched hand, secured it and, without getting into position for a good throw, got the ball to second in time to catch the runner from first.

It was an interesting game throughout, and the four thousand spectators evidently enjoyed it. There was only one attempt made to question the decision of the umpire, but it was quickly squelched by O'Loughlin, who gave about the most intelligent and satisfactory exhibition of umpiring seen in this city for a long time.

Chesbro was in splendid form. Not a man got to base on called balls, and but for a wild throw by Kleinow in the last inning the visitors would have been shut out. He struck out four men, and in the fifth inning Turner, Lush, and Bemis were thrown out at first base on three pitched balls. Hess also did well, which was quite a contrast to a previous performance in this city. Then ten runs were made off him in one inning, but yesterday only six hits were made off him, but two of the runs scored by New York were the result of bases on balls.

Four ball balls placed Williams on first base in the second inning, and on an attempt to steal, Bemis threw the ball so wild that Williams reached third. Conroy's safe hit was poorly fielded by Lush, and Williams scored and Conroy took second. The latter was advanced a base by Kleinow's out, and on Chesbro's high bounding ball to Lajoie, Conroy tallied. A base on balls, Stovall's failure to hold Bradley's throw, Kleinow's sacrifice, and Chesbro's long fly to right field enabled Williams to make his second run. Lajoie made Cleveland's only run in the last inning on a safe hit, which, in the third of the game, and Stovall's hit close to the plate, the ball being thrown badly by Kleinow to first. The score:

New Yorks Wind Up Western Tour with Two Victories.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 31.—The New York team brought its last Western trip of the season to a close to-day by beating the Cincinnatians two games, the first in eleven innings, by 3 to 2, and the second in seven innings, by 4 to 1. There was considerable disorder in the first game caused by Bowerman, catcher of the New York team, who was not playing, however, hitting a spectator, and the loud and constant protests against Umpire Zimmer's decisions. McGann and Dahlen were put out of the game, and while this handicapped the team somewhat, it did not disturb McGinnity, who pitched in rare form. Both nines played poorly in the field in the first game, and it was Manager Kelley's failure to catch a thrown ball that gave the victory to the New Yorks in the eleventh inning.

A base on balls, Sebring's hit, and Odwell's bunt filled the bases for Cincinnati in the fourth inning. Steinfeldt's fly was caught by Dahlen and a double play was the result. After Odwell had stolen second, the New Yorks protested, and Dahlen threw the ball away. McGann then became prominent in the dispute, with the result that both he and Dahlen were ordered off the grounds. The local men made another run in the fifth on Peitz's single and Huggins's double.

Dahlen scored for New York in the second inning on a base on balls and hits by Gilbert and McGinnity. Donlin tallied in the sixth on a base on balls, Mertes's two-bagger, and Corcoran's bunt. In the eleventh inning Dunn reached first on Harper's wild throw and got to third on Devlin's single. He was run out on Gilbert's hit to Steinfeldt. Warner hit to Corcoran, but Kelley muffed the throw, and Devlin scored.

In the second game the New Yorks led off with three runs by good batting and tallied one more run in the sixth inning on Devlin's hit for one base and Gilbert's three-bagger. Cincinnati's only run was made in the third inning on Kelley's base on balls, Seymour's single, and Sebring's out. The game was called at the end of the seventh inning to allow the New Yorks to catch a train. The score:

BOWERMAN STRIKES A 'ROOTER'

New York Catcher Nearly Starts a Riot in Game at Cincinnati.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 31.—There came near being a riot during the first game of the double-header to-day between the New Yorks and Cincinnatis. In the sixth inning Bowerman, who was not playing, left the New York bench and struck a man in "rooters'" row, who had been jesting with him. "Sam" Saffin of the ball park police was marching Bowerman off the field, but on the claim that Umpire Zimmer had absolute authority, Saffin let him go to the bench again.

Albert Hartzell, music teacher in the public schools and son of a member of the Board of Education, was the man hit by Bowerman, and he appealed to the regular police. His jaw was cut. Eight officers came on the field, and amid great excitement took Bowerman in custody. Hartzell accompanied them to swear out a warrant. The New York players advanced on the officers as if to take Bowerman from them. Acting Mayor Gordon, who witnessed the assault, ordered the police to arrest Bowerman.

The claim is made that Manager McGraw ordered the assault. George B. Cox, the Republican leader and a large stockholder in the club, declared the affair an outrage, and said Bowerman should be fined. At the police station Hartzell decided not to prosecute and Bowerman was released.

HILDEBRAND WOULD NOT RIDE.

Stewards Excused Jockey and Caused Protest from Bettors.

A change of jockeys, sanctioned by the Stewards of the meeting, after the official announcement of the riders who had made weight for the first race at Sheepshead Bay yesterday, caused much bitter comment by backers. The favorite jockey, Hildebrand, had weighed to ride Metropole, and many persons who backed Hildebrand's mounts bet on the colt on that account.

Metropole was heavily backed by some one else, and went to 4 to 1 before Hildebrand, when warming up the colt, made the discovery that the horse was ill-tempered and crazy to suit him. He asked the Stewards to excuse him, and they substituted Miles, the jockey who has ridden Metropole in the races when the colt was not backed. Then Metropole went back in the betting to 8 to 1, and was beaten badly in the race.

The change of jockeys was the first made except when injury to a rider compelled a substitution since racing has been under the control of the Jockey Club, and the action of the Stewards was the subject of heated argument for the remainder of the day. It was said that the action of the Stewards agreed to excuse Hildebrand was that they wished to prevent what seemed to promise a coup for some shrewd bettors who control Metropole.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Easy, 7-8@1 1-8 Per Cent.

The Market Quieter and Narrower, Being Less Affected by the News of the Day—Cotton Reactionary, Grains Irregular.

There was less news upon the Stock Exchange yesterday, and naturally there was also a contraction in the volume and range of business done. It cannot be said that there was a corresponding diminution in the interest felt. Upon the contrary, the perception that the condition of the market is critical and dependent upon the market for staples in unusual degree enlists all the attention it should. The cotton market softened, as the produce market had done, in reaction from damage reports. There was large liquidation by longs upon the familiar Stock Exchange maxim to sell upon good news, meaning news adapted to raise prices, and the pressure to sell for the moment overbalanced considerations based upon prospective shortness of supply, which may be more effective later on, under other technical conditions. The produce markets firmed up a trifle, but not enough to be influential upon the day's prices in the stock market, or to carry any new condition regarding the crop outlook. The weekly budget of iron trade news was not stimulating, being made up largely of readjustments of prices and combinations to maintain them.

Under these conflicting influences the market became mixed and narrow, and possibly might have reacted more sharply had not so many been expecting that effect. If there had been pressure to sell doubtless prices would have yielded more, but there were too many ready to buy at concessions to permit much shading of quotations. No active stock could be called weak, Norfolk and Western's loss of a round point being as conspicuous as any decline, although there were one or two others larger. Steel bonds made a new high record for the year at 80, and the strength of Steel preferred was conspicuous, although its advance of a point was also exceeded, notably in the tobacco group. Continental Tobacco preferred rose 5¾, and Consolidated Tobacco 4s were almost equally strong upon a volume of business aggregating nearly half of the day's total sales in the bond department. Business in them aggregated $3,340,000, the price touching 72, but closing at 70¾. There never is any news for outsiders in this group until it is too late to be useful, so that it is not surprising that there was no special explanation yesterday. Probably it is not far wrong to say that the rise is like that in the stock market in general—due largely if not chiefly to cessation of pressure to sell. In the outside market there was a wide movement in Interborough. After so large an advance yesterday's reaction loses a good part of its significance, and it is quite possible that an unskillful execution of a selling order was as influential toward the decline as any connection with the traction situation or the strike.

Salmon Trust Reorganization Plan.

Another plan is being prepared for the reorganization of the Pacific Packing and Navigation Company, generally known as the Salmon Trust. The plan probably will be made public to-day. There have been a number of plans announced from time to time for the reorganization of this company, but they have all failed because of Interesting Movement in Tobacco Issues —Shorts Caught in Steel Preferred.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

However doubtful the general tone of the stock market may have been yesterday there was no difference of opinion about the tone of Steel preferred, which was strong throughout the session and ended the day with a net gain of an even point. It was third in the list in point of activity. There was, however, much difference of opinion as regard the reason for the day's advance in the stock, some claiming that it was only a movement against the short interest while others said that the buying was based on knowledge that there was shortly to be issued some favorable announcement. In some quarters there was a disposition to make the statement by a trade authority issued during the afternoon to the effect that a general reduction in the prices of steel products was likely to take place, serve as such a "favorable announcement," it being argued that such a move would result in increased business. Under the circumstances the view that the shorts were largely responsible for the advance seemed the more plausible. Admittedly the short interest in Steel preferred has been large and seemingly it has not yet been much reduced. The stock was in large demand in the loan crowd yesterday afternoon.

Tobacco Issues All Up.

Various rumors, none of them accepted generally, were current in connection with the general advance in tobacco stocks, which in some respects was the most interesting feature of yesterday's trading. The transactions in Consolidated Tobacco 4s reached a very large total and they rose 4½ points. American Tobacco preferred, Continental Tobacco preferred, and American Snuff preferred also rose sharply, as Havana Tobacco did on the curb. It was said in some quarters that there was to be further absorption of tobacco securities by the trust, while in others the rumor that the Consolidated bonds were to be re-exchanged for the stocks for which they were originally issued was again given currency. So far as the movement in the bonds was concerned some thought that the selling was at least as good as the buying, which led to the conclusion that the movement possibly meant that further distribution of the bonds was being attempted, rather than that liquidation in them had entirely ceased, which was one of the suggestions offered in explanation of the advance. In this connection the theory was advanced that possibly the movement in the bonds was for the purpose of liquidating certain large holdings in them, just as many believe that the recent movement in the Metropolitan issues was brought about for a similar purpose and possibly in the interest of the same people.

Erie Follows Advance in Reading.

Reading and Erie were decidedly strong at times during the session, but the former after selling as high as 63 dropped back nearly a point and closed unchanged. The fact that Harriman & Co. were among the active buyers of Erie was taken by some as an indication that Harriman interests were responsible for the strength of Erie. In other quarters it was said to be nothing more than a traders' movement, the recent strength of Reading being used to bring about a sympathetic advance in Erie.

London Still Buying Steel.

London was a seller of stocks on balance although it continued to buy one or two issues which have been recent favorites abroad, including the Steel stocks. All told about 35,000 shares were traded in for foreign account, nearly all of which represented sales. At the close it was said that London would probably be a buyer of our stocks this morning.

FOR LOWER STEEL PRICES.

Producers in Session Probably Will Make Reductions.

Meetings were held in Jersey City yesterday of the Steel Beam Association and the Steel Plate Pool, at which the advisability of cutting prices was discussed. No conclusion was reached and the meetings will continue to-day. The Iron Age has this to say of the situation:

"If the programme of the leading members is carried out there will be a reduction in the price of beams and structural material of from $5 to $6 per ton, from the base of 1.60 cents per pound Pittsburg. It is known that the mills have reached an understanding about prices for fabricated material, so that a safer basis is reached in that respect. The new price for fabrication has already gone into effect, and while it temporarily checked business, that effect has now worn off. The leading outside new maker of beams has not joined the association as yet, but it is understood that this producer will act in harmony with the association in any case.

"At the meeting of the Plate Association lower official prices will probably be decreed.

"The reductions will put an end to a thoroughly false situation, and that in itself is a step in the right direction. We do not believe that any extravagant expectations are entertained by the great mill interests of any very marked stimulating of the demand. That is not looked forward to before Spring. But the trade is on a sounder basis.

"It is regarded as probable that in line with the same general policy there will be an early reduction of $1 to $2 per ton on steel bars, and that prevailing conditions will be frankly accepted by an official reduction in the price of billets to a $19 to $20 basis."

CHICAGO TRACTION RUMOR.

Wall Street Hears That New Yorkers Will Effect a Consolidation.

Wall Street heard rumors from Chicago yesterday to the effect that a syndicate for $36,000,000 had been formed by New York financiers for the purpose of ending the Chicago Traction muddle by consolidating the Chicago Union Traction with the Chicago City Railway Company. The firms mentioned were J. P. Morgan & Co., Speyer & Co., H. B. Hollins & Co., and Blair & Co.

Inquiry disclosed the fact that Speyer & Co. are not interested in the transaction. Some of the other firms, however, are understood to be preparing plans for the reorganization of the Chicago Union Traction Company, the affairs of which have been in a very unsatisfactory condition for a long time. What these plans will be has not yet been definitely decided.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

The Enterprise Glass Company has been formed and will engage in the manufacture of glass in Western Pennsylvania.

Twin City Rapid Transit's decrease in earnings for the third week of August, it is stated, was partly due to the cyclone, which blocked the company's lines for twenty hours.

The estimate of anthracite production for August is 4,300,000 tons. The shipments in August of last year were 5,169,402 tons.

The National Car Wheel Company has reduced its capital from $9,000,000 to $4,000,000.

The International Iron Concrete Company of Auburn and the Northern New England Coal Company of Kittery, capital of each $500,000, have been incorporated in Maine.

HEAVY COTTON RECEIPTS.

Hot Weather Opens Bolls and Pickers Are Scarce in Texas.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 61.—Wagon-cotton is arriving in Dallas at the rate of fifty bales a day and upward. The seventy cotton gins in Dallas County have started up. The hot, dry weather is making such a large quantity of cotton open at the same time that temporarily there is a scarcity of pickers.

All planters seem anxious to get their crop on the market as early as possible. Hundreds of bales are being received daily at the interior towns of Garland and Lancaster, in Dallas County, and similar conditions are reported from all over Northern Texas. Pickers are demanding as high as 75 cents per 100 pounds for picking. Prices for spots to-day at Dallas were from $10.50 to $10.75.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

In the outside market yesterday, with the exception of Interborough, there was a sharp advance throughout the list, which, however, was not maintained. There was a lessening of activity, together with a fewer number of issues traded in. American Can preferred advanced to a new high record, but reacted sharply later in the day and showed a net fractional loss. Northern Securities sold as high as 104¾, but then went off to 103⅛, with the close ½ point higher. Seaboard stocks were very active, but the preferred was in the better demand, and advanced to a new high record. Nearly 20,000 shares of stock were traded in, about equally divided between common and preferred, with the closing figures almost the highest for the day.

HAVANA TOBACCO, which has been quoted for some time around 25 for the common and 35 for the preferred, advanced very abruptly yesterday on the report that there was to be a consolidation of all the important tobacco companies, which would materially benefit Havana Tobacco. The common sold at 30 and the preferred at 42, which are net gains of 5 and 4 points, respectively.

NO RECEIVER FOR WAGGAMAN.

Washington Judge Says, However, That Another Application May Be Made.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to-day Justice Stafford denied the application for a receiver for Thomas E. Waggaman, against whom proceedings in bankruptcy were instituted several days ago by three local banks. Justice Stafford said that his action would not prejudice the right of any parties in interest again to apply for the appointment of a receiver on the ground of alleged lack of security in the keeping of the assets.

Real Estate Sales

MANAGERS OF SUBURBAN PROPERTIES are looking forward to the Labor Day vacation period as offering a special occasion for making their announcements.

If properly advertised during the next several days a large number of building plots should be disposed of.

We, therefore, suggest the immediate and continuous use of the Real Estate Columns of THE NEW YORK TIMES. No other New York newspaper offers equal advantages—a fact readily proved by the growing demand for space in THE TIMES'S Real Estate Columns.

THE NEW YORK TIMES is read by intelligent people. Its constituency embraces both the employer and employe—among the latter will be found those who are saving money for investing in legitimate propositions.

A Guaranteed Bonafide Net Paid Circulation Far Exceeding 100,000 Copies Per Day.

THE 3 AND 7 TIME RATES OFFER SPECIAL ADVANTAGES.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, "All the News That's Fit to Print."

N. B.—For renting or selling houses, apartments, business buildings, stores, offices, lofts, factories, halls, rooms, and unimproved property of all kinds, the use of THE NEW YORK TIMES'S columns obtains surprising results.

SHOT FROM BOYS' "CAMP."

West New York Lad Failed to Heed Warning to Keep Away.

Joseph Kelly, the thirteen-year-old son of John Kelly, a silk twister, of West New York, was shot and dangerously wounded yesterday. A number of boys have been camping a short distance north of Tenth Street in that place and when Kelly and several companions strolled by they were told to keep away.

The warning was followed by a volley of stones fired from bean-shooters. Then came the crack of a rifle and Kelly fell with a bullet hole in one of his lungs. The boy was removed to St. Mary's Hospital, in Hoboken, where it is said his condition is precarious. The bullet with which he was shot is such as is used in a .22-calibre Flobert rifle. The police are looking for a boy named Stein who is said to live in Third Street, Clifton Park. It was said at the house that no boy of that name lived there.

AFTER GOSLIN FOR $38,500.

Petition in Bankruptcy Filed Against "Promoter" by Note Holder.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Alfred R. Goslin, who gained publicity through his connections with the Franklin Syndicate, E. S. Dean & Co., and "Col." Robert A. Ammon, who is now in the Sing Sing Prison. It was filed by Clair R. Fagley, who says that he is a creditor for $38,500 on a note made by Goslin, which came into his possession on Jan. 2, which became due on July 2, and which was not paid.

Fagley describes Goslin as a "promoter." It was alleged that Goslin is insolvent, suffered George W. Holman, as Trustee, to obtain a preference by legal proceedings by a judgment for $2,842, obtained on Aug. 2, and transferred large and valuable assets consisting of stocks, bonds, and accounts, to the value of more than $1,000, to certain creditors to prefet them. Goslin's place of business and residence are not given in the petition.

NEW YORKERS DEFEATED IN IRISH LEAGUE ROW

This State's Contribution Aroused Pennsylvania.

IT WAS THIRD ON THE LIST

Move to Cut Local Representation as a Punishment Started Uproar—Hot Words Passed.

New York went down in defeat before Pennsylvania at yesterday afternoon's session of the United Irish League, in the Lexington Avenue Opera House. It was all because New York had contributed less than Pennsylvania to the Irish cause, and delegates from the latter State thought the local organization should have its representation on the Executive Committee curtailed as a punishment. The debate was heated and things looked squally for the best part of an hour. President John F. Finerty finally restored order after wrecking a gavel and shouting himself hoarse.

The row started after the reading of the Treasurer's report, which showed that the total subscriptions since the last convention amounted to $61,665.71, of which Massachusetts had contributed more than $13,000, Pennsylvania $7,800, while New York was third with $7,605. The Treasurer, T. Fitzpatrick, after reading his report yielded to the Commitee on Constitution and By-Laws, which recommended that the organization's National Executive Committee have its membership increased from 31 to 51.

When a vote on the report was proposed M. J. Ryan, leader of the Philadelphia delegation, fanned the flame that had been smoldering by announcing that the Executive Committee, as constituted, included too many New Yorkers. He said other States should have more power. Finally he shouted:

"Every man in this room should be ashamed of the showing of a city that is said to contain more Irish than the City of Dublin. Let us see that the honors are distributed according to the work. I'm willing to see New York have all she deserves."

Half a dozen New York members arose and some hisses were mingled in the calls for recognition. At last Jeremiah J. O'Connor of Elmira managed to shout loudest.

"Mr. Ryan is in the wrong," he began.

"I am astounded—"

Again the hall was a Babel. Rhoderick J. Kennedy of this State took advantage of a lull to cry:

"We will defend ourselves to the finish. We don't propose to be overrun."

Mr. O'Connor suggested an amendment providing for one hundred members on the Executive Committee so that all sides could be represented fully.

Mr. O'Sullivan of Louisiana said he was the South taking the field to calm the turmoils of the North. He seconded the proposal for one hundred committeemen. Mr. Kennedy of New York got another chance.

"I'm not a fit representative to speak for New York," he began.

"Oh, you'll do as well as any of them," came from the Pennsylvania side of the hall, followed by cries of "Shame!" and "Down with him!"

"I speak for the city," persisted Mr. Kennedy. "I have facts. When John E. Redmond first came here to organize the league, New York went out to meet him and took the responsibility of the movement. Then New York and Boston saw to the organization of our body. In Pennsylvania we tried every way to get Mr. Redmond's face on a platform. They would not have his face for a long time. Philadelphia, after having made a bid for this convention, backed down, and New York came to the front, again assuming all the responsibility."

The Philadelphia element tried to shout down the speaker.

"I hope," he cried, leaping up and down and shaking his fists in the air, "that every New Yorker elected to this committee will take my suggestion and refuse to serve with the Pennsylvanians."

A storm of hisses, apparently coming from the majority of those present, greeted this.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," shrieked a woman delegate, pointing a finger at Mr. Kennedy.

"Sit down, sit down," urged his fellow-New Yorkers—and he heeded their advice.

The Chairman, after several futile attempts, put the previous question on the committee's report, and the yeas won. Mr. O'Connor demanded a vote on his amendment. The yeas and nays both were strongly urged. A viva voce appeared so evenly divided that Chairman Finerty refused to name the victors. Preparations for them were made for a count.

By this time the whole gathering was in an uproar, and it was five ten minutes before the Chairman could restore order. The count showed that the Pennsylvanians had 130 votes and the New Yorkers 103.

After the vote everything was peaceful, but when Mr. Ryan ascended the stage again to read the report of the Platform Committee it was evident that he was the hero of the day. His followers shouted and waved their handkerchiefs, while the New York side of the house was silent.

The Committee on Platform began its report with a demand for "Irish home rule by work or words, by voice or sword, as circumstances may dictate or opportunity offer," and continued: "We recognize the right of Ireland to choose her weapons in the fight for liberty without dictation from any outsider."

There was more cheering this time from all, and when the report praised John E. Redmond, M. P., that gentleman received another ovation.

The report deplored the emigration of the Irish to other lands as a movement tending to drain all the life blood of the Celtic nation.

Mr. Kennedy read the report of the Committee on Ways and Means, pledging to Mr. Redmond for the Irish cause in the next general elections $50,000, and adding that the committee hoped to send over as much as $100,000. M. J. Corbley of New York said this State would contribute at least $10,000 of the amount. A message from Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, pledging $1,000 to the fund was read.

Secretary O'Callaghan read letters of regret from President Roosevelt and Alton B. Parker. The President said that he must adhere to his rule, made shortly after the Chicago Convention, to accept no invitations.

The Secretary's report showed that there were now thirty-three States on the organization's roll, whereas it had started with twenty-four. Dr. P. J. Simmons of Boston read the report of the Auditing Committee, adding:

"I hope that our enemies will find our accounts as impregnable as I hope Port Arthur will prove to be."

The convention cheered itself hoarse for Russia, as it had done on the previous day during Col. Finerty's pro-Russian speech.

REDMOND FOR TOLERANCE.

Rebukes Man Who Yelled "To H—ll with the Orangemen."

In the midst of a speech by John E. Redmond, M. P., at the closing session of the United Irish League's Convention in the Lexington Avenue Opera House last night, a wild-looking man seated toward the front arose to his feet and shouted:

"To h—ll with the Clan-na-Gael and the Orangemen!"

Mr. Redmond had been preaching tolerance, saying that as he and his followers in the Irish Nationalist Party did not interfere with views of more radical Irishmen, he thought those radicals should not try to thwart the peaceful methods of the present movement to give Ireland home rule. The hall was in an uproar, but Mr. Redmond shouted above the din:

"No, to h—ll with no honest Irishman! My friend says to h—ll with the Clan-na-Gael. Far be it from me to tolerate such an expression. The Orangemen are Irishmen—mistaken Irishmen, I think—but still Irishmen. Shall we drive them out of Ireland? I say No. Educate them." (Cheers.)

After Mr. Redmond's speech several other speakers took the cue and deplored the intolerant calibre of Irishmen. The Chairman, Col. Finerty, introduced Capt. A. J. C. Donellan, M. P., as "an Irish Protestant appearing before an almost entirely Catholic audience."

A big crowd had gathered to hear the members of Parliament talk to the league. There were four of them present, and three talked. Mr. Redmond, while thanking the American organization for its promised financial aid in the next British elections, gave the impression that he was confident of the Irish home rule agitation's success in the near future. He said that when he spoke to the league's previous convention two years ago, he never dreamed that within the interval an Irish Land bill could be passed. That it was so, he said, was largely due to help from this side of the ocean.

"Landlordism still exists in Ireland," he said, "but it exists in the same sense as a condemned criminal at Sing Sing."

The convention adopted a resolution on the illness of Senator George F. Hoar, describing him as a friend of Ireland in this country.

Capt. Donella of Cork, the next speaker, began by saying that Ireland must follow America's example of having women delegates in its conventions, and ended by declaring that he found Irish-American women to be even more warm-hearted than those who had stayed in Cork.

Conor O'Kelly, the third member of Parliament to speak, said that the Irish party would get the best of "the pygmy politicians of the Joe Chamberlain type."

"We don't have any respect for the Constitution of Britain," he said, "because we don't recognize it in Ireland."

There were many other speeches, and the convention ended.

A 300-FOOT CHIMNEY.

Planned for Erection Near Blackwell's Island Bridge Approach.

Plans have been filed at the Building Department for the giant chimney to be built for the New York Steam Company alongside the Manhattan approach of the Blackwell's Island Bridge for use in connection with its power house on the East River front, between Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth Streets.

The chimney will be built in accordance with an agreement made by the city with the steam company in July of last year. It is to be 300 feet high, circular in form, with an outside diameter of 29.5 feet at its base and tapering to 16.9 feet at the top. It will be constructed in twelve sections, with walls varying in thickness from 32 inches in the lowest section to 10½ inches at the topmost section. These walls will be of hollow fire-proof blocks arranged to resist wind pressure and will be laid in Portland cement and lime mortar.

The chimney's total weight will be 2,165 tons. Its cost is estimated at $25,000 by the Custodis Chimney Construction Company, which designed it and will have supervision of its construction.

JUST WANTS CHANCE TO PAY.

Contractor in Contempt Asks to be Released from Jail.

John B. Wentsch, a contractor of 333 East Eighty-sixth Street, who has been locked up in the Ludlow Street Jail for several months for contempt of court in failing to pay alimony to his wife, yesterday obtained from Justice Amend, in the Supreme Court, on order to show cause why he should not be purged from contempt. In his affidavit accompanying the petition for the order Wentsch says that he was hounded by his wife, who, he alleged, had driven him out of the contracting business.

He said that he lived happily with her until she decided to sue him for a separation. Then, he says, she interfered with his business affairs and caused him to lose two valuable contracts. He adds that if he is released from Ludlow Street Jail he will go to work and earn sufficient money to pay the alimony on the installment plan. The amount he now owes under the court's order is $144. The order is made returnable for to-morrow.

MRS. WHITESIDE GETS CHILD.

Dentist Surrenders Daughter After Wife Sues Out Writ.

Ten-year-old Louise Elinore Whiteside, the daughter of Dr. Howard A. Whiteside, a dentist of 115 Madison Avenue, and his wife, Fannie V. Whiteside, of 204 West Fifty-fifth Street, was produced in the Supreme Court yesterday morning on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Mrs. Whiteside. The girl was brought to court from a convent at Peekskill.

Mrs. Whiteside asserted that she and her husband had disagreed, and that while she was ill in the Roosevelt Hospital last February Dr. Whiteside took the child and sent her to "a wealthy patient" at Aiken, S. C. She traced the child there and back to New York, she says, but was not allowed to see the girl except in Dr. Whiteside's presence.

The case was set for an afternoon hearing. Meanwhile the lawyers for both sides conferred, and Dr. Whiteside's counsel agreed to let his wife have the little girl.

HABEAS FOR NAN PATTERSON.

Lawyers to Try to Have Actress Admitted to Bail.

District Attorney Jerome will probably appear in the Supreme Court to-day to oppose a motion for the discharge of Nan Patterson, the actress, who is locked up in the Tombs on a charge of shooting Caesar Young, the bookmaker. Miss Patterson's counsel, Levy & Unger, yesterday obtained from Justice Amend a writ of habeas corpus to have the woman produced in court today, as they are anxious to secure her release on bail on the ground that there is no evidence that she committed a crime.

Lawyer Unger said yesterday that he would first make an effort to have the court discharge her from custody without compelling her to give bail, as there was not a particle of evidence on which she could be convicted before a jury.

GOLD PROVED TO BE COPPER.

Jersey City Man Thought He Had Unearthed a Fortune.

Herman Southard of 23 Lewis Street, Jersey City, called up the police by telephone yesterday and told them that while fishing in the Hackensack River at the foot of Dey Street he had discovered several bars of gold buried in the mud.

A patrol wagon load of policemen were sent to investigate. They found Southard and the treasure trove, but the bars proved to be copper instead of gold. Twenty-one bars, valued at $500, were found. Each is stamped "C. H. M. Co." It is believed that the copper was stolen from some railroad freight yard.

FATAL MISHAP ON BIG KAISER.

Steam Valve Blows Off and Engineer Dies from Scalding.

A steam valve blew off a pipe in the engine room of the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. at her Hoboken pier yesterday, and Fourth Engineer Bleckschmidt was so badly scalded that he died shortly after 7 o'clock last night in St. Mary's Hospital.

Felix Kayser, an oiler, also was severely scalded, but probably will recover, although he will be confined in the hospital for several weeks.

Italian Notables Arrive.

Fifteen members of the Italian Parliament, who come here to attend the International Parliament Peace Conference, to be held in St. Louis next week, arrived yesterday on the Liguria from Genoa and Naples. The party is headed by Prince Odescoichi, Marquis San Guiliano, and Marquis Compans. They were met at the pier by the Italian Ambassador, Baron Mayor des Planches, Consul General Branchi, and several members of the Italian Chamber of Commerce. The delegation will remain in New York for a week as guests of the Italian Chamber of Commerce, after which they will go to St. Louis by way of Washington, where they will stop to meet President Roosevelt.

ALDERMEN THROW OUT PORT CHESTER PROJECT

Board Sustains Adverse Report of Committee by 41 to 18.

McCALL'S MINORITY REPORT

Road Is Needed, He Declares—Sullivan Says That Men Behind the Application Are Fakirs.

The application of the Port Chester Railroad for a franchise to construct and operate a line in the Bronx, was finally rejected yesterday by the Board of Aldermen, the adverse report of the Aldermanic Railroad Committee being sustained by a vote of 41 to 18. To obtain further consideration from the Board for the Port Chester project, the company will have to institute proceedings for a franchise "de novo."

Alderman John T. McCall, the Tammany leader in the board, presented a minority report favoring the application of the company, as he promised he would when he voted for the Westchester franchise a few weeks ago. Those signing the minority report with him were Aldermen Gass and Goodman. Mr. McCall, speaking to the minority report, said that the financial backing of the Port Chester road was shown by the guarantee of Charles D. Barney & Co., and the demand for the building of the road, he said, was practically unanimous in the districts affected.

"If the professional fakirs who so busily advocated the Port Chester franchise had minded their own business," he declared, "the friction between the company and the Aldermen would long ago have ceased."

Attached to the report was a resolution referring the application for a franchise to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, that a basis of compensation for the city might be reached. Mr. Goodman said he believed that the Railroad Committee should fix the terms, but that, rather than risk a delay, he had agreed to the resolution. He said that Barney & Co.'s offer to guarantee the Port Chester enterprise with a bond of $100,000 was a better guarantee than that on which the Westchester franchise rested.

Alderman Wafer said he had heard nothing definite of any $100,000 bond. As a matter of fact, he averred, all he had heard from the representatives of the road, was a lot of abuse. Those signing the majority report with Mr. Wafer were Aldermen Haggerty, Downing, Sullivan, McCarty, and Gaffney.

"If this Port Chester Company wants a franchise," Alderman Doull said, "let its officers come to the city with an open heart and an open hand."

Alderman Sullivan took the floor in advocacy of the adoption of the Railroad Committee's report. He said that every fact which had come to light regarding the people behind the application for the franchise branded them as fakirs. The board had been informed, and the information was supported by affidavit, he said, that the Port Chester people had endeavored to dispose of any rights they might secure in advance.

Roll call showed only eighteen Aldermen who favored the Port Chester Company. A like vote defeated the proposition to refer the application back to the Railroad Committee, that the Port Chester company might furnish proof of its financial standing and good faith.

FELLED COP AND SAT ON HIM.

Saloon Keeper's Drunken Son Had First Routed Father and Wrecked Place.

Policeman Henry Badger of the Bronx Park Station was so badly beaten by a young man he was trying to arrest last night that he was taken to Fordham Hospital with several serious cuts about the head and face.

According to the police, Thomas McMahon, nineteen years old, went into his father's saloon at 602 King's Bridge Road and demanded a drink of whisky. The father refused and fled after the son struck him on the head with a soda water bottle. Left in possession of the place young McMahon drank all the whisky he wanted and then began to wreck the furniture.

Policeman Badger heard the racket and told McMahon he was under arrest. McMahon's reply was to hurl a cracked bowl at the policeman's head, inflicting a cut three inches long. McMahon then sat upon Badger and beat him over the head with empty bottles. He was still doing this when a patrol wagon with five policemen arrived from the Tremont Avenue Station. McMahon was subdued and locked up.

BLACKSMITH KILLS HIMSELF.

Had Driven Two Wives to Suicide and Threatened to Kill Third.

Albert Sachs, a blacksmith of 645 East Thirteenth Street, drank acid in the yard back of 52 Chrystie Street yesterday morning, before his frightened wife, whom he had threatened to kill. He died just as he reached Gouverneur Hospital in an ambulance.

The blacksmith was a big man with a bad temper, and he had been married three times. On account, it is said, of his treatment of her, his first wife committed suicide, and his second wife, a short time after their marriage, killed herself by drinking poison in Central Park.

Sachs had been drinking heavily of late, and his third wife, twenty-one-year-old Annie Algerman, whom he married two months ago, left him and went to her brother's home in Chrystie Street. Sachs several times after that threatened to kill his wife.

STATEN ISLAND'S FIREMEN.

Chief Croker Wants Paid Men Substituted for the Volunteers.

Fire Chief Croker said yesterday that he is about to recommend to Commissioner Hayes the establishment of a paid Fire Department for Staten Island to take the place of the volunteer companies there. The Chief recently has investigated the situation there, and has decided, he says, that the volunteer department is inadequate, inefficient, and insufficient.

He has come to the conclusion that the situation demands radical action, and that this should be the substitution for the present force of a corps of well-trained, well-equipped, and strategically located paid firemen. He thinks that fifteen companies should be established as the nucleus of the new force. Fire Commissioner Hayes, it is understood, favors the proposition.

Italian Woman Stabs Herself.

Just before she was to have sailed for Italy yesterday to join her husband, Mrs. Maria Modeski, twenty-five years old, stabbed herself with a bread knife in the home of her sister, Mrs. Sophia Cornea, at 58½ Macdougal Street. She is now a prisoner in St. Vincent's Hospital, and her condition is serious. Mrs. Modeski has been living in a home for Catholic Italians at 8 Charlton Street, and has made frequent attempts to escape from her guardians, who say that she is demented.

Night Watchman's Suicide.

William A. Tiedleman, a night watchman, of 325 East Twenty-fifth Street, committed suicide yesterday by swallowing a mixture of oxalic acid and roach poison. Mrs. Tiedleman said that her husband apparently had been on the verge of delirium tremens. His condition, it is said, was due indirectly to his occupation, which was now a slow

MURDER OF BUILDER BAFFLES THE POLICE

Glendale Shooting Followed by Farmhand's Attempted Suicide.

TOWNSMAN SAW THE CRIME

Pflander, the Suspect, Unconscious and Dying—Townsman Can't Identify Him as the Shooter.

The police in Queens worked all day yesterday on a double shooting case, a satisfactory explanation of which they confessed last night they were far from approaching.

John Deickler, an employing builder of Glendale, L. I., was shot and killed on Tuesday night at Fulton Street, near Cooper Avenue, in Glendale. Yesterday morning August Pflander, a farmhand, shot himself at the farmhouse of Charles Lemke, his employer, not far from the place where Deickler was shot. He was taken unconscious to the German Hospital, and had not recovered consciousness at a late hour last night. It is thought that he will die.

Pflander at once fell under the suspicion of knowing about Deickler's death. He had been wounded only once, but two cartridges in his revolver had been discharged, and Coroner Ruoff says that the bullets which ended Deickler's life and which wounded Pflander were of the same sort. Added to this was the testimony that Pflander was a night prowler.

One of the principal witnesses that the police have is Frank Rowe, a towerman in the Long Island Railroad's switch tower near the spot where Deickler was killed. He says that he saw the shooting, but after seeing Pflander last night he said that he could not identify Pflander as the murderer.

Robbery, the police think, was the motive for the murder.

Henry Adicks, who said that he responded to the cries of Deickler for aid and was only a few feet away from him when he was shot, was held in the Flushing Court yesterday as a witness. Coroner Ruoff of Richmond expressed dissatisfaction with Adicks's story as to the shooting, as the man gave only the most meagre details and scarcely any description of the murderer.

As far as could be learned, Deickler went to see his partner about drawing up plans for some new houses which they had contracts to build. When the work was finished the two men went out to a saloon and had some beer. Deickler then walked along Cooper Avenue toward his home, when he was attacked.

Adicks says he heard the builder call for help and ran out of his house on Wykoff Avenue. The highwayman, seeing Adicks, according to Adicks's story, took to his heels, with the men after him. Deickler gained on him, and near the railroad crossing the highwayman turned and shot at the builder. The first bullet went wide, but the next two struck Deickler in the head and chest. As Adicks attempted to seize the man, he says the latter threatened to shoot, and Adicks stopped short. The highwayman then escaped. Deickler died within an hour, without gaining consciousness.

Pflander, the farm hand, was not known around Glendale before he got his job with Charles Lemke. The farmer says that every night after his work was done Pflander left the place and did not return until a late hour. On Tuesday night a member of the Lemke family looked into Pflander's room at 10:30 o'clock and saw that it had not been occupied. The next morning the family saw him, and a little later he was found dying from a bullet that had entered his forehead.

Rowe, the watch-tower man, said yesterday that he saw the shooting from his window fifteen feet above the railroad crossing. The highwayman, he said, had no coat on. The man's face was toward him. Rowe said, but as he was going toward the electric light Rowe could not see him very distinctly.

ODELL NAMES CULLEN TO SUCCEED PARKER

Indicates Party's Plan to Name Cullen and Werner.

HILL MAY URGE REPUBLICAN

His New Programme for Judiciary Ticket Includes Vann for Chief Judge and Cunneen for Associate.

Gov. Odell announced last night that he had decided to appoint Supreme Court Justice Edgar M. Cullen Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals to serve until Jan. 1, filling the vacancy due to the resignation of Judge Parker. This action indicates that the Republicans intend to nominate Justice Cullen for Chief Judge and Justice William E. Werner of Rochester for Associate Judge to succeed Judge Celora E. Martin. Justice Cullen is a Democrat and Justice Werner a Republican, both Supreme Court Justices, and now serving on the Court of Appeals by designation.

This move on the part of the Republicans to raise an issue of non-partisan judicial nominations, to the detriment of ex-Senator Hill's plan for the Democrats to name Justice D. Cady Herrick for Chief Judge and Attorney General Cunneen for Associate Judge, ignoring Judge Cullen, brought out a hint of change in the Democratic plan.

It was learned that if Mr. Hill became convinced that a Herrick-Cunneen ticket would provoke antagonism he would advocate the nomination of Judge Irving G. Vann of Syracuse, a Republican member of the Court of Appeals, for Chief Judge, and Attorney General Cunneen for Associate Judge. It was said that Judge Vann had been approached already to ascertain how he would view a nomination by the Democrats, and that Mr. Hill felt confident Judge Vann would accept such a nomination and could do so with the same propriety that Judge Cullen could accept a nomination from the Republicans.

With Judge Cullen running on the Republican ticket for Chief Judge, and Judge Werner for Associate Judge, and Judge Vann, the Democratic candidate for Chief Judge, and Attorney General Cunneen for Associate Judge, it is the belief of Mr. Hill and his friends that the nonpartisanship issue would be so beclouded that the voters would not be able to make out which side had the better of it.

The fact that Judge Werner accepted a Republican nomination against Judge John Clinton Gray is thought by Democrats to have removed him from the non-partisan judicial class. According to the Democratic organization notion he would not have a whit the best of Attorney General Cunneen so far as non-partisanship went, and as between Judge Cullen, a Democrat on a Republican ticket, and Judge Vann, a Republican on a Democratic ticket, the voters could take their choice.

Should this programme be carried out and Judge Vann be elected Chief Judge in November and a Democratic Governor also chosen, Judge Vann could resign his present Associate Judgeship between that time and Jan. 1, allowing Gov. Odell to name a Republican successor for one year. As Judge Vann would succeed Judge Parker, the result would be to give the Republicans one more member of the Court of Appeals.

Mr. Hill has been charged with a desire to reject Judge Cullen because of the opinion which Judge Cullen wrote in the Dutchess County election fraud cases. Mr. Hill was elected to the United States Senate by a majority of one vote. He was charged with having stolen the State Senate. Judge Cullen in his opinion on the Dutchess County election fraud cases denounced the methods by which the majority of one was obtained and since then, it is charged, Mr. Hill has borne the Brooklyn Judge a grudge.

Mr. Hill resented the notion yesterday that he was influenced by any personal motive in opposing indorsement by the Democratic State Convention of the nomination of Judges Cullen and Werner. The qualifications of Judge Cullen, he said, did not enter into the question. The whole issue, he said, was whether or not the Republicans, in what bids fair to be a Democratic year, should be permitted, not only to name a Republican for the Court of Appeals, but should also be permitted to select the candidate of the Democracy.

If the Republicans were animated by a non-partisan rather than a political motive, it was pertinent to inquire, Mr. Hill thought, why the Republican leaders had not asked for a conference with the Democratic leaders to ascertain what the wishes of the Democratic organization were in the matter.

The Republicans by nominating Judges Cullen and Werner have planned to compel the Democrats either to indorse the Republican judicial ticket or go on record as favoring partisan judicial nominations. In either of these events the Republicans count upon advantage. If the Democratic State Convention indorses Cullen and Werner, then the Republicans would be certain of electing one member of the Court of Appeals and Gov. Odell would have the filling of the two vacancies which would occur by reason of the elevation of Judges Cullen and Werner from members of the court by designation to members by election. Thus the Republicans would be assured of the control of the court for a number of years to come, even though their State ticket would be overwhelmed in the coming election.

As the Democrats view it, the nomination of Cullen and Werner instead of being an earnest of non-partisanship with respect to the judiciary would be merely a clever partisan trick.

KILLED IN A COLLISION.

Boy Was Stealing Ride on Carriage Which Was Hit.

By the collision of a west-bound Eighty-sixth Street crosstown car with a physician's carriage in Central Park early last evening, Frank Scheimer, fifteen years old, was killed, the doctor was painfully if not seriously injured, and Laura Schreyer of 118 East Seventy-sixth Street, a woman patient, received a fractured skull.

Dr. Martin W. Auspitz of 1,486 Lexington Avenue was driving south on Eighty-sixth Street in Central Park shortly after 7 o'clock. He turned sharply across the west track to get out of the way of an east-bound car. When the vehicle was on the west track and the horse between the two tracks the crash came.

With the doctor was Miss Schreyer, and the Scheimer boy was stealing a ride on the back of the carriage. The doctor and the woman patient were thrown into the roadway. The boy was instantly killed, being caught between the car and the back of the vehicle, which was demolished. The horse escaped injury.

Thomas L. Scott, aged twenty-three, of 745 Amsterdam Avenue, the motorman of the west-bound car, was placed under arrest by the police of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station.

The sounds of the smash-up, with the screams of the woman in the carriage and the warnings shouted by the motormen threw the passengers of both cars into a panic.

Dr. Auspitz was hurried to his home. He has a fractured arm and leg.

Miss Schreyer was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital in a critical condition and later removed to her home.

The boy was identified through a card found on his body bearing the name of Christian Solz, a keeper of a delicatessen store at 490 Amsterdam Avenue, where he worked.

LAWSON'S CHARGE DENIED.

City Bank Loan to Rockefeller and Rogers Not on Coppers.

The last article of the series entitled "Frenzied Finance," and written by Thomas Lawson, contained the assertion that at the time of the formation of the Amalgamated Copper Company the National City Bank enabled William Rockefeller and H. H. Rogers to make the big profits which were gotten through the formation of that company by loaning to these two men the sum of $39,000,000 on stock of the Amalgamated Company or its underlying shares as collateral.

The attention of some persons who would be likely to know the facts in the case was called to this statement yesterday, and it was declared that Mr. Lawson's assertion was not correct. It seems that the money was not loaned on stock of the Amalgamated or its underlying securities as collateral. It was actually loaned, but on entirely different securities which had nothing to do with the formation of the Amalgamated Company. The money was not loaned on copper stocks of any kind.

LAWSON WILL DO BUSINESS.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Thomas W. Lawson to-day promptly resented the order of the Boston Stock Exchange to drop the name of Lawson from the firm name of Lawson, Arnold & Co. A circular was sent out by Mr. Lawson in which he says:

"In withdrawing from the firm I agreed to allow my old and lifelong partners to do business under the firm name, but when they ceased to do such business it was to revert to me. * * * Beginning to-day I will do a general banking and brokerage business, under the name of Lawson, Arnold & Co., at the old stand, 33 State Street.

"I will, to proteet myself from the unfair and illegal action of your Exchange in endeavoring to deprive the firm name, Lawson, Arnold & Co., of things that are of value, later, when I have perfected contemplated arrangements, do such business as members of the Boston and New York Exchanges, and I shall absolutely protect my new partners from any retaliatory measures you may attempt."

WAS STARVING NEAR WALDORF.

Widow of Once Well-Known Man Searched Weeks for Work.

Mrs. Mary Harvey, said to be the widow of a once well-known New Yorker, was found in a starving condition on a stoop in West Thirty-third Street, opposite the Waldorf-Astoria, last night. Officer McGuire of the West Thirtieth Street Station found Mrs. Harvey and removed her to the station house. Later she was taken to Bellevue.

Mrs. Harvey told the police that she was thirty years of age and that her husband had been dead eight years. Soon after his death, she said, her funds, owing to bad investments, gave out, and she had to go to work to suport herself and her two little children, Ethel and Luther. Ten months ago she became ill, and was removed to the Metropolitan Hospital, on Blackwell's Island, where she remained until three weeks ago. When she went to the hospital she left her children with relatives at 352 West Fiftieth Street. The relatives being poor people, Mrs. Harvey, as soon as she left the hospital, relieved them of the care of the children, and then began a hunt for work.

For three weeks she searched, but could find no employment. Yesterday, faint and ill from hunger and trouble, she began anew the search. She went into the house on West Thirty-third Street to ask for work, but fell before she could ring the bell.

NELLIE BLY FILES NEW WILL.

In This One Husband Leaves All Property to Wife.

Through her counsel, Robert W. Hardie, Mrs. Elizabeth Cochrane Seaman, also known as "Nellie Bly," widow of Robert Seaman, who died on March 11 last, filed a second will executed by Mr. Seaman on Nov. 20, 1897, in the Surrogate's office yesterday. This will leaves all the property to the widow.

On June 16 last David Otis, an executor and residuary legatee of Robert Seaman, filed a will bearing date of Dec. 24, 1895, in which Mrs. Seaman got only the bulk of the estate, specific bequests being left to a nephew, two nieces, and several grandnephews and grandnieces, amounting to $80,000. The second will is dated in Wiesbaden, Germany.

HOSE CARRIES AIR TO TWO MEN ENTOMBED

Tenement Inspector's Plan Saves Buried Workmen.

UNDER FIFTEEN FEET OF EARTH

Rescuer Falls Exhausted in Race Against Death — Hour's Work Brings Out Men Unhurt.

Buried beneath tons of sand and fast losing consciousness as the air became exhausted in the crevice where they were confined, two young Italian laborers were snatched from the grip of death fifteen feet under a Brownsville street yesterday morning. They had been the foremost of five excavators who were digging a trench for a water pipe under the crossing at East New York Avenue and Bristol Street. When the jolting of a passing car caused a great mass of loosened earth to fall and imprison them the other three managed to jump back in time to escape unhurt, and a score of onlookers sent up a cry of horror at what appeared to be the sudden annihilation of the two less-fortunate diggers.

It was through the quick action of a Tenement House Inspector, Joseph McSweeney, and the aid of a piece of old rubber hose that the two men, Anthony Gonsolmo and Salvatore Caprice, were rescued, after they had suffered and prayed in their dark prison for more than fifty minutes. McSweeney seemed to be the only spectator who thought there was any hope when the cave-in occurred. Grasping the hose, which had been used as a water pipe in mixing mortar near by, he shouted to some workmen to follow him, and with their help began to push the end of the hose into the loose soil under which the excavators lay hidden.

"Get the air in," he shouted, "and we may save them."

Suddenly, after the hose had been pushed down with difficulty, the pressure ceased, and it was evident that the improvised ventilator had struck either a hole or a very soft spot in the sand. The former proved to be the case, and, as the buried laborers afterward said, they felt the rubber piping against their bodies, then realized that fresh air was filtering into what they thought was to be their grave.

They heard McSweeney call through the tube. He talked English, and if they ever knew a few words in that tongue they had forgotten. They shouted back in Italian. There was a long wait in the terrible silence. Far away, through the tube, was the sound of voices. They might have been the shouts of a multitude a mile away.

Finally, a voice in Italian came distinctly through the hose. The speaker was a barber, whom McSweeney had summoned from across the street, and he managed to elicit from Golsolmo and Caprice the information that they were alive. Their half-crazed cries gave little assurance beyond that.

Under McSweeney's orders many men went to work with pick and shovel, racing against time to remove the mass of sand. Soon the workers and the spectators had increased in numbers, until the street was packed with a shouting, excited throng that filled the whole block. The reserves of the Brownsville Police Station were called and came at double quick. Two companies of firemen, one from an engine house and another from a hook and ladder headquarters, turned out to aid in the rescue. A priest, Father Edward Brophy, arrived and stood at the edge of the excavation, ready to descend and administer the last rites as soon as the doomed laborers were reached. Two ambulances, one from St. Mary's and the other from the Bradford Street Hospital, clattered into the crowd, and two young surgeons leaped down into the cut and stood prepared with their instrument bags and restoratives.

It was a race in which sinew counted. One laborer, after plying his pick ceaselessly for half an hour, fell exhausted, and had to be attended by the doctors. An old man, James Haggerty, of 82 Sackman Street, one of the most excited of the spectators who pressed forward at the edge of the cut, was stricken with apoplexy, and would have fallen down into the midst of the rescuers if a policeman had not seized his coattail and hauled him back, unconscious, to safety. The ambulance surgeons worked over him for a while, and then he was carried to a hospital.

When almost an hour had passed, and the rescuers were ready to drop in their tracks, the foremost pick made an opening into the hole where Golsolmo and Caprice were entombed. As the surgeons and priest jumped in, the two men struggled to their feet, dazed, weak, and still praying, as they said they had done continuously, but not much the worst for their experience.

Golsolmo, who was hauled out first, seemed not to think of himself at all, and for a few minutes he did not realize that his companion had been saved, but raved and wept and embraced Caprice. Upon finding that the latter was safe and sound, he was beside himself with joy. Their companions know them by the Italian word that means twins, for in their work they are never separated. Their luncheon was common property, and when the day's labors were over they went home arm in arm to their room at 486 Linwood Street. After receiving a bit of refreshment from the doctors, they worked through the balance of yesterday, and walked home together, as is their wont.

BEAT FATHER, WAS COMMENDED

Son Defended His Mother and Judge Said He Would Have Done Likewise.

Special to The New York Times.

YORK, Penn., Sept. 1.—William Brillhart, a young man of this city, charged by his father with assault and battery, was fined 1 cent in Judge Bittinger's court this morning. Brillhart pleaded guilty to administering a thrashing to his parent, and told the court that he was defending his mother, whom his father was beating.

After the Judge had reprimanded both father and son for fighting he commended the younger man for defending his mother. The Judge remarked that if he were thirty years younger he would have administered a whipping to the elder Brillhart himself for striking a woman.

PRETTY GIRL KIDNAPPED HIM.

Confectioner Explains How He Happened to be Out Without a Nurse.

William P. Jenkins of Balton, Penn., was arraigned before Recorder Stanton in Hoboken yesterday, because he had used the telephone in the store at 131 Washington Street and didn't pay.

Jenkins said that he was forty-two years old and never had drunk anything stronger than tea in his life. He is 4 feet 2 inches in height.

"How did you happen to leave home without a nurse?" asked the Recorder.

"Well," replied Jenkins, blushing as he hesitated, "I was kidnapped by a pretty young girl. She enticed me away."

Jenkins's embarrassment prevented him from giving any details of the kidnapping. He was held to give the police an opportunity to communicate with the Pennsylvania authorities. Jenkins said that he was in the candy business.

WOMAN THRASHES INTRUDER.

Ran Him Out of Her House and Had Him Arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

NYACK, N. Y., Sept. 1.—An intruder, who probably intended burglary, was thrashed and driven from her house by Mrs. Lucretia Dearborn this afternoon. Mrs. Dearborn is a widow, and lives in a fine house on Tallman Avenue.

She was in an upper room when she heard a noise as of some one moving around down stairs. As she entered the upper hall she saw a rough-looking man standing in the doorway leading into one of the sleeping rooms. He raised his hand as if to strike her, and Mrs. Dearborn made a dash for the fellow and pummeled him so that he was glad to flee. Mrs. Dearborn followed him as he ran down stairs, and he plunged through the netting in a rear window, and made his way over the fence to a neighbor's yard.

Mrs. Dearborn telephoned for a policeman, and Chief of Police Fury succeeded later in capturing the intruder. He was locked up to await an examination.

STRIKERS MOB MEAT DRIVER.

Kick Him Until He Becomes Unconscious and Scatter Beef.

After following a meat wagon from the United Dressed Beef Company's yards at Forty-fourth Street and First Avenue to Seventy-third Street, a crowd of about fifty strikers mobbed the driver of the wagon, overturned the vehicle, and threw the meat about the street. The reserves of the nearby police stations were hurriedly ordered out, but no arrests were made, as the strikers managed to get away before they arrived. The driver of the wagon is in the Flower Hospital, where it is said he was suffering from a concussion of the brain.

The wagon was owned by H. Jacobs of 500 Brook Avenue, the Bronx, and was driven by Harry Fisher of 800 Second Avenue. As it was a so-called independent wagon, it did not have the usual guard of policemen. Shortly after it had started a man by the name of Lafayette Nathan and his wife boarded a First Avenue horse car. Nathan is a non-union man and is employed by the United Dressed Beef Company.

At Seventy-second Street he noticed several men board the car, and recognized them as being former employes of the beef companies and men who had been about the streets since the strike commenced. Nathan also saw other men following the wagon driven by Fisher.

Nathan then jumped from the car, and, running to the wagon, told the driver that he was being followed. Nathan then went in search of a policeman and found Policeman O'Connell at Seventy-eighth Street and First Avenue. In the meantime the men had attacked Fisher and pulled him from the wagon. They dragged him to the sidewalk and commenced to kick and beat him

TOKIO, Friday, Sept. 2.—The Japanese left (under Gen. Oku) began pressing the Russians toward Tatzho at dawn this (Friday) morning.

The Japanese casualties since Aug. 29 are officially estimated at 10,000.

TOKIO, Sept. 1.—(8 P. M.)—Tokio rings with shouts and cheers for the victory at Liao-Yang. Lantern-bearing crowds swing through the streets and surge around the Staff offices shouting "Banzai!"

The details received of to-day's fighting are scanty. It is only known that at dawn Gen. Oku's army was hurled against the Russian right centre on the southern line and that the Russians were forced to abandon their line and positions and retreat.

The pursuit of them by the Japanese is now in progress. The result of this pursuit and the result of the fierce battle waged on the eastern line, where Gen. Kuroki is assailing the force which has long screened Liao-Yang, together with the abandonment of the Russian right centre on the southern line, exposes the Russian left. But here the Russian force is so heavy that it may possibly be able to protect and extricate itself.

The question of the occupation of Liao-Yang by the Japanese is in doubt. The official dispatches do not make mention of such occupation, but it is assumed that the Russians are withdrawing through Liao-Yang and that the Japanese possibly occupied the city late to-day.

To-night no estimates are obtainable of the losses on either side. Field Marshal Oyama describes his losses in the morning assault as heavy.

The early success of the attack was somewhat unexpected on account of the strength of the Russians and the nature of the Russian defenses.

It is confidently believed that Marquis Oyama will press the pursuit with desperate vigor and inflict on Gen. Kuropatkin the most crushing blow possible. It is believed that his trophies will prove valuable.

It is the opinion here that the Russians were not able to carry many guns with them, and that they were forced to abandon or destroy vast quantities of stores.

RUSSIANS ADMIT RETREAT.

But the War Office Asserts Kuropatkin Is in a Better Position.

small section of the people of St. Petersburg at a late hour and caused intense excitement and disappointment.

The majority of the inhabitants retired to rest believing that Russian arms had again been successful and that the Japanese attacks had been repelled.

Ugly suspicions, however, had been rife during the day owing to the absence of press telegrams from Liao-Yang, leading to the belief that the communications had been cut by Gen. Kuroki.

The following statement was obtained by The Associated Press from the War Office at 10 o'clock last (Thursday) night.

"Gen. Kuroki's army crossed in force to the right bank of the Tai-Tse River, and it therefore became necessary for the Russians to be in a position to repel a blow in this direction.

"In view of this development in the operations, Gen. Kuropatkin decided to abandon his positions on the left bank and to concentrate his whole army on the other side of the river. This position is the strongest both in character and in site. The great issue will be finally decided there.

"By withdrawing to this position the Russian army avoids the danger of being divided by the river, and enjoys the advantage of compactness.

A Good Move.

"Gen. Kuropatkin's move, therefore, is not to be considered as a retreat, but rather as the carrying out of a well-defined idea."

The withdrawal of the Russians to the right bank involved the abandonment of Liao-Yang which is situated on the left bank. The Japanese took advantage of this to occupy the city, but the sternest part of the fighting is still before them unless Gen. Kuropatkin decides at the last hour again to fall back to the northward.

It is more than likely, however, that he will decide to fight to a finish. The cards are all in his favor, it is believed, now that he has the Japanese divided by the river, thus effectually turning the tables upon his foe.

The determined pursuit by the Japanese of the Russian outposts when Gen. Kuropatkin gave the first order to withdraw was probably due to their anxiety to keep the Russians south of Liao-Yang until Gen. Kuroki should be able to strike from the northeast. Gen. Kuropatkin, however, saw the trap and cleverly avoided it.

A correspondent of The Associated Press at Vladivostok telegraphs that the Japanese are relying on the aid of a gunboat flotilla for future operations against Liao-Yang and Mukden. The gunboats, the correspondent says, have not yet materialized, but in any case they would be in no position to render aid to a force on the right bank in time of need because they would be unable to run the gantlet of the forts at Liao-Yang. The strongest forts are situated on the right bank, where the Russian Army is now concentrated.

Battle Has Beaten Records.

The fighting at Liao-Yang has beaten all records for the desperate valor of the assailants and the stubbornness of the defenders. The whole history of warfare tells of no such bombardments, no such carnage, and no such persistency. Day after day the fight has been resumed at daybreak and kept up with scarce a moment's intermission until after nightfall.

War-scarred veterans scarcely believe the stories which come from the seat of war, and declare that it is beyond human endurance for an army to fight without respite for a whole week, each day of which has exceeded its predecessor in the intensity of struggle and greatness of slaughter. Day after day the thousands of dead bestrewing the battle field have to be removed. The Japanese have invented new methods to incinerate the heaps of dead, comrades taking charge of the ashes for the honors of burial in Japan. The wounded present a most serious problem, as they tax the transport capacity on either side to the uttermost.

The most difficult problem, however, is the bringing up of supplies of food and ammunition to every point of the fighting line.

Never has such a bombardment been known. An eye witness of the battle of Vafangow told The Associated Press correspondent that many officers suffered nervous prostration owing to the terrible roar of the artillery, and one military attaché had to be invalided home for the same reason. Yet the artillery fire at Vafangow was far inferior in intensity to that at Liao-Yang.

Up to the hour of filing this dispatch the War Office has not given out the details of the fighting of yesterday, but it is believed that this fighting exceeded in fierceness that of any pre-

Liao-Yang yesterday aroused suspicions that changes of importance were proceeding which the military censors did not wish to be made known.

A telegram from The Associated Press correspondent at Mukden, filed at 9:27 P. M. yesterday, states that the train service between Mukden and Liao-Yang has been interrupted, but the dispatch does not mention whether telegraphic communication is open.

Kuroki's First Attempt Failed.

According to a dispatch from Liao-Yang, Gen. Kuroki made his first attempt to cross the Tai-Tse River late Tuesday evening under cover of a heavy bombardment of the extreme Russian left. The Japanese artillery, which had been firing uninterruptedly for fourteen hours that day, ceased about nine o'clock and then suddenly reopened at about eleven to conceal Kuroki's preparations for crossing the river. These preparations necessitated the establishment of a ponteon bridge, as the river was not fordable lower than Sakankankwantun. The pontoons must have been floated down the stream.

The efforts of the Japanese to cross the river on Tuesday were not successful, and Gen. Kuroki therefore ordered a portion of his army to ford it at Sakankankwantun.

Gen. Kuropatkin was unable to prevent the passage of the river owing to the distance from Liao-Yang, about twenty miles, but for the same reason the Japanese were unable to bring the forces which gained the right bank into action immediately.

Gen. Kuropatkin heard of the passage of the Tai-Tse at Sakankankwantun after 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening, and immediately gave orders for his men to fall back on the main positions. This move is explained by the desire to collect a strong force with which to repel a flanking movement from the northeast.

The Japanese repeated the attempt to throw pontoons across the Tai-Tse near Liao-Yang during Wednesday night, again under cover of a bombardment, and this attempt is believed to have been successful. Severe fighting may therefore be expected immediately northeast of the city.

The action of the Japanese commander in throwing a force across the river in the face of a strong enemy is considered here to be extremely rash, and the position of this force, isolated from the main Japanese army by a deep river, may easily become desperate.

KUROKI'S FLANKING MOVE.

Russians Fell Back on Their Main Works Before Their Retreat.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 1.—Gen. Kuroki's force to-day crossed the Tai-Tse River, northeast of Liao-Yang, on pontoons.

The battle at Liao-Yang last night continued until midnight with frightful slaughter.

The Japanese at last succeeded in getting a column across the Tai-Tse River, and at 8 P. M. Gen. Kuropatkin gave the order to fall back on the main works; but owing to the Japanese pressure this movement was not executed. The armies slept in their positions.

Official advices to-day—at any rate, those given out—were very meagre. At 7 P. M. the War Office said it was unable to confirm a dispatch from Tokio to The Associated Press announcing that the Russian right and centre before Liao-Yang had fallen back. It was pointed out that Gen. Kuropatkin might have repeated his order of last night to fall back on the main positions.

It was suggested in some quarters that Gen. Kuropatkin was too busy in the midst of the gigantic battle to prepare reports for publication, and it was also said that his reports to the Emperor contained strategic information which could not be published.

Later the news that the Russians had left Liao-Yang was made public.

The best information obtainable now is that 500,000 men, with about 1,500 guns, are fighting in Manchuria.

TOKIO, Sept. 1.—(8 P. M.)—At daybreak to-day the Japanese army on the left delivered a fierce and successful assault against the heights to the west of Hsin-lin-Tun and the high ground to the west of Shou-shan-Pao. It pierced the Russian lines, and probably later forced the retirement of the Russian troops from their positions on the right and centre.

Marquis Oyama telegraphs that his losses in these assaults were heavy.

Additional details of the fighting clearly indicate its desperate character.

The Japanese have changed the method of numbering their armies since their union, calling Gen. Kuroki's army the right, Gen. Nodzu's the centre, and Gen. Oku's the left.

A portion of the left column of the right wing, after dislodging the Russians occupying an eminence north of Hsu-chia-Kow toward evening on Aug. 30, was exposed to a violent attack by the reinforced Russians, and retired during the night to a ridge south of Hsu-chia-Kow, where the Japanese held their position. The Russians prepared to follow up their attack, but desisted.

The right and centre of the right wing commenced a movement at 11 o'clock on the night of Aug. 30, crossing the Tai-Tse River near Lien-tao-Wan, and advancing toward Huang-ku-Fen.

The Russian artillery fire against the right column of the Japanese centre abated somewhat yesterday. The infantry fight continued unabated. The Japanese held their positions.

...mpse southwest of Hsia-lin-Tun. This ground proved to be an advantageous point from which a final and effective charge was delivered at dawn to-day, bringing the first victory.

The centre column after repulsing the Russians in a night attack, pressed the Russians against the railway, aided by a portion of the left column, and succeeded in repulsing a series of assaults.

The Russians continued to hold an eminence west of Shou-shan-Pao, and defied all efforts to dislodge them. The eminence was finally taken by storm this morning.

The entire left wing, with all its force, continued to attack the Russian line throughout yesterday. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a force of Russians appeared five miles northwest of Shou-shan-Pao. The Japanese reserves attacked it.

Late last night a telegram was dispatched to the General Staff at Tokio, saying that the left wing, with all its guns, would renew the attack. Afterward it charged against the enemy's position.

JAPAN WARNS NEUTRALS.

Will Seize Any Ship Which Takes Out the Askold's Crew.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 1.—The Japanese Consul to-day notified the Consuls of neutral nations that any ship leaving port with the crews of the Russian cruiser Askold and the torpedo-boat destroyer Grozovoi aboard will be captured by the Japanese warships still outside the harbor of Shanghai.

A Japanese torpedo boat entered the harbor at 11:30 to-day. It is thought she came for dispatches for the fleet.

Repair work on the Askold and the Grozovoi has been stopped by order of the British Minister, the dock at which the repairs are being made being owned by British citizens.

China has ordered that the paroled crews of the Askold and Grozovoi return to Russia.

JAPANESE STRATEGY TRIUMPHS.

Russians Thought Liao-Yang Impregnable—What the Victory Means.

With the fall of Liao-Yang Japanese strategy has crumbled to pieces the elaborate plan for the defense of Manchuria that was adopted by the Russian commanders almost a year ago when they were preparing for war with Japan.

Millions of dollars worth of stores, positions that the best engineers of Russia have planned and that have cost many months' toil and fortunes to build, and finally control of the great valley of the Liao, are the prizes that the Japanese have gained and the Russians have lost by the brilliant flanking movement that has carried Gen. Kuroki's ever victorious army over a river and into position to threaten the destruction of Gen. Kuropatkin's entire force.

According to the scheme adopted by Viceroy Alexieff and his advisers at the beginning, Liao-Yang was to be the great citadel, where if the worst came the armies of the Czar could take a stand and beat off the forces of the Mikado. It was here that Gen. Kuropatkin had laid his "trap," where the Japanese were to be crushed after they had been drawn far into the interior, so far that their communications could be cut by the Cossacks, while the Russian infantry crushed them in front.

Great storehouses had been built and packed full of corn, wheat, rice, and tinned foods of all sorts fit for the army. Great stores of ammunition were also gathered in arsenals. Elaborate forts with covered ways had strengthened the defense of the great walls of the city, and it was believed that a Russian army could take refuge there, and that nothing except a slow process of starvation could defeat it. At any rate, its defeat was regarded as beyond the power of the Japanese.

Field Marshal Oyama's strategy in the taking of Liao-Yang has been of the kind that has carried the Japanese armies always to victory over the troops of the Czar. It has been what one European critic called the application of jiu-jitsu to warfare, the gain of valuable positions by the least application of strength and the least loss of power.

This Japanese strategy was first shown in the battle of the Yalu, on May 1. Its chief principles lay in concealment of the strength of the attacking army, and flanking the enemy. Correspondents with Gen. Kuroki then have told how he deceived the Russians as to the force he had gathered in front of An-Tung, on the Korean shore.

Whole roads along which the army marched were hidden by artificial groves erected by the Japanese engineers. Big parks of artillery were hidden in the same way. When the time came to strike apparently the Japanese force was concentrated against the Russian right and center, down the Yalu. These forces the Russians fought with might and main, only to find two Japanese divisions suddenly across the Yalu and striking at their left flank.

It was the same at the battle of Vafangow, when Stakelberg first met Oku, on June 15. The Russians believed the Japanese had not more than 60,000 men near Port Arthur, and Stakelberg's army of 50,000 was sent to relieve the fortress. When it finally came into conflict with the Japanese, Stakelberg suddenly found that he had about 75,000 men opposed to him, and that an overwhelming force was striking at his right flank. Only a quick retreat saved him.

Kai-Chow fell into the hands of Oku because Nodzu's army from the east suddenly appeared on Stakelburg's left flank as Oku advanced from the south. It was the same story at Tashi-Chao, when the Japanese at last gained control of Niu-Chwang and its port.

Hai-Cheng fell to the same armies in the same fashion. An-shan-Chan, the last Russian stronghold on the railway protecting Liao-Yang, was given up almost without a fight because Kuroki again drove in on the flank and to tarry would have meant destruction.

That the Japanese first army was making a movement on the Russian flank seemed certain from the opening of the great battle of Liao-Yang. For weeks it had been reported that the Japanese were advancing along the Tai-Tse River, and it is probable that a force of 100,000 men has taken part in the flanking movement. It is now seen that the desperate attacks which the Russians reported, with so much pride, that they had repulsed, were practically monumental feints. Oku and Nodzu doubtless received orders to hammer the Russians with all their strength while Kuroki carried out the strategy which has resulted in victory.

OUKHTOMSKY TO FACE COURT.

Russian Admiral Will Be Tried for Returning to Port Arthur.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—The correspondent at St. Petersburg of the Echo de Paris says that at a council of Admirals, presided over by High Admiral Grand Duke Alexis, it was decided that Rear Admiral Prince Oukhtomsky be court-martialed for having disobeyed the order not to return to Port Arthur.

The court will sit at Vladivostok, Viceroy Alexieff presiding.

JAPANESE IN DEATH PITS

Russians Made Terrible Traps for Foes as They Retreated.

WONDERFUL ARTILLERY DUELS

Under Cover of Guns Bayonet Charge After Bayonet Charge Was Made — Enormous Losses Admitted by Commanders.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 1.—According to official advices the battle at Liao-Yang yesterday was of the most desperate character. It raged continuously from dawn until midnight, and the slaughter must have been immense.

At 8 o'clock in the evening, after holding his outer positions all day in the face of the most desperate charges, Gen. Kuropatkin gave the order to retire upon the main works about the city.

The Japanese assaults during the day had been directed principally against the Russian centre, near the railroad and three miles southwest of Liao-Yang. Nothing approaching the severity of the infantry and artillery fire here had been heretofore experienced in this war. Gen. Kondratovitch's division bore the brunt and suffered the most.

Many Bayonet Charges.

Bayonet charges succeeded each other in rapid succession, while the artillery duel never ceased for a moment. No attempt was made in the official advices no estimate the number of guns the Japanese used, except the statement that they had many hundreds. Each gun carries 150 charges, and these must have been expended many times, as several hundred thousand shots were fired between sunrise and sunset.

Gen. Kuropatkin's order to fall back on the fortifications was probably due to the receipt of information that the Japanese had succeeded in crossing the Tai-Tse River, although Gens. Rennenkampff's and Mandaritoff's divisions had been especially placed in position in this direction to checkmate such a move.

The Japanese crossed at a point called Sakankankwantun, twenty miles east of and somewhat above Liao-Yang, and marched in force directly westward with the evident object of cutting the Russian line of communication with Mukden. Their exact strength was not established, but a division was made out.

Japanese Fall Into Pits.

As soon as the Japanese found that the Russians were retiring from their outer positions in the south, they resumed the attack there, although it was then quite dark. Thus pressed, the Russians arrested their movement to the rear and again faced the Japanese. With a view to eventual retirement from their outer positions, the Russians had dug a large number of pits, with stakes concealed at the bottom. The pits were artfully concealed among the high Chinese corn.

When the Japanese charged after the Russians, they fell into the pits in hundreds and were engulfed and impaled on the stakes, and their lines were thrown into confusion. When the Russians faced about and returned to their old positions they found these death traps filled with dead and dying.

The rattle of musketry and the boom of cannon continued until midnight, when at last silence brooded over the bloody battlefield and the tired soldiers lay down where they had fought, while the worn-out surgeons and nurses ministered to the wounded all night, and the Chinese coolies worked at carrying the wounded into Liao-Yang.

Report from Sakharoff.

Gen. Sakharoff, in a dispatch to the General Staff, dated to-day, on yesterday's fighting, says:

"A portion of Gen. Kuroki's force has crossed to the right bank of the Tai-Tse River at Sakankankwantun. A division of infantry, with cavalry and artillery, crossed first and covered the advance of another detachment. After fording the river the Japanese advanced toward Liao-Yang in two bodies, one due west and the other by way of the Yental mines.

"There was fighting between the two armies all day long, especially between 8 o'clock and midnight, after which the fire slackened.

"As on the previous day the fighting ended with complete success for us. The Russians maintained all their positions, Gen. Kondratenko's detachment especially distinguishing itself. During the last four hours of the day the Japanese fired an immense number of projectiles and the Russian positions were searched by the Japanese shrapnel. The Russians maintained a stubborn defense the whole day. Our troops all day long were exposed to a hail of shrapnel, but defended the positions entrusted to them with desperate bravery.

"After preparing for the assault with artillery the Japanese repeatedly attacked our positions. Some of our advanced fortifications passed into their hands after a stubborn defense. They were, however, each time recaptured by us at the point of the bayonet.

Japanese Losses Enormous.

"The Japanese left a number of dead. After each bayonet engagement our troops found time to dig pits in the fields of Chinese corn in front of some of our positions. These in some cases were completely filled with Japanese corpses.

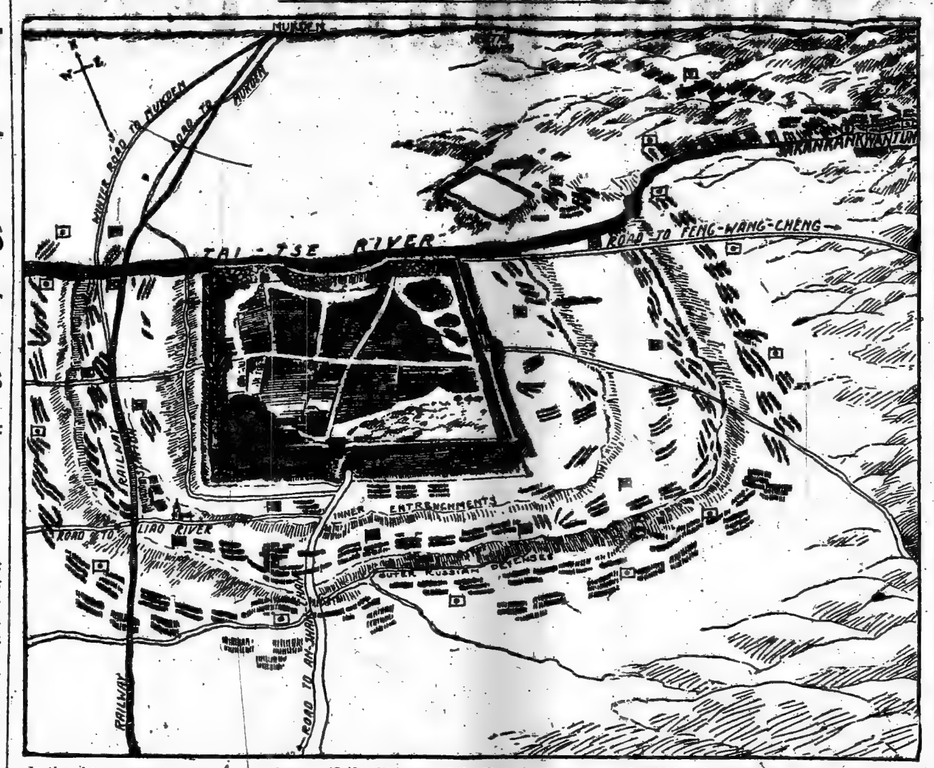
"The enemy's losses must have been enormous. Ours have not yet been even approximately computed, but they are also large. A considerable number of Japanese arms fell into our hands.

"The night passed quietly. Up to 6 o'clock this morning there has been no movement on either side.

"Gen. Kuroki is constructing a pontoon bridge at a ford crossing the Tai-Tse River.

"Gen. Stakelberg was among the wounded, but he retained command of his army corps, although he was no longer in chief command of the Southern Army, which had been consolidated under Gen. Zaroubaieff.

HOW GEN. KUROKI FLANKED THE RUSSIANS AND FORCED THEIR RETREAT



In the above map one may see at a glance how Gen. Kuroki accomplished the flanking movement that turned the tide of battle at Liao-Yang.

While part of Kuroki's army on the east, Gen. Nodgu on the south, and Gen. Oku on the west, were hammering away at the Russian semi-circular line of defenses around Liao-Yang, Gen. Kuroki bridged the Tai-Tse River with pontoons at Sakankankwantun.

He hurried a column across and, driving the Russian cavalry before him, sent part of his troops down the north bank of the river and another part toward the railroad in the direction of the Yental mines.

Liao-Yang, abandoned by the Russians yesterday, was fortified with an elaborateness only excelled at great permanent strongholds, such as Gibraltar and Port Arthur.

The works around the city have been described as marvels of engineering skill, with galleries, for the protection of the gunners, connected by telephones and defended by wire entanglements and mines. The outlying positions included trenches construeted according to the most improved modern plans, in which, when necessary, the soldiers could sleep in comparative comfort.

It was declared that Gen. Kuropatkin would not order his troops into the semi-permanent works except as a last resort. When the great battle began the Russian line occupied a semicircle several miles to the southward of the city and ending at each side of the Tai-Tse River. After being forced from the outer positions into the main defenses the Russians were forced by Kuroki's flanking movement out of the city itself.

According to all Russian accounts it was Kuropatkin's one desire to "lure on" the Japanese to the plain in front of Liao-Yang shown on the above map. With this object in view Gen. Veltchko, an eminent Russian engineer, had been engaged for months in directing the construction of the defenses.

Desperate Japanese Attacks.

LIAO-YANG, Aug. 31, (Delayed.)—A Russian correspondent of The Associated Press sends the following from the southeast front:

"After midday the Japanese concentrated the strength of all their artillery fire against Hill No. 98 and the village of Naotum, endeavoring to break into our left. At the same time they viciously attacked our west line to the right of the hill.

"Attack followed attack for three hours. Between 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon we repulsed three headlong charges against our line. After this the Japanese, with the strength of all their batteries, opened fire along the whole southern front, but this attack, too, was driven back with what seemed tremendous loss, although it was impossible to tell clearly what happened amid the shell fire and fighting. The roar of siege guns, mortar batteries, and mixed volley firing went on until darkness set in.

"To the north a storm accompanied by thunder and lightning broke, while along the front thousands of shells were bursting constantly. It seemed like a magnificent display of fireworks, beggaring description.

"As a result of the exhausting efforts on the part of the Japanese, our position on the eastern front is becoming stronger."

M. Kiriloff, one of The Associated Press correspondents, who had been following the operations of Gen. Zaroubaieff's army, was shot through the lungs while on the firing line south of Liao-Yang to-day.

The News Received in Tokio.

TOKIO, Sept. 1.—The united Manchurian armies of Japan have engaged in a desperate attack upon Liao-Yang, where Gen. Kuropatkin has concentrated every available Russian soldier. Victory was in the balance, and the battle was a draw when the weary soldiers bivoucked last (Wednesday) night. Victory at Liao-Yang means the domination of Manchuria and possibly the end of the Autumn campaign.

The Japanese are attacking from the south and from the east. The right wing of the column attacking from the south keeps in touch with the left wing of the column in the east.

Following the preliminary successes of the 29th south of Liao-Yang, Field Marshal Oyama, the commander of the Japanese forces in the field, promptly marshaled the united forces, and at dawn of Aug. 30 a desperate attack upon all the Russian positions was made.

The Japanese found the Russians holding a long chain of splendidly fortified positions, with a tremendous force of artillery. The Japanese artillery opened the way, but these preliminarary attacks generally failed to give an opportunity for an open assault.

The Japanese First Army, after occupying the right bank of the Lan River on Aug. 27, continued its forward movement and renewed the assault against the remaining Russian positions at Hung-sha-Ling, where the enemy held out the longest and the most stubbornly. The Japanese finally took the last Russian positions at this place. Following these successes, the Japanese immediately advanced, driving back small bodies of Russian soldiers sent out to impede their movement.

From the night of Aug. 27 to the morning of the 29th the Japanese attacked the Russian positions on the ridge to the east of San-yu-Tzu. The Russians were finally dislodged from these ridge positions, but the Japanese left was unable to advance on account of the forceful resistance made by the Russian troops who occupied the heights to the southeast of Hsiang-shan-Tzu. Two divisions of Russians crossed a bridge constructed over the Tai-Tse River to the north of Siao-tan-Tzu and retreated to the right bank of the river.

Russians Checked Advance.

The Russians checked the advance of all the Japanese forces coming up from the south along the Hai-Cheng—Liao-Yang road.

The Japanese resumed the attack on the 29th. The Russians on the Hai-Cheng—Liao-Yang road appeared to be occupying a line of ridges south of Liao-Yang. These were fortified strongly and were occupied by a numerous force of the enemy.

The Japanese bivouacked the night of Aug. 29 in front of these positions.

At dawn of Aug. 30 all the Japanese armies conjointly attacked all the Russian positions on the southern front. The Japanese centre attacked with all its strength.

The left column of the First Army continued the attack upon Teng-chia-Fang and Yayu-Tai, but the Russians there received reinforcements and it was impossible to dislodge them.

A separate column was dispatched from the right column of the Second Army and occupied a ridge to the south of Tsa-fang-Tun, whence it opened a cannonade upon the enemy at 6 o'clock on the morning of the 30th. The first artillery attack proved successful, and at 10 o'clock the Russians, having been reinforced from the direction of Liao-Yang, made an endeavor to retake the ground they had lost.

Throughout the afternoon of the 30th additional reinforcements reached the Russians until their strength was estimated at two divisions and fifty or sixty guns.

The Japanese continued to attack desperately, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon a junction was effected with the left column of the First Army. The Russians were dislodged from Tsa-fang-Tun and that vicinity.

The Russians fought with dogged determination until nightfall.

The main force of the Japanese right, with a portion of the left, attacked the southern Russian line in the neighborhood of Hang-chia-Tun and Hsin-lin-Tun, and opened the attack against the ridges west of Hsin-lin-Tun with vigorous shelling. The Russians defended these positions against this preliminary attack with energy and did not allow an opportunity for an open assault.

The main force of the Japanese left also attacked Russian positions. The Russians used machine guns against the Japanese with effect, and the Japanese were unable to press their attacks home.

During the day the Japanese left wing was reinforced with a detachment from the reserves. The Japanese artillery, which attacked the Russian left, poured in a fire into the rear of the Russians at Shou-shan-Pao.

Russian Artillery Strong.

The operations of the day did not succeed in developing the Russian strength in all directions. By the constant arrival of reinforcements it was seen that the guns at Shou-shan-Pao alone finally numbered 100.

The Russian positions at all points were strongly fortified and the auxiliary defenses blocked infantry attacks.

During the night of Aug. 30 the Russians at Shou-shan-Pao attacked the Japanese left, and repulsed that portion of the left which occupied Shao-yan-Zui. The Russians also made a night attack upon the ridge south of Shou-shan-Pao.

On the morning of Aug. 31 both armies renewed their attack with vigor. Up to a late hour in the afternoon neither contestant had gained any visible result. The Japanese were fighting bravely against superior forces.

A portion of the Japanese right succeeded in capturing an eminence to the west of Hsin-lin-Tun at noon of the 31st.

Gen. Kuroki's casualties from Aug. 24 to Aug. 28 amounted to 2,255. The other casualties have not been reported.

It is presumed they were heavy on account of the enormous forces engaged and the nature of the attack the Japanese made against strongly defended positions, the second Russian line proving stronger than that at An-shan-Chan.

Saw Battle from Hill.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The correspondent of the Temps at Liao-Yang, telegraphing on Wednesday at 9:50 P. M., says:

"I watched the battle Tuesday, standing beside Gen. Stakelberg, from the top of a peak 900 feet high, forming a marvelous observatory of the field. All the efforts of the Japanese were directed against the south and southeast. They advanced steadily through fields of Chinese corn.

"The Russians in the trenches fired when the Japanese were 400 yards away. The Japanese constantly reinforced their front lines. One division turned the Russian right flank.

"At 4 in the afternoon the Russians brought up part of their reserves, and a deafening cannonade followed. The peak where I stood was swept with shrapnel. Gen. Stakelberg barely escaped being killed by a shell which burst six feet from us. Gen. Stakelberg's injury was slight, and he did not leave the field.

"Gen. Marozovsky, who was seriously wounded, commanded the artillery brigade. He distinguished himself during the suppression of the Boxer troubles in China."

JAPAN'S TERMS OF PEACE.

Prisoners at Vladivostok Tell of Their Country's Hopes.

VLADIVOSTOK, Sept. 1.—The ambitious hopes of Japan are freely discussed by Japanese prisoners here. All of them are confident that naval supremacy will enable Japan to dictate terms of peace, which will include, according to them, the possession of Port Arthur, Dalny, Korea, Saghalien, Kamchatka, and the Commandeer Islands, leaving Manchuria in Russian hands.

The Japanese prisoners claim as the first victory for their country the preventing of the Russians from making a base of Vladivostok, from which place hostile fleets would effectually have imperiled communications in Korea, rendering a land campaign impossible. The Japanese, they say, gained this victory by forcing a war in the Winter, when Vladivostok was icebound.

The Japanese, according to them, are now preparing to form a river flotilla like Gen. Kitchener's Nile expedition, which will be able to ascend the Liao River and its tributaries as far as Liao-Yang and Mukden and so harass Gen. Kuropatkin as to compel him to retreat to Harbin, thus effectually preventing a march for the relief of Port Arthur, for the Japanese declare that the capture of this fortress is their chief aim.

KUROPATKIN NOW IN DESPERATE POSITION

English Expert Says His Army May Be Annihilated.

KUROKI PROBABLY IN FRONT

If Retreat Is Cut Off Disaster Seems Certain—Russians No Longer Aided by Defenses.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The Times's military correspondent, discussing the situation at Liao-Yang as disclosed in to-night's telegrams, says:

"The situation is now extraordinarily interesting and dramatic. The Russian army is in full retreat across a river which it has doubtless bridged in several places, but which must still seriously impede rapid movement.

"In the rear are two armies thirsting for its blood. On the flank, and not improbably across the front, the Japanese First Army is ready to fight to the death to arrest its retreat.

"There are no more forts, trenches, and dominating positions. Matters are equal. The best army will win.

"Memories of Vionville and Hanan will occur to all readers of military history. Will Kuropatkin suffer the fate of Bazaine, or will he pass over the body of the First Army as Napoleon passed over the Bavarians who presumed to arrest his march?

"Another question must have been decided by nightfall to-day. Unless Kuroki is making for some position further afield than we think, he may be late and only be able to attack Kuropatkin on the flank, but he and his capable Chief of Staff are not likely to miss the chance of a lifetime.

"It is the decisive stroke of the war, and every man of the First Army must know it. The prize of victory is the destruction of the Russian army and mastery in East Asia.

"There is only one course open to Gen. Kuropatkin if he has abandoned the trenches and begun to cross the river. He must make for the First Army with head down and force a passage at all costs. He must not only defeat but annihilate it.

"If Gen. Kuropatkin, in the truly horrible position in which he is placed, can make daylight and bring away the best part of his army and guns he will live in history.

"The chances are that the fatal date Sept. 1 will have seen a second Sedan."

HAMMERING PORT ARTHUR.

Tokio Now Places Its Fall at Last Week in September.

TOKIO, Sept. 1—2 P. M.—Popular estimates of the date of the fall of Port Arthur incline to the last week in September.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Interesting reports come from Tiensin and Cheefoo that the Japanese have effected a landing of troops and the capture of two small forts near Tiger's Tail, three-quarters of a mile from Port Arthur and near the lighthouse at Liaoti Mountain, and that the attack is being vigorously pressed.

The Daily Mail's Ku-pan-Tse correspondent, telegraphing under date of Aug. 31, says that 35,000 Japanese are en route from Dalny to Hai-cheng by railway. Originally they were intended to reinforce the besiegers of Port Arthur, the correspondent adds, but Field Marshal Oyama, Commander in Chief of the Japanese forces in Manchuria, was satisfied that they were not required there, and therefore sent them north.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 1.—The Emperor has received the following dispatch from Gen. Stoessel, commanding the Russian troops at Port Arthur, dated Aug. 28:

"The gracious telegrams of your Majesties have been received with resounding hurrahs before the enemy, and have redoubled the strength of the defenders and the heroic spirit of the troops. From Aug. 23 to to-day inclusive all the daily assaults have been repulsed, with the help of God."

CHE-FOO, Aug. 31,—(Delayed in Transmission.)—Severe fighting occurred at Port Arthur Aug. 27, when the Japanese, moving from Shuishiying, attempted to capture Palungshan, which is south of Shuishiying and west of the railway. The Japanese made two assaults between 4 and 8 o'clock in the morning.

They were repulsed both times. A prisoner subsequently taken places their loss at 1,045 killed and wounded. For one hour afterward shells were thrown from Shuishiying into Port Arthur.

The above information was brought here to-night by a Chinese who speaks excellent Russian, and who was employed at the police station in Port Arthur, which place he left on the evening of Aug. 29.

At 4:30 o'clock, Aug. 28, the Japanese attacked Fort No. 6, on the northeast portion of the right flank. This fort is a new and strong one. After three hours' fierce fighting, during which the Japanese endured a cross fire from Fort No. 8, the Japanese succeeded in entering the fort. When the Russians were safely away from Fort No. 6 and the Japanese flag waved over it, several forts concentrated their fire on it, and the Japanese were compelled to retire.

Heavy firing was heard by the Chinese on the night of Aug. 29.

CHE-FOO, Sept. 1.—Sir Robert Hart, Chief of the Chinese Marine Customs Service, has decided that the steamship Independent be allowed to proceed for Niu-Chwang unhampered.

The Independent, under charter to the Osaka Steamship Company to convey food supplies from Japan to Niu-Chwang, was detained when she entered Che-Foo by the Chinese customs authorities on the ground that she violated the neutrality of the port. She carried contraband of war. The question of what should be done with her was referred to Sir Robert Hart.

RUSSIAN STEAMER DESTROYED.

Strikes a Mine While Clearing Channel at Port Arthur.

TOKIO, Sept. 2.—A Russian steamer engaged in clearing the channel at Port Arthur struck a mine and was destroyed last Wednesday.

SAY THE RAILWAY IS CUT.

London Papers Think Kuropatkin Began His Retreat Too Late.

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 2.—This morning's newspapers comment upon The Associated Press dispatch from Mukden saying that the train service between Mukden and Liao-Yang is interrupted, and that the roads are impassable as the most important news from the scene of hostilities in the Far East. The papers say that there is only one explanation of it—that the Japanese have seized the railway between Liao-Yang and Mukden.

Correspondents of The Daily Chronicle and The Daily Mail assert that the Japanese occupied Liao-Yang yesterday.

There is no official confirmation of these statements, but the latest official dispatch to the Japanese Legation here reports the capture of the heights southwest of Liao-Yang at dawn yesterday. This dispatch adds:

"Thereupon the enemy in the south of Liao-Yang commenced to retreat. Our armies are now pursuing him."

A special dispatch from St. Petersburg, which is not confirmed from any other source, reports that Gen. Linevitch, from Vladivostok, is within two days' march of Mukden with 30,000 troops.

The Standard's Tokio correspondent says that dispatches received there from Peking are to the effect that China is constantly increasing her military forces on the neutral side of the Liao River, and that she has ordered Gen. Ma firmly to enforce the rights and duties of neutrality in the event of the Russians being defeated at Liao-Yang and attempting to enter neutral territory.

Commenting upon the situation in the Far East, all the morning newspapers discuss the problem whether Gen. Kuropatkin will be able to extricate his forces or whether Marquis Oyama will succeed in completing the victory by enveloping and destroying the Russian Army. The consensus of opinion is that Gen. Kuropatkin's position is most perilous.

The absence of telegrams from Liao-Yang, together with the news that the railway is interrupted, the newspapers regard as showing that Gen. Kuropatkin has begun his retreat too late.

UNIONS MOVE FOR PEACE, WEARY OF LONG FIGHT

Building Trades Alliance Preparing Settlement Plan.

FEARS GROWING DISCONTENT

Members of Trades Hit by Row They Didn't Start Urge Their Representatives to Act.

Despite the turning down of the peace proposition of President William K. Nason of the Building Trades Alliance at its meeting on Wednesday, the Alliance authorized a statement by the President yesterday to the effect that a plan for the settlement of the labor troubles was in course of preparation. It is known that the thousands of idle men who had no hand in starting the tie-up are becoming more and more discontented every day, and that the delegates to the Alliance, becoming alarmed at this, want to hasten a settlement.

The statement of Nason yesterday was made after the regular meeting of the Alliance. He said:

"At the suggestion of several prominent builders, who are involved in the present trouble, a joint conference has been arranged for in order to end the fight if possible. Nothing will be done before Labor Day except to make arrangements for the conference."

This was all that Nason would say, but it was learned that the peace plan provided the return of the idle workers as soon as possible. It may be that this is a provision that must be carried out preliminary to the conference, and it is admitted that the idle mechanics are grumbling at the delegates for keeping up the strikes.

The plan by which committees of individual unions will meet the individual associations of the employers in their respective trades and try to fix on some basis of settlement, it was stated, would be acted on favorably. The turning down of Nason's proposition to this effect by the Alliance on Wednesday, it was learned on high authority, was a perfunctory performance.

It is believed that if agreements are reached with the unions in the alliance, the question of formal recognition of the Alliance as a body by the Building Trades Employers' Association will be waived. The employers will not recognize the alliance, but outside of that do not care whether the unions belong to it or not.

Meantime, pending the result of the peace plan, war continues on both sides. James J. Daly, Chairman of the Press Committee of the alliance, made the announcement yesterday that the Tile Layers Helpers' Union had gone on a general strike.

The helpers are apprentices, but some of them are good tile layers long before they are admitted to the union. The strike, Daly said, was prompted by a request on the part of the Grate, Tile and Mantel Association, composed of employers, for the helpers to assist the employers by furnishing men to lay tiles who would work with non-union men.

Lewis Harding, Chairman of the Press Committee of the Employers' Association, made the announcement last evening that new unions of plasterers and plumbers had been formed under the arbitration agreement. The plumbers' union which has been formed has behind it the National Association of Plumbers and Gasfitters, which a year ago expelled Local No. 2, the organization to which "Diamond Phil" Weinseimer belongs. Representatives of the National body have been in this city for some time forming new locals.

Mr. Harding said that the new plumbers' union would supply 300 men to the Employers' Association on Tuesday and the plasterers 400 on Wednesday. Mr. Harding also said there was nothing in the report that the new plasterers' union was started by the non-union plasterers who formerly worked at "Dreamland," Coney Island. He further said that limited forces of men had been supplied to the new Times building, the Trinity building, and several other buildings.

No one at the Building Trades Club would admit knowing anything of the peace movement, though it has been talked of for several days. The employers declare that they will go right on organizing new unions in the respective trades until the strikes are declared off, and that these unions, as was the case last year, will be the only ones to be recognized. This does not apply to trades in which no new unions have yet been found if they declare off the strikes in the meantime.

D. A. Post of the General Executive Board of the Brotherhood of Painters arrived here yesterday from Indianapolis, in the hope that he may be able to help settle the trouble.

POLICEMAN A SUICIDE.

Wife Sees Husband Draw Revolver and Shoot Himself.

Joseph P. Taggart, a policeman of the West One Hundred and Fifty-second Street Station, committed suicide in the presence of his wife last night by shooting himself in the right temple at his home, 522 West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street.

Taggart was thirty-six years old and had been on the force for seven years. He had an excellent record, and neither the Captain nor any of his fellow-officers could assign any reason for his act. He distinguished himself on Aug. 18 by rushing into a burning building at 302 West One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street and rescuing Mrs. Hannah Naughton.

Taggart drey his pay yesterday and took it all home to his wife. He had his dinner and started to return to the station house. As he reached the door his wife handed him two letters to mail. He placed them in his pocket, and then taking the revolver from his hip pocket shot himself through the head.

McADOO INSPECTS BRIDGE.

Also Says He Expects Walsh and Cottrell to Agree.

Commissioner McAdoo, who has been devoting much attention to the traffic conditions, especially during the rush hours at the Brooklyn Bridge, made an inspection of the Manhattan terminal yesterday morning, together with Bridge Commissioner Best, with a special eye to the adaptability of the latest scheme of Capt. O'Brien, head of the Traffic Department, to relieve the dangerous conditions by the construction of an inclined tunnel from the Park Row side, up and under the various loops. Mr. McAdoo was assured by the Commissioner that the plan was perfectly feasible, and he stated that it would in all probability be carried out, work being started in the near future.

When asked regarding the reported friction between Inspector Walsh and Capt. Cottrell, the Commissioner made a distinction with a difference when he said that Capt. Cottrell had his entire confidence, while he believed that Inspector Walsh was doing his entire duty.

"The fact that they both remain where they are is the best evidence that everything is satisfactory," he said. "If differences exist between them, it would certainly affect good police service, and should this fall below standard I would certainly transfer both of them. If they have differences they had best make them up."

SIGHTSEEING CAR MAIMS BOY.

He Tried to Climb Aboard and Fell Under Wheel.

While one of the big electric sightseeing coaches was carrying a party into Chinatown, via Park Street, yesterday, John Barbieri, ten years old, of 5 Baxter Street, tried to clamber up the side. A hundred other children shouted while the sightseers wondered at the boy's daring. He fell and a wheel of the heavy coach crushed his left ankle so it may have to be amputated.

TAMMANY FOR PALMER.

Wigwam May Vote For Schoharie Assemblyman for Governor.

Tammany Hall is fostering the boom of George M. Palmer of Schoharie for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination and will, in all probability, cast the 105 votes of Manhattan and the Bronx for Palmer when the State Convention meets at Saratoga. As the Tammany vote amounts to nearly one-quarter of the entire voting strength of the convention, composed as it will be of 450 delegates, the information as to Tammany's position caused no little stir in political circles yesterday.

Senator Victor J. Dowling, whom Murphy had placed in charge of the Greater New York campaign by Chairman Cord Meyer of the State Committee, was especially industrious in his Palmer talk.

"You just keep your eye on George M. Palmer," he said. "He is the likely man to be nominated at Saratoga and Tammany is apt to vote for him from the first. He is a thoroughly capable man, and would make a strong candidate. His nomination would be entirely satisfactory to this end of the State."

Mr. Murphy declined to discuss the Governorship in any way whatever, but all his closest associates in the organization last night talked strongly and with conviction that Palmer would be backed solidly in the convention by the Tammany vote, and that he would be nominated.

When it became apparent that Controller Grout would have practically the solid backing of Kings County for Governor, and that David B. Hill was working to get the up-State delegates in line for John B. Stanchfield, the Tammany contingent decided that, as it otherwise might have to be a choice between the McCarren candidate and the Hill candidate, the organization should have a candidate of its own. By taking an up-State man the Tammany leaders believe they have greatly strengthened their position.

Mr. Palmer was in the city yesterday to attend the meeting of the State Committee, but he was absolutely silent on the question of his candidacy.

Around National Headquarters it seemed to be the general belief that an up-State man was more likely to get the nomination than a man from Greater New York. However, it seems to be pretty well fixed in the minds of many of the party managers that if the nomination should come to Greater New York it would come to De Lancey Nicoll, the Vice Chairman of the National Committee. Mr. Nicoll, however, is in no sense a candidate and expresses the belief that he will get all the politics he wants as Vice Chairman without becoming a candidate for anything this year.

DELMOUR LIKES McCARREN.

He of the Croker Old Guard Found Primary Result Pleasing.

Lawrence Delmour, he of the "Croker Old Guard," called at the Thomas Jefferson Building, in Brooklyn, yesterday to see Senator McCarren. The Senator, however, was attending a meeting of the State Committee, and Mr. Delmour, together with Benjamin J. Smith, a Manhattan contractor, who was with him, had to depart without seeing him.

Several leaders who were present declared that Delmour's visit had some mysterious importance, and devoted a great part of the afternoon in trying to find out just what significance it had. Delmour is known to be opposed to the leadership of Charles F. Murphy, and the expert guessers had it that he wanted to talk with McCarren about the best plan to dethrone the Tammany leader. When he was asked what the object of his visit was he said:

"The Democrats of Manhattan think a great deal of Senator McCarren, and they are deeply interested in the primary fight. They are very well pleased with the result of the contest."

Mr. Smith, Delmour's companion, went even further. He said that he believed that the rank and file of Tammany were with Senator McCarren, and that they would give him all the support they could in any fight he might undertake.

MORGAN AFTER BAD VOTES.

Plans to Subpoena Naturalized Citizens on Subway and Public Works.

State Superintendent of Elections Morgan began a systematic round-up yesterday of all of the naturalized voters of the regularity of whose papers there is the slightest suspicion. Mr. Morgan plans having these men examined at the rate of 200 a day. The first batch was subpoenaed to appear at 11 Park Row yesterday, where an additional naturalization bureau has been established by Deputy Superintendent Stowell.

Between now and the day of election Superintendent Morgan expects to have 10,000 naturalized voters examined. All the naturalized men employed on the subway and other public works will be subpoenaed.

WATSON SUITS PALLISER.

Anti-Parker Cooper Union Chairman Supports Populist Ticket.

Melvin G. Palliser, who was the Chairman of the anti-Parker meeting in Cooper Union at which Mr. Bryan spoke, and was one of the organizers of the reception given to Mr. Bryan on his return from Europe, gave out a statement last night in which he said:

"The Democratic Party in this campaign has pledged itself to Republican policies, and as a Democrat who has always voted for the candidates of the party and is opposed to Republican policies, I shall vote for Mr. Watson.

German Democracy's Rally.

First among the German political organizations to come out for the Parker and Davis ticket is the German Democracy of the City of New York, which adopted strong resolutions for the ticket last night at a meeting of the Executive Committee held in the Union Square Hotel. Charles G. F. Wahle, ex-Commissioner of Accounts and Chairman of the committee, presided. The resolutions declare the Republican Party to be dominated by nativistic ideas and also declare that "President Roosevelt stands revealed as a hypocrite and a demagogue, ever ready with word and deed to belittle just consideration for the German-born citizen in this country."

AUTO GOES OVER PARK BRIDGE.

Plunges 20 Feet from East Drive Structure—G. B. Damon Hurt.

While speeding through Central Park early yesterday afternoon, an autqmobile occupied by George B. Damon of Pittsburg and driven by Joseph Landay, a chauffeur, became unmanageable on a bridge in the East Drive and plunged nearly twenty feet into the road. Landay escaped without a scratch, while Mr. Damon, who was unable to get out of the machine, received only a few bruises.

The automobile, a big touring car, entered the East Drive from Sixty-sixth Street at 12:40 o'clock. As it neared the bridge the machine began to act strangely. A moment later it swerved, and, breaking through the iog railing on the east side of the bridge, plunged downward.

As the machine hit the railing Landay jumped out, and landed unhurt on the grass at the top of the embankment. Mr. Damon, however, badly frightened, did not attempt to jump. He was thrown out while the automobile was in the air, and fell just a little to the left of the place where the machine hit.

Several persons, including Policeman Powers of the Park Squad, and Dr. H. S. Bartholomew of 152 West Fifty-seventh Street, saw the accident. Dr. Bartholomew was in an automobile and hurried his machine to the scene. He found Mr. Damon lying on the ground unconscious and at once took means to revive him. In a few minutes he came to, and asked where his watch was. A bystander handed him the

HORNBLOWER SAYS IT'S TIME TO CALL A HALT

Tariff, Imperialism, and Personal Government the Issues.

URGES DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

Chosen President of the College Men's Parker and Davis Club, He Writes a Letter.

Permanent organization of the College Men's Parker and Davis Club was effected yesterday at a meeting of the founders, held at the office of Coudert Brothers at 71 Broadway. William B. Hornblower, Princeton, was the unanimous choice for President, with Frank M. Patterson, Yale, as Corresponding Secretary; Paul Fuller, Jr., Columbia, Recording Secretary, and John Clinton Gray, Jr., Harvard, as Treasurer.

The Vice Presidents selected included James C. Carter, Harvard; J. Frederic Kernochan, Yale; Edward M. Shepard, College of City of New York; John E. Parsons, New York University; John De Witt Warner, Cornell, and John C. Calhoun, University of South Carolina. The Executive Committee consists of Frederic R. Coudert, Columbia; McCready Sykes, Princeton; F. Edge Kavanagh, Harvard; Leslie J. Tompkins, University of the City of New York; Robert Grier Monroe, Princeton; J. Herbert Noble, University of Virginia; Ralph Pulitzer, Harvard; James W. Gerard, Jr., Columbia; Nathan N. Flower, Yale, and Edward D. O'Brien, Georgetown. In addition to the election of officers, an address to college men was issued, stating it to be the object of the organization to interest all college men in the election of Parker and Davis, and to engage in the study of political, social, and economic questions, believing that by so doing the voters can be induced to embrace the doctrines of Democracy.

HORNBLOWER ON ISSUES.

At yesterday's meeting Secretary Patterson read a letter from President Hornblower, written at Southampton, N. Y., as follows:

"I heartily approve of the proposed organization of a club of college men to promote the election of Parker and Davis.

"At each recurring Presidential election, an army of young voters is called upon to choose between the candidates of the opposing parties. While biased to some extent by hereditary partisanship, they are nevertheless looking to the future rather than to the past and are desirous of choosing intelligently and conscientiously for the best interests of the country. This is especially true of college men, whose training, if it has taught them anything, has accustomed them to look upon both sides of important questions and to cast aside prejudice and preconceived opinions when confronted with facts and arguments appealing to their reason and conscience.

"It is eminently proper and desirable, therefore, that college men who have formed definite views upon the political situation should take steps to bring those views to the attention of other college men, and especially of the younger men who are for the first time confronted with the responsibilities of the suffrage and who are desirous of doing their full duty in the exercise of those responsibilities.

"As I have already said, it is the future, not the past, with which such voters are concerned. That the Democratic Party was responsible for the Mexican war or the Republican Party responsible for the infamies of the reconstruction period or the corruptions of the Crédit Mobilier, the Whisky Ring, and the Star Route scandals of the early seventies in the last century, are of no more importance to the voters of to-day than is the controversy over the Jay treaty with Great Britain or the alien and sedition laws of a hundred years ago.

"Nor is it of any importance to them to consider the rights and wrongs of the silver question, although it can never be forgotten that the only Democratic President of this generation saw clearly and stood firmly on the currency question, never swerving for an instant from what he believed to be right, though assailed by denunciations from within and from without his party, while all the time he was upholding almost single-handed the gold standard, which he believed essential to the welfare of all classes, rich and poor alike, and essential to the credit and financial integrity of the Nation.

"If we are to discuss past history, we have to remind our Republican friends that the Sherman Silver act, a sop to the silver Cerberus, was their own handiwork, was the direct cause of the panic of 1893, and was repealed under the urgent insistence of Grover Cleveland at a special session of Congress, called by him for that express purpose.

"The silver question, however, so far as the present campaign is concerned, is as dead an issue as the question of slavery. Not only was the silver plank abandoned by the Democratic Convention at St. Louis, but the courageous, emphatic, and explicit telegram of the Democratic candidate, asserting his unalterable adherence to the gold standard, followed, as it was, by an overwhelming ratification of his nomination by the convention, constitute a binding tripartite contract between the candidates, the convention, and the American people, that the gold standard shall be maintained. Such a contract is far more effective and conclusive than the plank of any platform—even if forced upon the candidate as was the gold plank of the Republican Convention of 1896.

"Turning, then, from dead issues to the living present, what are the questions confronting us?

"The three most important questions of the day on which the parties are divided are in my judgment:

"(1) The tariff, (2) imperialism, and (3) personal government as opposed to government by law.

"On these three questions the Democratic Party and its candidate are on the right side, and the Republican Party and its candidate are on the wrong side.

"The Republican Party glories in its record of high protectionism and declines to promise any definite relief to the tariff payers, while its candidate, notwithstanding his high-sounding praises of personal independence and civic courage, meekly acquiesces in the tariff programme of his party. The Democratic Party, on the other hand, stands for the tariff payer as against the tariff beneficiaries and promises relief from the unjust exactions of the tax gatherer and the unjust gains of the protected producer, while its candidate unhesitatingly promises such reform in the tariff as circumstances call for and as a hostile Republican Congress will permit, standing where Grover Cleveland stood, for the people as against the overprotected industries.

"This does not mean and never has meant an onslaught upon vested interests. It does mean, however, a reduction in excessive profits fostered by unnecessary taxation, increasing the cost of commodities to the consumer.

"The mendacious assertion of the Republicans, which has become an article of faith among true believers in the protectionist creed, that the panic of 1893 was produced by the so-called Wilson tariff of 1894, is only equaled by the equally mendacious assertion that prosperity and protectionism have always co-existed, an assertion which requires one to ignore the panic of 1873 and the hard times continuing till 1877 under the blessings of a Republican tariff.

"Sound political economy enforces the demand of sound political morality in favor of tariff reduction and against high protectionism.

"On the question of imperialism, vital as it is to the future welfare of our country, the Democratic Party and its candidate stand for liberty as against despotism, for National self-restraint as against National aggrandizement by conquest and subjugation of inferior peoples in remote quarters of the globe. A republic is truly great only when it is true to its ideals and its traditions. Lust of conquest and pride in military prowess are not our American ideals or our American traditions.

TIME TO CALL A HALT.

"It is time to call a halt in the march toward foreign aggression and belligerent [illegible]

posed to government by law is also squarely presented to us for our choice. That which distinguishes Anglo-Saxon institutions most strikingly from the institutions of other countries is our constant insistence upon the paramount authority of law.

"The spectacular accomplishment of speedy results without regard to methods and in defiance of limitations of Constitutional, municipal, or international law is a most dangerous departure from our American habits and our American standards of political right and wrong. If allowed to pass without rebuke from the people, such a course of conduct on the part of the Executive cannot but result in permanent injury to our system of free institutions. We shall never be sure that a supposed emergency or some real or imaginary benefit to our National welfare will not be made an excuse for lawless infraction by Presidential mandate of the reserved rights of the legislative body or of the people.

"The candidate of the Democratic Party is the embodiment of sound, conservative Constitutionalism. He is not only a trained jurist, but he is by temperament and conviction a believer in and defender of the fundamental principles which lie at the basis of our free Government. Upon his clear-sighted ability and his firm and unflinching loyalty to law we can rely without fear or hesitation.

"For the reasons above indicated I believe it is the duty of all good citizens to rally to the support of the candidates of the Democratic Party, and to do what in us lies to secure their election."

Headquarters have been opened in the St. James Building, at 1,185 Broadway, where the Corresponding Secretary can be addressed by all college men throughout the United States who desire to become members. It is the intention of the club to hold at least one mass meeting during the campaign, in Carnegie Hall. In addition, literature will be distributed and a speakers' bureau formed to aid the National and State Committees. Similar clubs are to be formed in Connecticut, New Jersey, Indiana, and Massachusetts.

LABOR MEN FOR PARKER.

John N. Bogart to Take an Active Part in the Campaign.

Special to The New York Times.

ROSEMOUNT, ESOPUS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—John N. Bogart, one of the State organizers of the American Federation of Labor, and until recently labor editor of a newspaper, came to Rosemount to-day and had a long conference with Judge Parker. It is probable that Mr. Bogart will take an active part in the campaign later on.

In the campaign of 1897, with the voters of the State confronted with the contest between Alton B. Parker and William J. Wallace for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, and the lines sharply drawn for control of the Assembly of 1898, Bogart was identified with the Democratic forces. He had the confidence of the managers then, and the candidate as well, it is understood, and from all that could be learned he has the same now.

The candidacy of the Democratic nominee with respect to labor organizations was discussed.

Congressman James L. Slayden of the Fourteenth Texas District, which includes San Antonio, and Congressman Swager Sherley of the Fifth Kentucky, which includes Louisville, were visitors. They discussed conditions in their respective sections.

The Texan said on departing: "I'll tell you how Judge Parker impresses me. He impresses me as the highest type of American gentleman, a high grade planter."

Col. P. M. Pearsall, Secretary to Gov. Aycock of North Carolina, was another visitor.

WOODRUFF GETS KINGS COUNTY

Higgins Men Talk of M. Linn Bruce for Lieutenant Governor.

At the Republican district conventions held last night in Kings County to select delegates to the State Convention resolutions were passed instructing the 132 delegates to vote for Timothy L. Woodruff as the Republican nominee for Governor as long as he is a candidate. Mr. Woodruff will be Chairman of his district delegation, and among others who will be on the delegation are Silas P. Dutcher, Sheriff Norman S. Dike, Charles A. Schieren, William Berri, and Col. Michael J. Dady.

Mr. Woodruff and his chief lieutenant, Col. Dady, called upon Gov. Odell at the Republican State Headquarters yesterday and were closeted with him for over an hour. They came to have a plain talk with the Governor-Chairman about the report that he had made up his mind to recommend to the caucus in Saratoga the selection of Lieut. Gov. Higgins as the Gubernatorial nominee. When they emerged from the Governor's room they both seemed to be in high spirits. Mr. Woodruff was not disposed to talk about what had occurred between him and the Governor, but Col. Dady said:

"There is no change in the situation. It is to be an open convention. Mr. Woodruff is the only announced candidate in the field. Kings County will use all honorable means to secure his nomination. We are confident that he will win."

Lieut. Gov. Higgins, who is generally believed to be Mr. Woodruff's chief rival for the Republican nomination for Governor, will be in the city Saturday and will have a conference with Gov. Odell. Despite the confidence of Mr. Woodruff, it was still insisted by Gov. Odell's friends last night that Higgins would be the nominee.

In fact, so sure were they that the nomination for Governor was settled that they began last night to talk about candidates for Lieutenant Governor upon the theory that Higgins would head the ticket. Nearly all the sentiment seemed to be in favor of M. Linn Bruce of this city, former Chairman of the Republican County Committee. Among Republican politicians all talk about an open convention is regarded as moonshine. As they view the situation, it has resolved itself down to a test of strength between the Governor and Mr. Woodruff.

Lemuel E. Quigg and his delegation from the Nineteenth Manhattan will be for Woodruff, and Quigg has been working to bring other Manhattan delegations into line for his favorite.

GUFFEY AT HEADQUARTERS.

Senator Martin of Virginia and Hopkins of Chicago Also Call.

There was a general gathering of National leaders at the Democratic National Committee Headquarters yesterday, ex-Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas and Col. James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania both visiting the headquarters for the first time since they were opened. Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia, another Executive Committeeman, also called.

"I have spent the entire afternoon at headquarters," said Col. Guffey as he was leaving, "and I am much pleased with the way the campaign is opening up."

Senator Martin also seemed pleased with the outlook. He said that all indications pointed to a thorough party victory. The conservative business interests, he said, all seemed to desire the election of Parker.

Ex-Mayor John P. Hopkins of Chicago, Chairman of the Illinois Democratic State Committee, was at headquarters during the afternoon with National Committeeman Roger C. Sullivan of Illinois. There was a report that they had come for campaign funds for use in their State.

"Nothing to that," said Chairman Taggart afterward. "As a matter of fact, Mr. Hopkins brought us some money from Chicago to use elsewhere."

DEMOCRATS TO MEET SEPT. 20 IN SARATOGA

Convention Call Issued by New State Committee.

SESSION ONLY THREE MINUTES

No Reference Made to United States Senatorship in the Call—Murphy and McCarren Do Not Speak.

Without a jolt or a jar of any sort the Democratic State Committee met shortly after noon yesterday in the Hoffman House, and, in a session which lasted but three minutes, fixed upon Saratoga Springs as the place and Sept. 20 as the date for the Democratic State Convention, "for the purpose of taking such other action and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the convention."

Although the call is silent on the subject of having the convention nominate a candidate for United States Senator, to carry out the resolution presented by Charles F. Murphy at a meeting of the old State Committee last September, and adopted by that body, Mr. Murphy did not make any move yesterday to have the committee go on record for such action. His resolution adopted a year ago not only provided for future election of United States Senators after a nomination in the State Convention of the preceding year, but also provided that the State Committee in issuing a call for the next State Convention should provide for such action on the part of the convention. The action of the committee yesterday, however, in ignoring the Senatorship does not prevent the State Convention from going ahead, as Senator Hill pointed out last night when questioned on the subject.

It was nearly 1 o'clock when Chairman Cord Meyer called yesterday's meeting to order, and it being the first time he has presided since his election, he was greeted with applause.

Ex-Senator Hill attended the meeting as proxy for Frank W. Brown of the Forty-sixth District, and sat at the right of Chairman Meyer during the proceedings. Ex-Senator Murphy of Troy was proxy for Francis J. Molloy, William F. Sheehan for Charles N. Bulger, National Committeeman Norman E. Mack of Buffalo for Henry P. Burgard, and James A. Parsons for ex-Chairman Frank Campbell. The first acts of the committee were to name John W. Potter to fill the vacancy caused by the death of James H. Flannagan in the Thirty-fourth District, and to accept the resignation of Frank Campbell of Bath, which was presented by Mr. Parsons, then to make Mr. Parsons the Committeeman from the district. The committee, as it met, was as follows, by Senate districts:

1. Perry Belmont.	28. Samuel A. Beardsley.
2. Joseph Cassidy.	27. G. C. Dow.
3. Michael J. Cummings.	28. James H. Galvin.
4. John W. Weber.	29. Patrick E. McCabe.
5. William A. Doyle.	30. Edward Murphy, Jr.
7. P. H. McCarren.	31. George R. Finch.
8. L. J. Mannion.	32. George Hall.
9. Conrad Haselbeg.	33. Louis M. Antisdale.
10. Daniel E. Finn.	34. John W. Potter.
11. Timothy D. Sullivan.	35. John N. Carlisle.
12. John T. Oakley.	36. Melvin Z. Haven.
13. Roderick H. Dhu.	37. William F. Sheehan.
14. Charles F. Murphy.	38. Henry G. Jackson.
15. Francis Burton Harrison.	39. Charles F. Rattigan.
16. William Dalton.	40. Daniel Sheehan.
17. Daniel F. McMahon.	41. James A. Parsons.
18. Thomas J. Dunn.	42. Charles F. Williams.
19. Harry J. Hart.	43. William F. Balkam.
20. Thomas F. McAvoy.	44. Jacob Gerling.
21. M. J. Garvin.	45. Francis A. Willard.
22. Daniel J. Walsh.	46. David B. Hill.
23. Arthur A. Wellman.	47. John J. Kennedy.
24. James Purcell.	48. Matthew C. Moriarty.
25. Ira M. Black.	49. Norman E. Mack.
	50. James O. Bennett.

Neither William F. Sheehan nor Charles F. Murphy was on hand until the time for calling the meeting to order. When Mr. Murphy entered the meeting room he took a seat over in one corner, about as far away from Senator McCarren as he could get. The two men did not come together at all during the proceedings nor during the handshaking afterward.

No meeting of the Executive Committee was called to follow the State Committee meeting, as it was expected there might be, and no move was made by any Tammany member at the meeting to interfere with Senator McCarren's de facto Chairmanship of that committee.

Some persons were inclined to take the fact that nothing had been done about the Senatorship as an affront to Murphy on the part of Hill, but Mr. Murphy expressed himself as unaffronted when the matter was put up to him.

"There was no necessity for saying anything about the Senatorship in the call," said Senator Hill. "The words 'and to transact such other business as may come before the convention,' covers the Senatorship fully if the convention sees fit to act on it. A State convention is a party law unto itself as well as being the creator of party law, and it may indorse a candidate for Senator or refuse to do so as it may see fit. As a legal proposition there is no need to specify such action in the call."

The retirement of Frank Campbell from the committee caused considerable comment. Several months ago Mr. Campbell, who had been an ardent Hill man, delivered himself of some utterances on the subject of bossism in connection with the name of Senator Hill. In April Mr. Campbell was turned down for re-election as State Chairman and Cord Meyer named in his stead.

TAMMANY'S SARATOGA TRIP.

Nearly Forty Special Cars to Carry Wigwam Shouters to State Convention.

Arrangements for Tammany's attendance at the Democratic State Convention were started yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Tammany Executive Committee. The railroad arrangements were placed in the hands of Senator Plunkitt. Each district, except the Sixteenth, of which Patrick Keenan is leader, will have a car, while the Eighteenth, Twenty-ninth, and Thirty-fourth Districts will have two cars each. The Thirty-fifth District will have three cars anyway, and may take up a trainload by itself in order to help along the boom which Borough President Haffen has started for himself for Governor.

In addition to arranging for the trip the Executive Committee provided for the appointment of a committee to arrange for the holding of mass meetings during the campaign. Owing to the illness of Thomas F. Smith, the Secretary of the organization, George F. Scannell, leader of the Twenty-fifth District, acted as Secretary yesterday. Mr. Smith is ill at Asbury Park, where his family is summering.

DEMOCRATIC TEXT BOOK.

Work on 500-Page Campaign Volume Nearly Completed.

Work is being rushed by the Democratic National Committee on the campaign text book, which will be issued in a few days.

The book will make about 500 printed pages, and will be in larger type and on better paper than was the Republican campaign book. The committeemen now are engaged in revising, correcting, and paging the proofs now in hand. Owing to the limited time in which the book must be issued there will be a second and larger edition out later, containing additional matter. It was announced that the book would treat of special phases of the tariff question, particularly the comparative rise in wages and prices, the sale of articles abroad at lower prices than those charged the consumer at home, and reciprocity.

FAIRBANKS TALKS OF TRUSTS.

Says Democrats Enacted No Laws Against Combinations.

MARION, Kan., Sept. 1.—The Republican campaign in Kansas opened here to-day with speeches by Senator Chester I. Long, Edward W. Hoch, the Republican candidate for Governor, and Senator Fairbanks, the Vice Presidential nominee. There was a large attendance from this and surrounding counties. Senator Fairbanks spoke in part as follows:

"The Republican Party has enacted laws for the regulation of combinations in restraint of trade or commerce between the States, and it has not allowed them to encumber the statute books as a dead letter.

"While the Republican Party believes in restraining capital which is organized to restrict just competition, it firmly believes in safeguarding that which is engaged in wholesome trade and commerce. Our modern development requires the use of larger capital than was necessary a few years ago.

"The use of such capital is not a menace. It has a vital function to perform in our material development. It is only the misuse of it we seek to guard against.

"The Democratic Party has put upon the Federal statute books no act to regulate combinations which concern the public welfare, nor has it enforced those written there by the Republican Party. All that has been done with respect to trust regulation has been done by the Republican Party.

"President Cleveland in his last annual message recognized the existence of trust evils, but declared that the laws enacted by Congress for their cure were inadequate. We should not forget that the same laws which Mr. Cleveland regarded insufficient have been effectively enforced by Republican Administrations. President Roosevelt has had a large number of railroads restrained from giving rebate to shippers. The Northern Pacific merger, which sought practically to combine competing railroads, has been declared to be illegal.

"We have passed laws to expedite the hearing of anti-trust litigation, to enable the Government to obtain full and accurate information respecting the organization and operation of corporations engaged in inter-State trade and commerce, and to effectually put an end to the rebate system, which has injured both the railroads and the shippers. Perhaps nothing has been more injurious to both common carriers and their patrons than the widespread system of paying rebates. Equality of treatment has been the demand of the Republican Party, and this is now assured under the provisions of the law we have enacted."

Concluding, he said:

"The question of the hour is, Shall we go forward or turn backward? Shall those who have prospered under Republican policies again lift to their lips the cup of Democratic disappointment? Take the great questions to your hearts and your homes and decide as becomes Americans who realise that the ballot is to be used to advance the fortunes of political parties only as they promote the welfare of the home."

DEPEW GIVES HIS VERSION.

Denies W. A. White's Postal Story and Eulogizes Green.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Senator Depew, speaking to-day at the Broome County Fair, at Whitney Point, replied to ex-Senator Hill's speech of yesterday. He denied the truth of William Allen White's account in McClure's Magazine of how President Roosevelt pursued the postal grafters, so far as Mr. White's statements involved him. He also eulogized one of the alleged grafters, Senator Green. He said in part:

"In regard to the magazine article which was discussed by Mr. Hill here yesterday, I desire to say, first of all, that I have had the honor to know Senator George E. Green for twenty-five years, and that I knew him to be a generous, noble-spirited, open-handed, manly man—very public spirited and enterprising.

"I never wrote nor said anything to President Roosevelt on the subject of the Senator's indictment, and I did not know of it until it occurred. I did not make any attempt to prevent the indictment.

"I have never threatened a public officer—or, in fact, a private citizen—in my life to induce him to do or not to do anything he thought was right, and after my fifty years of experience I should certainly not begin with President Roosevelt."

BREAK IN BARNES'S RANKS.

Rebellion Against the Leader of the Albany Republicans.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 1.—Tuesday's primaries in Albany City resulted in the first break in State Committeeman William Barnes, Jr.'s, solid representation in the Albany Republican General Committee. Heretofore, since he became the Republican leader in Albany, Mr. Barnes has been able to hold his organization intact. On Tuesday in three of the five wards where contests were made stiff fights resulted, and the opposition carried one, the Fourteenth, and came close to carrying the other two.

In Bethlehem ex-Assemblyman William L. Coughtry, piqued at Mr. Barnes's broken promises to him, put up a stiff fight, and won out with a clear majority of 100. One of the promises that Mr. Barnes made Mr. Coughtry was that he (Barnes) would resign as Collector of the Port of Albany, salary $5,000, in Mr. Coughtry's favor, but instead he offered Coughtry a subordinate position in the State Insurance Department at a small salary. Other offices promised were Congressman and several county offices.

There are some of Mr. Coughtry's followers who believe that he will lead the anti-Barnes faction of the party, and seek to become the leader of the Albany Republicans.

WATSON QUESTIONS PARKER.

Would You Eat with Booker Washington at the White House?

ATLANTA, Sept. 1.—Thomas E. Watson, the Populist nominee for President, delivered a speech to-day to the State Convention of his party. He said in part:

"In the South we are told we must submit to the surrender to Wall Street because of 'the nigger.' What a blessed thing it is for Democratic leaders that they always have 'the nigger' to fall back on! For thirty years they have been doing business on 'the nigger,' and to-day he is their only stock in trade.

"In the West Virginia Democratic Convention, the State of the Democratic nominee for Vice President, the 'white supremacy' resolution was voted down, and on Aug. 1, 1904, Judge Parker himself, in writing to the negro James A. Ross, addressed him as 'My Dear Sir,' just as though Ross had been a white man.

"The South should demand to know the facts about Judge Parker. How does he stand upon this alleged negro question? Is his position at all different from that of Roosevelt? If so, in what respect? The South should demand explicit reply

A Ladder of Swords

Gilbert Parker's New Book

The many thousands of people who have read and enjoyed "The Right of Way" will be eager to read this new book by Sir Gilbert Parker.

The title might indicate that it was a story of war, but, although the plot is full of exciting intrigue and startling situations, it is quite distinct from the swashbuckling narratives, of which we have read so many.

"A Ladder of Swords" is an exquisitely conceived love story, of the time of Queen Elizabeth, in which the celebrated author presents a number of fresh, original and thoroughly delightful characters. Those who have read "The Right of Way," will understand the fascination of Gilbert Parker's work, and simply need be told that the new book is ready. Price, $1.08.

NO LIQUOR AT SEAT OF WAR

Commander in Chief Corbin Speeds Over the Field in an Auto—So Does Mrs. Corbin, Later.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The officers in charge of the army manoeuvres at Manassas have a temperance crusade on their hands extending over the whole theatre of the operations. The women of Prince William County united in a petition to the local authorities to avail themselves of the authority given by what is known as the Mann law to forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors during the manoeuvres. A strict application of the law would prevent the sale of liquor anywhere except in the village Manassas.

Deputies are scouring the country wearing their badges under their coats in the effort to detect soldiers buying whisky. Thus far there appears to be little if any drinking among the regulars, and the deputies have had nothing to encourage their vigilance. The military authorities will not allow a drop of liquor to be sold in or around the camps, and the same rule will be made to apply to the National Guard camps.

Gen. Grant is contemplating the plan of putting sentries around Manassas so as to prevent soldiers getting to the saloons to buy liquor. There is no difficulty about controlling the use of liquor on the camp grounds and the manoeuvre territory. The Government leases these grounds, paying 3 cents an acre rental for the manoeuvre territory and 27 cents an acre for the camp sites, and they are Government reservations just as much under the law as if they had been purchased and deeded to the Government.

Gen. Grant and Gen. Bell, who command the two armies, and Gen. Corbin, who is in command of the whole demonstration, have assured the local authorities that every reasonable effort will be made to co-operate with the town authorities to preserve quiet and order and prevent drinking of intoxicants by the men.

CORPS HEADQUARTERS, GAINESVILLE, Va., Sept. 1.—Every rule of the war game which is to be played during the annual manoeuvres of the army was discussed at an extended conference to-day, participated in by Gen. Corbin as corps commander, Gen. Grant, commander of Division No. 1; Gen. Bell, commander of Division No. 2, and the four brigade commanders from each division, including Gens. Wint, Bliss, Frost, and Augur, under Gen. Grant, and Gens. Lee and Barry, and Cols. Price and Smith under Gen. Bell, besides the staff officers of Gen. Corbin and those of each of the two division commanders, making a gathering of nearly forty army officers.

The points settled were that the field of operation involving the two main manoeuvre problems is to be confined to the map prepared by Lieut. Spalding and issued by the War Department; that any given operation set for a certain day may begin immediately after midnight of the day previous, if so desired; that no civilian scouts or spies shall be employed by either side, and that troops may bivouac in the field one night during each of the two-day actions planned.

After the conference, in which officers had an opportunity to discuss the matters at hand freely, the group of officers were photographed and repaired to the mess tent for luncheon.

Gen. Corbin tested one of his new automobiles to-day. He made the trip from Gainesville into Thoroughfare Gap and return, making the run in less than a half hour. During the manoeuvres the General will use one of these machines to view operations.

Mrs. Corbin and Mrs. Grant, who are to be guests at headquarters camp this week, had the use of the machine for the same purpose.

BLOODY CROSSES ON A DOOR.

Extraordinary Proceedings of the Robber Who Held Up Mrs. Spencer.

Special to The New York Times.

WINSTED, Conn., Sept. 1.—The chase for the assailant of Mrs. G. C. Spencer, wife of a Greenwich clergyman and daughter of Dr. Henry Hartwell of Judd's Bridge, (New Milford,) who was held up and shot at three times by a man on the outskirts of that town yesterday morning, and who it is believed shot her assailant once at least, has been given up because of the inability of the authorities to secure a bloodhound from Danbury.

In the night a piece of paper bearing two cross marks made with blood was fastened to a screen door at the Hartwell residence and a window was pried open. The family are highly alarmed, but cannot leave their isolated home because of the dangerous condition of aged Dr. Hartwell.

In driving to New Milford to deposit the money in the bank, Mrs. Spencer took a different route than on her return trip. Miss May Galvin, who was stopped by the man who subsequently held up Mrs. Spencer, and who was asked by him if she was Mrs. Spencer, drove a horse and buggy identically like the turnout of Dr. Hartwell's daughter.

Mrs. Spencer did not pass the reservoir, the scene of the hold-up, until two hours after Miss Galvin. How did the desperado learn that Mrs. Spencer was going to New Milford that day? the authorities and others are asking.

RABBI'S DAUGHTER TRIES TO DIE

Washington Girl Cuts Throat and Wrists with Razor While Ill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Rosa Stern, daughter of the Rev. Lewis Stern, rabbi of the Eighth Street Hebrew Temple, made an attempt to take her life to-day by cutting her throat and wrist with a razor. She was carried to the Emergency Hospital, where it was found that a deep wound had been inflicted in the front of her neck and another on the left wrist. The arteries of the neck were not cut, but the blade penetrated the windpipe. The doctors said while the case was critical, the girl might recover.

Miss Stern is twenty-three years old and expected to be married in about two months. At home it was stated that she has been sick for a long time and had only yesterday returned from a trip to the country, where she had gone for the benefit of her health. Members of the family attribute the act to the result of her illness.

OUR BUSINESS OUTLOOK POOR.

London Times Expects Long Period of Stagnation in America.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—In an editorial article on business conditions in the United States, The Times expresses the belief that the reaction from the extreme trade activity which has been in operation in America for several months is likely to last longer than some very sanguine persons imagine. The American people, says The Times, have been encouraged to imagine that the laws of economics do not apply to their land because it is too vast and rich and inhabited by too energetic a race to be judged by the standards applicable to the effete old monarchies of Europe.

"This was the sort of talk with which all suggestions that the boom of 1900-2 was extravagant and dangerous were met," says The Times. "Since then much has happened to disenchant, for the moment at least, the believer in a wondrous United States with a charmed business life that need take no account of the laws of economics. Industrial activity did not begin to diminish until about a year ago—many months after the break-up of the frantic Wall Street speculation, which had accomplished it and was based on it, but during the last twelve months it has been steadily growing less, though it is contended by some optimists that the contraction of legitimate business is not yet very great."

It seems to be the view of The Times that the United States is in for a somewhat prolonged period of business stagnation.

ARSENIC KILLED RIZZO.

Mrs. Rizzo in Mineola Jail Charged with Murder.

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 1.—Assistant District Attorney Graham of Nassau County received this morning the report of J. B. Ekley, the chemist, of 26 East Twenty-ninth Street, Manhattan, who analyzed the stomach of James Rizzo, who died under suspicious circumstances on July 25 at his home in Lawrence. The report of the chemist says that there was enough arsenic in Rizzo's stomach to kill a dozen men.

Mrs. Amelia Rizzo is under arrest on a charge of murder, and she is now in the county jail here.

BURGLARS IN A CONVENT.

Cause Bad Scare Among Sisters of St. Joseph in Rome.

Special to The New York Times.

HOOSICK FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Much indignation was expressed here this morning when it was learned that burglars, probably local talent, had forced an entrance to Saint Joseph's Convent during the early hours of the morning and had caused terror to reign among the twelve sisters of that community. Entrance was made by forcing a screen from a window of the laundry and by going through the cellar, from which they had easy access to any part of the convent.

On the third floor they broke into a large desk by means of an axe secured from the laundry. Having found no money, they were returning by way of the main corridor when the Mother Superior, hearing a noise, came face to face with one of them. She raised an alarm at once by ringing bells and shouting for aid. Meanwhile a sister telephoned for the police, who quickly responded, together with men from nearby. The burglars made their escape through a window.

TWO DROWN IN OYSTER BAY.

Four Skylarking Colored Excursionists Spilled from Rowboat.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Sept. 1.—Two colored excursionists, a man and a woman, who came up with the Colored Business Men's Association of Kings County this morning, were drowned while boating in the bay this afternoon. Another man and a woman were rescued and were revived only after long and vigorous work by a physician.

About a thousand excursionists came up on the special train. Charles Webb, Viola Knight, James H. Jackson, and Laura Jones hired a rowboat and went out on the bay. While they were skylarking their boat upset. None could swim. Capt. Beale in the yacht Rondella put out to them, and was in time to pull Jackson and Miss Jones into his boat. He got the others later, but they could not be revived.

The excursionists made no effort during the day to carry out their reported intention to call upon President Roosevelt.

BOY ACCUSED OF BLACKMAIL.

Little Girl, It Is Said, Forced to Pay Him 25 Cents Daily.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 1.—Fred Pierson, seventeen years of age, of New Street is being sought by the police, who have a warrant for his arrest on a complaint charging him with blackmail. Martin Roehrich, a confectioner, says that the youth for two years has been extracting from his daughter Stephanie, twelve years old, 25 cents a day.

According to the girl, Pierson two years ago threatened to tell some story to her father about her if she did not give him 25 cents. Although there was no truth in the story she paid the money, and from that time on, it is charged, he kept up his demands for money. Yesterday Mr. Roehrich detected the little girl taking the money and questioned her. This morning Pierson met the girl near the store and spoke to her. She says he demanded money. She ran into the store and her father ran out and grabbed Pierson and started with him to the police station. On the way Pierson broke away and has not been found.

MAN LAUGHS AT DOG, IS SHOT.

Farmers Follow Flynn When He Jeers at Their Mongrel Pup.

After jeering at a lean-ribbed mongrel dog that had followed John and Joseph Stehl into McCarthy's saloon at Washington and Rector Streets last night, John Flynn of Sheepshead Bay was shot clear through the body just as the Stehls followed him out of the saloon. The two Stehls, brothers hailing from Jericho, Conn., and Cranford, N. J., respectively, were arrested and locked up in the Church Street Station. Joseph carried a pistol, and the police said the calibre corresponded to the bullet that struck Flynn. The wounded man was taken to the Hudson Street Hospital, where, the doctors said, he had but a fighting chance for recovery.

When the Stehls entered the saloon Flynn was one of several men drinking beer at the bar. The newcomers were followed by the pup. The animal looked hungry, and somebody threw a bologna free-lunch sausage on the floor. He devoured it ravenously. Then a few jesting remarks about the leanness of the dog were passed.

The Stehls were close behind Flynn when he went out. Two shots were heard in quick succession, and the bartender, followed by several men, found Flynn lying on the sidewalk.

C. B. SPAHR DISAPPEARS FROM CHANNEL STEAMER

Was Editor of Current Literature and Had Been Ill.

WENT ABROAD FOR HIS HEALTH

His Associates Scout Theory of Suicide, as Mr. Spahr's Health Had Improved —Long Literary Career.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—C. B. Spahr of King's Bridge, New York, editor of a New York magazine, either fell or jumped overboard from the steamer Prince Albert midway between Ostend and Dover at about 5 o'clock on the evening of Aug. 30.

His mysterious disappearance, recalling that of Frederick Kent Loomis, was reported on the arrival of the steamer at Dover to the American Consul, Mr. Prescott, by E. W. Ordway of 1,093 Dean Street, Brooklyn, in whose company Mr. Spahr was making a tour of Europe for the benefit of his health.

Mr. Spahr seemed to have been much improved by his trip, and his companion said he never for a moment suspected that he would attempt to commit suicide. Mr. Spahr left behind him a small bag, but Mr. Ordway reported to Mr. Prescott that there was nothing of any value in it, nor any letters or papers throwing light on his sudden disappearance.

Mr. Spahr's heavy baggage was shipped from Trieste to Liverpool some days ago for shipment to New York on the Cunard Line steamer Aurania Sept. 6.

Charles B. Spahr, whose mysterious disappearance from the Prince Albert was reported upon the arrival of that steamer at Dover, England, occupied a prominent place in literary circles in this city. For eighteen years he was associate editor of The Outlook, and at the time of his disappearance he was editor of Current Literature. He had written many books on economic subjects and had been prominently identified with University Settlement work in this city.

Among his business associates he was known as a man of particularly happy disposition, and with his position and success firmly established they believe it to be entirely out of the question that he purposely ended his life. An associate of Mr. Spahr on Current Literature said yesterday that no private information regarding the disappearance of the editor had been received here.

He said he was firmly convinced, however, that the case could not have been other than accident. He said that while Mr. Spahr's trip abroad was made for the benefit of his health, his condition was not at any time regarded as serious, and a recent cablegram stated that he had been greatly benefited by his vacation.

Mr. Spahr was born in Columbus, Ohio, in 1860, the son of the Rev. B. N. Spahr, and was graduated from Amherst College in 1881. Two years at Leipsic completed his education. In 1886 he became associate editor of The Outlook, retaining that position until early in the present year, when he became editor of Current Literature. He had a wife and five children. Mrs. Spahr was prostrated when news of her husband's disappearance was brought to her.

GLENDALE MURDER A MYSTERY.

Pflander, Whom Police Suspected, Dies Without Regaining Consciousness.

The police have thus far been unable to explain the mysterious killing of John Delkler, a building contractor, who was shot and mortally wounded near his home, on Fulton Street, Glendale, on Tuesday night. August Pflander, the farmhand who was found wounded in a barn not far from the scene of the murder, with a revolver by his side, died in the German Hospital in Brooklyn at 2 o'clock yesterday morning without regaining consciousness.

Capt. O'Brien and his detectives said last night they were fully satisfied that Pflander was the man who shot and killed Delkler. The motive they cannot fathom. When Henry Adicks, who is being held as a witness, was chasing the murderer, after he had fired the one bullet he had in his revolver, he stooped and picked up several good-sized stones, which he hurled at the man ahead of him.

One of these hit the man, and it was after he was struck that the fugitive called back that if Adicks did not stop he would be shot. There is a bruise on the face of the corpse which might have been made by a stone. It was noticed on Wednesday morning before Pflander shot himself.

The police have not been able to account for Pflander's time between 8 o'clock and midnight on Tuesday night. Only once was he seen by any one who recalls it. Then he entered a saloon and took a glass of beer. It was after midnight when he reached the barn, where he slept in company with other men employed on the farm where he worked. When the others were rising they asked Pflander where he had been. He made no reply. The others left the barn, and when he did not appear at work some one was sent for him and found him shot.

GOVERNOR GENERAL OF CANADA

Lord Grey Appointed Owing to Opposition to Duke of Marlborough.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—King Edward has approved the appointment of Earl Grey as Governor General of Canada, in succession to the Earl of Minto.

It is understood that Lord Grey did not want the post of Governor General of Canada, while the Duke of Marlborough did. The British Government had decided to appoint the Duke, but the opposition to the selection in the Dominion, owing to the fact that the Duke has an American wife, was so strong that the decision was reconsidered.

If Lord Grey has not an American wife he at least has American sympathies. He has made various visits to this country, and, it has been said, did a good deal toward extending the Cecil Rhodes scholarship scheme, under which students from the United States partake of its benefits. He was a great friend of Mr. Rhodes, and after the Jameson raid succeeded him as representative of the British South Africa Company in London. Later, as Administrator of Rhodesia, he quelled the Matabele revolts in 1896 and 1897.

Lord Gray was born in 1851. The first Earl, the present peer's great-grandfather, was a General on the British side in the American Revolutionary war.

STONE KILLS LITTLE GIRL.

Peddler Threw It at Boys Who Were Annoying Him.

Bernard Smith was helping his father to dispose of a load of fruit and vegetables at Amsterdam Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-second Street, yesterday afternoon, and the two peddlers were considerably annoyed by a crowd of boys who hung about looking for apples. One of the boys threw a stone which struck the elder Smith on the chest.

PURSUIT OF PRINCESS NOT LIKELY TO BE KEEN

Louise's Husband Thinks She Has Been Punished Enough.

WORE ALL HER FINE JEWELS

Met Matassich-Keglevitch Several Weeks Ago and Had First Talk with Him in Many Years.

BAD ELSTER, Saxony, Sept. 1.—In spite of the scandal caused by the escape of Princess Louise of Saxe-Coburg from her hotel here at 2 o'clock on Tuesday morning, and the belief that she is with ex-Lieut. Count von Matassich-Keglevitch, it is understood here that the pursuit of the pair is not likely to be keen.

It has become generally known that the husband of the Princess, Prince Philippe, is father pleased than otherwise at her escape, as he has frequently expressed the opinion that she has been sufficiently punished. The sympathies of the Belgian Court have been with her for the same reason.

Princess Louise, it now appears, escaped alone from her hotel. She was joined under the trees in the hotel garden by two women and a man. They entered a two-horse carriage and were driven swiftly in the direction of Munich.

A man named W. Gratz, who was stopping at the hotel, has not appeared since Monday night. It is supposed that he provided the means for the flight of the Princess and that he was an agent of Matassich-Keglevitch.

The Princess, closely attended by her physician and a lady of the Court, went to the theatre Monday evening. She was animated and seemingly enjoyed the music, as she has enjoyed everything during the three weeks she had been permitted to leave the seclusion of the Sanatorium Parson, at Coswig, where really she was a prisoner of State.

She had been provided with attractive costumes for this reappearance into the world, and she was allowed once more to wear the splendid jewels which were part of her dowry when she married Prince Philippe of Saxe-Coburg.

After the theatre the Princess and her party had supper in one of her rooms. She said good night at 11:30, and her guardians were not aware of her departure until 7 o'clock in the morning, by which time she probably was far toward the Swiss frontier.

Gratz first had a room on the third floor of the hotel, but Monday he moved to one on the ground floor, with a private entrance into the garden. It is presumed that the Princess used this exit, and it is certain that Fran Schubert of Dresden engaged the carriage at a local livery stable. Neither the driver nor the equipage has returned.

Beyond the outskirts of the town some of the occupants of the carriage were transferred to an automobile, and the carriage continued its rapid flight, probably to confuse possible pursuers. It is likely that the Princess was one of those who took the automobile.

The Princess, it appears, met Matassich-Keglevitch in the garden of the Dresden Art Exhibition two weeks ago, where she was taken under the escort of Manager Pierson of the Sanatorium. The latter had turned away a few minutes before to look at a piece of sculpture.

When he saw the Princess talking to a strange man Pierson hastened toward them. She told him that the man was Lieut. Matassich-Keglevitch, and begged to be allowed to speak with him. Pierson replied that she knew that to be impossible.

The Princess began to cry and became so distressed that Pierson turned to Matassich-Keglevitch and requested him to give his word of honor that he would not attempt to persuade the Princess to leave those who were taking care of her.

The Lieutenant promised. Pierson withdrew out of hearing, and the two so long separated talked together for several minutes, until Pierson told them that the interview must end.

WALDORF BELLBOY ARRESTED.

Caught in Chicago and Charged with Robbing Guests' Rooms of Jewelry.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Joseph Ryan, also known as James Riley, formerly a bellboy at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City, is under arrest here, charged with being implicated in the theft of $2,000 worth of jewelry from that hotel some weeks ago. When taken into custody Ryan made no statement other than that he was willing to return to New York to answer the charge.

Ryan was employed at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel for some time, until his disappearance several weeks ago, which was also the occasion of the disappearance from the rooms of guests of the hotel of jewelry valued at over $2,000. Among those robbed was Charles A. Henderson, who swore out a warrant for Ryan's arrest before Magistrate Breen. Before it could be served the boy had left the city. Mr. Henderson lost two diamond studs, valued at about $200, and these, with many of the other trinkets missed, were recovered in various pawnshops in the city.

The rooms were entered by some one owning either a pass or a skeleton key who knew the times when the rooms were empty.

VAIN SEARCH FOR RAIDERS.

British Cruisers Unable to Find the Petersburg or the Smolensk.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The efforts of the British cruisers of the Cape of Good Hope Squadron to establish communication with the Russian Volunteer Fleet steamers Smolensk and Petersburg have thus far failed.

The Admiralty received late this afternoon a dispatch from Rear Admiral Durnford announcing that none of his ships had caught sight of or had heard by wireless telegraphy from either of the Russian cruisers.

The Admiral was ordered to continue the search, and another cruiser was instructed to report to him and join in the search.

It is understood that under Admiral Durnford's direction his cruisers are constantly calling by wireless "Smolensk" and "Petersburg," but neither ship has responded, nor is this surprising, in the opinion of the Admiralty, as the commanders might well suspect the Japanese of attempting to lure them within reach of their guns.

The instructions from the Russian Government are in cipher, so there can be no question that the Russian commanders will understand that they are authentic and will obey them, when they get them.

In Russian diplomatic circles it is said that it is not surprising that neither of the Russian cruisers has put into an African port to coal, for the reason that before they sailed Black Sea colliers preceded them, with instructions to transfer coal at certain specified points.

FAST WESTCHESTER TROLLEYS.

Express Service to Compete with New Haven Road Begun.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, Sept. 1.—The new trolley express service which resulted from the recent agitation against overcrowding the Huckleberry trolley cars, was begun by that company to-day between New Rochelle, Mount Vernon, and the Bronx Park elevated station. The service has appealed to shoppers and commuters, and the cars were crowded all day.

The express cars make the run from New Rochelle to Mount Vernon in twenty minutes, and from that city through to the elevated connection in twenty-five minutes, establishing a schedule of forty-five minutes between New Rochelle and Bronx Park, instead of an hour, as formerly. As soon as the motormen become familiar with the new schedule, President Maher expects to reduce the running time to forty minutes, which is the present running time of the New Haven Railroad local trains between New Rochelle and the Grand Central Station.

It is said that the trolley company decided on Sept. 1 as the date for beginning the new service because the first of the month is the date when the tickets of most of the commuters of the steam roads expire. A large number failed to renew them and will try the trolley express route instead.

ORLEANS POOLROOMS SHUT.

New Law Goes Into Effect—Hand Book Scheme Threatened.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 1.—Nine poolrooms and turf exchanges went out of business this morning when the anti-poolroom law, passed by the June session of the Louisiana Legislature, became effective. Several hundred employes of these establishments have lost their positions, and there is no chance of the rooms reopening.

Emile Bauman, proprietor of an exchange, started a system of individual betting to-day without giving tickets to the bettors and promising to pay on press dispatch odds, but the play was light and the scheme will be abandoned. A powerful hand-book system is threatened, but the police are on the alert. The law applies throughout the State.

Samuel L. Dana Discharged.

Samuel L. Dana, the young man who was found in Central Park a few weeks ago with a bullet wound in the right breast, and who finally recovered after serious doubts were expressed as to his recovery, was discharged by Magistrate Whitman in the Yorkville Court yesterday morning.

Coach Warner at Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Head Coach Glenn S. Warner of the Cornell Varsity football team, who was called from Carlisle to take charge of the baseball and football teams for the next three years, arrived in the city this afternoon.

Mr. Warner's welcome was a warm one. Concerning the football outlook for the coming season he is very reticent. He will at once issue a call for candidates to report at Percy Field for active work on Sept. 19. Both old and new men will begin practice at this time. In order to avoid a repetition of the unfortunate incident of last year when many of the men went stale early in the Fall, Mr. Warner says he will make the training very gradual. He expressed himself as somewhat displeased with the schedule, which allows but two weeks of practice before the first game with the strong aggregation at Colgate.

Coaches Kent and Lueder are expected in the city in a few days.

AURUMASTER AT BIG ODDS

WILD MINT'S DASH STAKES

This Race Caused a Flutter Among the Followers of the Hildebrand System—Phillips Suspended.

Aurumaster, at 20 to 1, won the Reapers Stakes, for three-year-olds, at Sheepshead Bay yesterday, defeating the favorite, Ormonde's Right, by a head, in a strong whipping finish. The victory was a popular one, and it seemed as if almost every woman in the grand stand had a bet on the Morris gelding.

Ormonde's Right was considered the best horse in the race, with Broomstick and most of the other good ones withdrawn, and went to the post an odds-on favorite. He made a good start, and at the quarter had a lead of three lengths over Ed Tierney, which was two lengths ahead of Aurumaster. Lyne took things easily and did not attempt to alter this order until the back stretch was reached, when he started to move up. He quickly passed Ed Tierney and overtook Aurumaster at the stretch, but when he endeavored to take the lead he was unable to do so.

A hard drive in the final furlong decided the race, Crimmins making an excellent whipping finish and beating Lyne out by a head. Tierney was eight lengths behind.

The Dash Stakes for two-year-olds went to Wild Mint at 8 to 1, with Councilman second, and the favorite, Dreamer, third. Up to the last furlong it looked as if Dreamer would be an easy winner, as he was half a length in front and going strong. Wild Mint, however, came up on the rail with Councilman on the outside, and in the last hundred yards the latter bore over and shut off Dreamer, forcing Hildebrand to ease up.

Wild Mint finished first by half a length, with Councilman second, a length in front of Dreamer, and Handsarra four lengths further back. It was found that Dreamer had been cut down in front, and Hildebrand claimed a foul, which was allowed, and Councilman was disqualified, Dreamer being placed second and Handsarra third. Phillips was also suspended for six days for rough riding.

In the Hempstead Cup steeplechase Libretto was the only horse to cover the course without a fall, and won easily. Horizontal and Daffy-Down-Dilly were remounted and finished second and third, respectively. Bonfire and Jim Slick fell at the first jump, and Horizontal went down at the Liverpool jump in front of the clubhouse, leaving Daffy-Down-Dilly and Libretto in the race, with the former leading by ten lengths.

Bonfire, however, continued on the course riderless, and, overtaking Daffy-Down-Dilly, interfered with him so that at the last jump the latter went down. This not only left Libretto an easy winner, but enabled Heider, who had remounted Horizontal, to obtain second place. Donahue finally remounted Daffy-Down-Dilly and secured third money. The summary:

THE NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

Saratoga is a good place for the Democratic State Convention, Sept. 20 is a good date. By that time the wise men in both parties will know with reasonable certainty who is going to be elected President. They do not know now, it is too early. There may be opinions forming and changes taking place below the surface by which the silent vote will be affected quite beyond the power of any political prophet to perceive or foretell. Three weeks hence there will be revealing signs of what is going on.

If by the time the Convention meets it shall be evident that Judge PARKER is on the high road to victory, the Democratic chiefs would hardly be so foolish as to obstruct his progress to the White House by a weak and foolish nomination for Governor. If, on the other hand, defeat should seem to await him, they would have every incentive to attempt, by giving him the aid of a strong candidate for Governor, a turning of the tide in his favor, at least in this State.

No Democratic boss or leader can be made more powerful, the Democratic machine cannot be put in more effective condition, by the nomination or even by the election of a manageable weakling for the office of Governor. The leaders will gain most, the organization will be put in a condition of highest efficiency, by the naming of a candidate who is of such independence and self-sufficing ability that he will need the support of no boss, and will himself impart vitality to the organization. It would be a crime against the candidate for the Presidency to attempt to play politics with the Gubernatorial office this Fall. The nominee must be of that type of which Judge PARKER himself is so notable an example—a man who enjoys the public confidence, who is sound, who has brains, who is not led or controlled, whom the people respect and admire.

Wisdom has not departed from the councils of the Democrats. The call for the Convention ignores the senseless resolution adopted last year calling for the nomination of a candidate for the United States Senate by this year's Convention. The Saratoga Convention will, we trust, be as wisely guided in respect to this half-baked notion as was the State Committee at its meeting yesterday. The election of a Democratic Legislature should be attended to before worrying about the Senatorial candidate begins.

A TELLING EXPOSURE.

Republican campaign orators are so much inclined to be solemn humbugs, there is such an irresistible propensity to cant and quackery, to conceit and hollow, false pretense in much of the speaking and writing done in support of that straightforward and sincere man, THEODORE ROOSEVELT, that Mr. EDWARD M. SHEPARD'S Bennington speech unmasking the Republican posers and pretenders is a precious contribution not merely to the literature of the campaign, but to the philosophy of politics. They are all open to the charge. Mr. HAY and Mr. ROOT in formal addresses upon occasions of great ceremony fall into the habit as readily as a Republican district leader speaking from a barrelhead at the street corner.

Mr. SHEPARD comes after Mr. HAY and searches him for his marshaling of the statistics of the increase in population and wealth, in manufacturing capital and in productive capacity during the decades of Republican rule as evidence of the beneficence thereof. If that is the title to power and popular confidence, Mr. SHEPARD insists that serious attention must be paid to the very much more rapid and marvelous growth of the Republic in all these particulars during the decades of Democratic rule from 1800 to 1860. The statistics he brings to the support of his argument are so much more imposing than the petty figures Mr. HAY is able to make use of that any voter open to that kind of appeal would necessarily declare his adhesion to Judge PARKER as soon as he had read Mr. SHEPARD'S speech.

The shallowness of that kind of argument, which finds its fit counterpart in that other venerable and weakened Republican falsehood about the currency panic of 1893 being the result of the Wilson tariff law of 1894, is made plain to the commonest understanding by Mr. SHEPARD'S declaration that the Democratic Party attributes our marvelous advancement in National wealth and power to the natural resources of the country, to our wide difference of climate and soil, to the perfect freedom of trade between the various States, and to our industry, our wisdom, and the coherent of our walk and conv[illegible] [illegible] possible. Perhaps imprisonment

He presents in these words the Democratic view:

> From all these conditions and from these institutions—and in spite of their faults—has come—so the Democrats say—the industrial productivity and triumph of the American citizen. After praise to GOD for His gifts to us of land and water and climate, it is to these deep-lying and truly dynamic causes, and above all to the American devotion to liberty and law, that the Democratic Party assigns our splendid results in agriculture and mining, our vast treasure houses, our enormous increase in railroad and manufacturing plants, and all other material as well as political glory of our land. Democrats know, nor would they have any American forget, that the most stupendous force the world has known is the free, self-governing, law-abiding, self-respecting citizen, regardful of the rights of other men and therefore justly insistent upon his own. From the marvelous success of our country summed up in the census of 1900 and its tables of comparisons with the results of other censuses, the Democrats draw the conclusion, not that the general and broad principles of the American people should be reversed, or their sacred traditions undone, but that they should be continued; that only faults and exceptions and inconsistencies should be eliminated. They would not have less respect for law but more respect; not less freedom of trade but more freedom; not less respect for the rights of other countries and races, however inferior to us, but more respect; not more foreign entanglements but fewer; not increase but decrease in the proportion of military and naval and general government expenditure to the ability of the people.

There can be no Republican reply to Mr. SHEPARD'S exposure of the habitual humbug to which his opponents are given in their campaigns. The facts and human reason, as well as human morals and common sense, are against them.

THE ALLIANCE MASS MEETING.

While it is true that a great deal more significance may attach in the public judgment to the mass meeting of the Building Trades Alliance on Wednesday evening than the number in attendance or the nature of its proceedings would warrant, it is much to be regretted that it was held at all. It was an ill-advised demonstration, the principal effect of which was to confuse counsel by words without wisdom. It vetoed with such emphasis as resides in the passing of a set of ready-made resolutions the wise plan of Mr. NASON, the successor of Mr. WEINSEIMER in the Presidency of the alliance, and in which was found the promise of an honorable peace. This plan referred to the unions affiliated with the alliance the question of accepting the arbitration plan disapproved by it in its representative relation to all branches of the building trades. So far as it could do so, the meeting committed the alliance and all associated with it to a "fight to a finish" with the employers. Much bitterness found expression in the speeches listened to, and as a means of attracting public sympathy to the issue raised by the alliance it was a failure. Any effect it had of this kind was distinctly the other way.

It is interesting that every speaker invited to the platform proclaimed for himself and for those he represented an unconditional faith in arbitration as the only method of settling disagreements and averting strikes which had been developed by human experience. The apparent inconsistency of this declaration with the position of the alliance was reconciled by saying that the kind of arbitration provided for in the plan against which several of the unions are now in revolt was a sham and a pretense, in that its decisions were invariably in favor of the employers. One speaker, who had probably not been coached, was frank enough, while agreeing with the general sense of the meeting, to express regret that no one had deemed it proper and desirable to bring forward a plan of arbitration acceptable to organized labor which could be tendered the employers as an ultimatum, to be accepted or rejected as might suit their purposes. This was apparently a very sensible view of the matter, but it was received in silence. The reason for this is not difficult to find. Organized labor does not dare offer the insult to public opinion which would be involved in an ultimatum embodying its views as to what arbitration should be. Stated in few words it is this: The unions to formulate rules governing every usual and possible contingency in the relations between their members and the employers. A Board of Arbitration to have strictly judicial functions in deciding whether in any given case the action of the employers conformed to the union rules. If it did, no grievance exists; if not, the grievance is established and must be forthwith righted. The unions retaining, meanwhile, the right to amend their rules whenever it may suit them to do so, and such amendments to be as binding upon the action of employers as were the rules existing at the time the agreement was made. On this basis the unions would find arbitration entirely satisfactory. If their rules did not give them every possible advantage under all imaginable conditions they could be amended to correct the accidental oversights of the original draft.

It should need no argument to show that this view of arbitration is one which will never be accepted outside the councils of organized labor. It insisted upon in words or in spirit the only recourse of the employers is that which the labor leaders most fear—the declaration of the open shop.

PRISON FOR CHAUFFEURS.

Another reckless chauffeur has been sent to jail—not for a very long term, it is true, but long enough to give him opportunity for reflection which may be profitably educational as to the unwisdom of going as fast as one possibly can if the gait this involves is a good deal faster than others can possibly go.

It is well established that fines do not deter those who commit such offenses against the public peace and safety from repeating them whenever [illegible] which could be found, and will. Even five days in a local jail will be a tedious experience, and should give a man time to reflect whether it pays to defy public opinion in a matter in which feeling runs as high as it does concerning high-speed motor vehicles on common roads and public highways. The chauffeur has been treated with a measure of consideration wholly undeserved.

This reminds us to say that the public has grown very skeptical of the fair professions of the officers of the Automobile Association as to their desire to discourage the abuse of power vehicles on public roads. Whenever one of their number is arrested for exceeding the speed limit, there the counsel of the association is pretty sure to be found to defend him, wholly irrespective of the merits of the case. If a Magistrate is too zealous in enforcing the law this same association attacks him and seeks to drive him from office. By such means the association is doing its members and the cause of automobiling immeasurable harm. An adverse public opinion strong enough in expression will destroy the motor vehicle industry and make the use of automobiles on public roads impossible. The tendency is now very strongly in that direction.

GRASS AND ITS SIDE DISH.

Nothing develops a more pronounced type of "crank" than a dietary fad. In itself harmless and wholly inoffensive when practiced in the seclusion of one's own home, which others will be careful to avoid, it attains the proportions of a public nuisance the moment the faddist discovers that his mission in life is to convert others to his way of thinking. Brooklyn has a crank of this character in the person of a man who is living on a diet of green grass and cold water. The food value of grass is determinable by a very simple analysis, and its nutritive properties are not determined by crude experience, which is always untrustworthy when it leads to convictions opposed to those which would be reached inductively.

The conclusion is resisted with difficulty that a man who elects to live on a diet of grass might vary his menu with advantage, and without in any way detracting from the value of his experience, by making it include thistles. Some animals for whom grass is an appropriate food in moderation also eat thistles and seem to derive great satisfaction from eating them. By indulging this appetite the dietary crank would become in a limited degree a public benefactor. To permit but one thistle stalk to remain where two grew before is even more of a service to humanity than to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before. Grass will grow of its own motion if let alone, but thistles multiply more rapidly than the interests of agriculture permit unless an artificial restriction is interposed. Thus the ass renders society a modest service by his love for thistles, and it may be the grass-eating crank might profitably imitate his good example.

THE OPEN SHOP AND THE UNIONS.

In expelling from the Garment Workers of America Mr. HENRY WHITE, former General Secretary of that body, for refusing to lead that organization into a disastrous and utterly futile strike against the academic declaration of the associated employers in favor of the open shop, the clothing cutters and tailors have made a mistake. Their action is without significance, for the reason that Mr. WHITE resigned his office when the strike was declared, and has not since had any connection with its work, but it gave the convention of the union at Buffalo a chance to be ugly to their wisest counselor, their most zealous servant, and their best friend, and that they took it is not surprising.

In his dignified answer to the charges made against him at the Buffalo convention Mr. WHITE said many significant things, but none better worthy of consideration than the following:

> I did advocate the closed shop, and I do still, but I do not believe in maintaining the closed shop by forcing the employer to agree to it, or that upon the employer must be put the burden of supporting the union. I would despair of the labor movement if I thought it was dependent upon such support and that the union could not maintain itself at all times without regard to the employers' favor.

This is the whole matter from the point of view of the unions in few words. Mr. WHITE is and will remain one of the most prominent and level-headed leaders of organized labor in all that looks to real progress and the good of the wage earners. His successful campaign against the sweatshop evil in the large cities made for good to all in interest, and should he retire from further activity in the field for which he is so pre-eminently fitted his best work will remain and be of ultimate benefit to those who now seek to humiliate him. The labor movement can ill afford to spare a leader as sane and courageous as he.

WATERMELONS AND AFRICANS.

In the earliest study of the natural history of the African his absorptive powers in the matter of watermelons came to the front and has always staid there. It is one of his most salient characteristics, balancing in importance his unremitting and never-satiated appetite for chicken, and is as much a part of him as the kink in his hair or the color of his epidermis.

It has been surmised by those who entered upon a scientific survey of his characteristics that his various moral and other deficiencies, though seemingly rooted in his constitution and a necessary part of it, might be in a measure helped out if exactly the right dietary could be hit on for him. The watermelon obviously presented elements which assimilated more freely with his own than any other [illegible] which could be found, and great hopes have been reposed upon it as promising to have something to do with the solution of the spacious African problem which has been on the carpet with all its pressing urgencies and perplexities since the days when HAM loomed black and disturbing on the scene of Biblical history. The theory prevailed that if a point of saturation could be discovered, when an African had had enough watermelon, it might produce a revolutionary effect upon his constitution and correct a good many of his deficiencies. But in general the fruit always gave out before that point was reached.

In the case, however, of the colored youth recently discovered in Washington locked up in a watermelon car, his immurement therein lasting over several days and nights, there is nothing fanciful in the conclusion that he has had enough for once, and that if complete saturation with the juices of that noble fruit of the earth-running vine is to show marked and enduring modifications in African character they ought speedily to appear in him, and he should be set aside to the end that his moral temperature may be taken every hour or so to see whether any beneficial effect has really grown out of his rapturous and ravishing, and, to some extent, compulsory, dietary experience.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—One of our correspondents complains bitterly that "the so-called 'doings'" at the Martha Washington Hotel have been so much exploited, humorously and otherwise, by the newspapers that its amiable occupants, to their horror and indignation, now find themselves treated as one of the "sights" of New York and are the subjects of daily lectures delivered through a megaphone to the deeply interested passengers on observation automobiles. This grievance, about the reality and cruelty of which we have no question, excites our sincerest sympathy, but as we cannot remember that any of the many stories printed about the hotel were either scandalous or unkind, we feel at liberty to admit that most of them gave us joy rather than pain, and that, try as we will to share our correspondent's resentment, we still must smile gently at sufferings of this particular sort, caused in this particular way. For there is something fundamentally and essentially funny in the implications of a hotel conducted exclusively for woman, and they are not made at all less funny by enumerating the achievements and describing the character of the woman for whom the institution is a useful as well as an admirable harbor. Nobody doubts the achievements or suspects the character, and yet there is an element of the amusing in this sedulous segregation of persons who would presumably be as safe from harm in an undifferentiated hotel or boarding house as the latter would be from anything they would do in it. And the rules and regulations of the Martha Washington certainly do lend themselves with fatal docility to humorous comment, and perhaps to humorous exaggeration, for their strictness in excluding Man from all except its exterior precincts suggests a curious fear whether of Man or of his dearer complement is an alluring but dangerous question which we cannot attempt to answer. If women will or must flock by themselves behind defended bulwarks, they should not be surprised if they become the objects of a peculiar attention. They must remember that by so doing they make tacit but severe charges against their brothers, and that the alternative for the brothers is to frown or to smile. They have chosen to smile—to make jests as merry as may be, instead of the moan that would more accurately express their deepest thoughts. Surely, they should not be scolded for this.

—Admirably detailed and explicit as is the final report of the committee appointed to administer the fund raised for the relief of the sufferers from the Slocum disaster, it does not make at all clear the connection between the material circumstances of the victims and the amount of money—something over $100,000—that was spent in assisting them. The committee declares that very few of those who perished on the boat or in the river were or needed to be wage-earners. The large majority being themselves dependents in one or another family relation, they did not leave without support those who had been dependent upon them. The direct loss of property was very small, especially for a class of people familiar with and utilizing the benefits of insurance, and of course the large sum represented by bank books carried by the victims was not destroyed. And yet the committee declares that of the 590 families involved in the tragedy, three-quarters received assistance to a greater or less extent, and we all remember that there was a good deal of impassioned denunciation because the funds contributed were not distributed more freely and more promptly. It is hard to believe that aid was demanded, or even accepted, by any of the survivors or of the relatives of the dead who were able to meet their needs out of their own resources, and yet the money was spent and more would have been spent if the committee had not "drawn a line" with a firmness that gave not a little offense. We notice that the average cost of the funerals of the 705 persons buried by the committee was $115.29 each. That seems high, and it shows that from this culminating horror among the accidents of recent years the undertakers did not hesitate to glean their usual profits. It is ungracious to comment on facts like these, but the responsibility for the comment lies with those who created the facts, and in reflecting upon the expenditure of this great fund, so generously given by a sympathetic public, one cannot but recall the many desperate needs that meet with slow and scanty response because from their nature they do not excite the strong emotions that followed the burning of the Slocum. The relief committee's work was undoubtedly done with care and conscientiousness, but in its own report there is what seems to be evidence that not a few persons who would be expected to scorn the acceptance of any kind of "charity" conquered with surprising ease such reluctance as they felt.

—There is a pleasantly human touch in the story from Berlin about the use of the Kaiser's children as models for some sculptured angels that form a part of the decorations of the cathedral at Spires, in Rhenish Bavaria. To the shrewd sculptor who suggested this method of honoring the imperial offspring, the Kaiser objected that his children were not angels—a reply extremely relevant in some ways and not less irrelevant in others, but "just like a man, for all the world," and well calculated to convince most hearers of the anecdote that the great WILLIAM does possess in some measure, at least, exactly the sort of wisdom with which he is rarely credited by his critics. The sculptor, however, appealed from the Emperor to the Empress, or, rather, from the father to the mother, and she, according to the dispatch, "thought the idea charming." That settled the question, and the cathedral angels will bear, as long as they last, the faces of the children who are not angelic to paternal eyes, but are little different from angels in the maternal ones. The episode is thoroughly delightful, and the amount of pleasure it gives is illustrative of the ease with which royalty can gain credit with common people. That ease is perhaps the greatest compensation for the difficulties of the absurd position into which the accident of birth forces hereditary rulers. They have only to show the ordinary feelings of humanity to create a charmed surprise that veils their preposterous claims to superiority and turns easily to forgiveness of their efforts to enforce the claims.

—Advocates of municipal ownership have always been lamentably weak in their bookkeeping, and new evidence of this peculiarity has just been offered in criticisms they have made of a recent speech by Lord AVEBURY. He pointed out that the local indebtedness of England bids fair, owing to experiments in public trading of one sort and another, soon to eclipse the debt of the nation. To this the organ of the municipal ownership people answered that money so spent was not debt, but capital, and was so described when the expenditure was made by an individual or a private corporation. To this The London Electrical Review replies: "Quite so! When one invests one's own money in an undertaking, of course it is capital. But when one pledges one's credit and invests some one else's money in one's own business, what can that be but debt? Our contemporary goes on to say that the municipal authority is repaying the money every year, and in time every penny will be returned 'to the persons from whom it was borrowed.' To say that an individual or corporation which has borrowed money is not in debt to that extent is a contradiction in terms. Apparently, municipal finance has a language of its own, as indeed it has a peculiar system of accountancy, unknown in any other commercial circle." Of course, bad bookkeeping is not a necessary part of municipal ownership, but good bookkeeping is, and it is almost always lacking in the reports made by believers in the new methods.

VILJOEN SUED BY HIS WIFE.

Famous Boer General Is Alleged to Have Deserted Family.

From The London Chronicle.

While Gen. Ben Viljoen, the famous Boer General, is busy taking part with Piet Cronje at St. Louis in the reproduction of stirring incidents of the Anglo-Boer War, his wife has instituted proceedings in Johannesburg for the restitution of conjugal rights.

The lady states, says The Star, that she was married at Umtata, Cape Colony, in September, 1890, and that they lived at Krugersdorp, and then Roodepoort.

While at the latter place she alleges that the General, in July, 1903, deserted her. Up to the beginning of this year she received, through his agent, £8 10s. per month for the maintenance of herself and three surviving children.

Since then, she said, she had only received one sum of £7. She had, however, been drawing the rent of a house belonging to her husband, amounting now to £7 10s. She had been informed that her husband was staying at present at the Southern Hotel, St. Louis, in the United States.

The Chief Justice, in granting leave to the petitioner to sue in forma pauperis, ordered the ex-General to show cause why his wife should not proceed with the action for restitution of conjugal rights, and, failing that, for divorce, and also for the division of the estate for the maintenance and custody of the children.

ROBBING STRANGERS IN PARIS.

Ruses of Women to Obtain Money from Unsuspecting Men.

From The London Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—Meditating among the tombs at Pere Lachaise, a German student, on a trip to Paris, heard a scream, and saw a pretty girl fall down in a swoon. He naturally rushed to her assistance and supported her in his arms. She clung to him very closely. After a time she revived, and said she felt better, but still feared that she might faint again. Of course the least thing he could do was to see her home. On leaving her afterward he found that his pocketbook, rather a fat one, had disappeared, and with it £100, all he possessed. He also ascertained that at the hotel where the lady said she lived she was quite unknown, and his only consolation was to tell the police his story.

On the same day another man, older and wiser, to whom the same thing happened, sought out and found the lady, and insisted on her going to lunch with him. She pleaded a previous engagement. Then he said, "If you won't come to lunch you must come to the police station." There the female attendant searched her clothes and found nothing, when, having a brilliant inspiration, she examined the lady's boots also. In one of these was found a neatly-sewn pouch, containing the missing banknotes.

A third visitor in Paris, a Swiss, having read about the misadventures of foreigners here, and determined to be on the safe side, called at a police station. "I have come for a carbineer," he said. "A what?" "A carbineer, I tell you, to accompany me through the Paris streets. I am not such a fool as to go about this town unprotected. I have 30 francs in my pocket. I am not going to risk myself in the streets alone with such a sum." But all the police officer could do was to give him good advice, and tell him not to scrape up acquaintance with strange ladies, or strange men either, for that matter.

Pope Pius X. as Economist.

From The London Standard.

The forthcoming amalgamation of the Voce della Verita and the Osservatore Romano is but one of the many economies by which the Pope hopes to improve the finances of the Vatican. Our Rome correspondent says the reason for these measures of economy is that Peter's Pence, which in the time of Leo XIII. brought in so much, does not yield what it did. Most of the money came from France, whence the congregations, especially the Carthusians, sent magnificent sums. That there is really financial distress at the Vatican appears also from the circumstance that the present Pope has claimed from the Government the sum of 9,000 lire—an indemnity of long standing, but always refused by his predecessor. Pope Pius is not a stranger to the financial question. When he was Patriarch of Venice he took keen interest in the conduct of savings banks, and he remains the chief shareholder of one of these institutions.

A Magnifying Glass of the Vikings.

From The London Standard.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—At the recent visit of the German Society of Anthropologists to Stockholm, the theory was put forward, for whatever it may be worth, that an object in the Historical Museum may have been used by the ancient Vikings as a magnifying glass. On the German men of science being shown some beautiful gold and silver filigree work, Prof. von Eperster, an oculist, expressed the opinion that the fixing of the little grains could not have been performed with the naked eye.

This led to the Museum authorities producing an exhibit belonging to a Gothic discovery at Wisby in 1877. On close examination this proved to be a piece of rock crystal about two inches in diameter, half-spherical in shape, the side underneath being slightly convex, which was capable of magnifying objects to twice their size. The glass was found with two small folding scales and a set of weights, such as were used in the time of the Vikings for weighing gold and silver.

SOME VIEWS OF ROOSEVELT.

His Attitude on Civil Service—What His Candidacy Represents.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Roosevelt's supporters are now praising him as a civil service reformer. Let us see how this is. Col. Jewell was a member of the United States Board of General Appraisers. His wife sued him for a divorce. He denied her allegations. Subsequently her suit was dismissed. But while it was pending an opportunity was furnished by it to Mr. Roosevelt to get the place that Col. Jewell occupied. Senator Platt wanted to elect a Senator to the State Senate who would offset one of the three Senators who stood in with Gov. Odell. In order to do this it would be necessary to get a Democratic State Senator to resign.

But in order to accomplish that a place sufficiently tempting must be provided to be offered to the Democrat whose resignation was desired. So Col. Jewell was summoned by President Roosevelt to Washington and informed that, in view of the charges made against him in his wife's suit, he could not be permitted to remain in the public service, and that unless he would place his resignation in the President's hands, to take effect about two months thereafter, he would be removed at once. The Colonel bowed to superior power, Democratic State Senator McClelland resigned, and the place Col. Jewell was removed from was given to McClelland.

Of course, the latter would not have resigned his public duty except for this bribe paid to him by Mr. Roosevelt. There was no reason why the place taken from Col. Jewell should, under any circumstances, have been given by Republican Roosevelt to Democrat McClelland, except that Boss Platt wanted to try to elect another Republican Senator which he did succeed in doing—in the place made vacant by McClelland. The latter person was induced by Roosevelt to betray his trust to those who elected him, and Roosevelt paid the bribe to McClelland to tempt the betrayal.

It is not plain how this deal could have been worked except Roosevelt, Platt, and McClelland combined, and the President's professed regard for the morality of officers in the public service was made a pretext, although the case of Col. Jewell's wife was dismissed when it was called for trial.

E. R. D.

New York, Aug. 30, 1904.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When the Earl of Strafford undertook to reduce England under the absolute rule of Charles I., he gave to his system the name of "thorough," and the force of the epithet rises irresistibly to one who reads the speech of Secretary Taft at Montpelier on the 26th. Again, a spasm went over the country when Prof. Bryce was reported to have said at a Fourth of July dinner that Mr. Roosevelt was the greatest President since Washington. The last was amended by a later account that he did not say it, but there can be no doubt that Secretary Taft did make the speech. A more unqualified piece of whitewash it is difficult to imagine. The concentration of human virtue and intellect seems to surpass the resources of history. We will here, however, touch only upon two sentences:

"No man ever sat in the Presidential chair who was more anxious to avoid war or conflict with foreign nations than does he."

This can hardly be called a falsehood, because it only expresses an opinion. But it almost takes one's breath away to read such a glaring contradiction of facts. The man who wanted to send out our warships and destroy the Spanish fleet before war was declared; the man who did more than any other, with one possible exception, to bring on our war of subjugation in the Philippines; the man who sent a fleet flying to Smyrna on a report that our Consul was murdered, without waiting to hear whether he was murdered or not; another fleet to Tangier, in Morocco, the gunpowder barrel of Europe, because a rich Greek, hailing from New York, chose to buy or rent a palace in a nest of brigands and got carried off to the mountains; the man whose speeches can be quoted by the dozen exalting war as the highest of human occupations; in whose eyes Secretary Root, the author of the Militia bill of 1903, a device of which the Earl of Strafford might well have been proud, is the greatest man who has appeared in public life in his time; this is the man who stands in the first rank of Presidents in his anxiety to avoid war.

The second quotation is this:

"Our conduct in dealing with Colombia has been characterized by great patience and honor and probity."

Here again we have an opinion expressed, and here again we will have recourse to the facts. I yield to no man in appreciating the value of the Panama Canal. But there is something of more value than the canal, and that is the honor and good faith of the United States, and beyond this the maintenance of our traditional and constitutional, as opposed to arbitrary and despotic, methods of government. Congress passed a resolution instructing the President to make a treaty with Colombia for building the canal. If he could not do this he was to open negotiations with Nicaragua for the same purpose. His duty was clear. If upon trial he could do neither, he was bound to report to Congress, and ask for further instructions. Instead of this he chose to recognize a set of adventurers of more than doubtful character, in one of the provinces, as a separate Government, made a treaty with them for our building the canal, and agreed to pay them $10,000,000. It is denied that he connived at the setting up of this Government. But the fact seems to be clear that he protected it by his armed force, and forbade the interference of Colombia, which would have put an end to it in a week. Having done these things, he reported them to Congress as an accomplished fact, saying they had nothing to do but ratify it, which they accordingly did. If there is anything in the achievements of Louis Napoleon which surpasses this it would be interesting to have it pointed out. Perhaps the case may be made clearer by an illustration. Suppose the people of the United States coveted the Welland Canal and Congress directed the President to open negotiations with Great Britain for the cession of it; that Great Britain replied in terms which pointed to an exorbitant demand of price; that the President should proceed to recognize an association of individuals in Montreal as the Government of Canada, make a treaty with them involving payment, then should send regiments to prevent the interference of Great Britain, and then demand ratification by Congress of an accomplished fact. Would there be any difference except in the relative strength of the powers?

Ours is a Government of precedent. Its principles and machinery are supposed to have been settled more than a century ago. The operation of our Constitution is largely determined by what has been done since. It is doubtful whether a more dangerous precedent could be established than this of Panama.

The plan of the Republican campaign is exquisite in its simplicity and ingenuity. The President, having been the most conspicuous figure on the continent, suddenly disappears from the stage, wrapped in clouds which obscure the majesty of great Jove. An army of satellites is sent out to paint in glowing colors the splendor of the Unseen. The Democrats, on the other hand, are playing into the hands of their opponents by diverging into generalities of different kinds, tariff, trusts, labor, currency, the Philippines, &c. Failure is the only possible result. Silence for Judge Parker is a very different thing from silence for the President. If there is any hope of success it must be in taking up the glove where it is thrown down; in analysing the character and administration of President Roosevelt and opposing to them the personality and the declared policy of Judge Parker, Secretary Taft and Senator Lodge should not be allowed to have the field to themselves.

QUERIES FOR JUDGE PARKER.

Observer Asks How He Stands on the Negro Question.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a prospective voter in the coming election I would like to know what Mr. Parker's views are on the negro question. Does he favor the disfranchisement of the negro citizen and the Southern system of treatment, viz., lynching of negro criminals? I fail to find that he has expressed any opinion of his policy on those two very important matters in the event of his election.

ROMANCE OF THE GOLDFIELDS.

New Zealander Found Stone That Brought Him £75,000.

From The London Chronicle.

One of the most remarkable and romantic gold discoveries of which there is any record has been made by a Tyneside man in New Zealand.

The news comes from Mr. T. Murray, a well-known Shields man, now living in West Port, New Zealand, who has sent to his friends a cutting from a New Zealand paper announcing that Albert Winter, who is also a native of Shields, and the son of a North Shields bill-poster, has discovered in the Mokihinui district a valuable gold reef.

The discovery was made in a remarkable way. Mr. Winter stooped at the edge of a creek to pick up a piece of stone to throw at a woodhen, and in doing so he noticed that the stone was gold-bearing quartz.

Promptly he returned to the town, took out his miner's rights, and with his mate pegged off claims on the ground, and subsequently sold out his interest for £75,000.

Winter's mother, who has married a second time, is now a resident of South Shields. Albert Winter, who is thirty years of age, left South Shields three years ago last November as a stoker on the steamer Ilford. In the following February the ship was at Melbourne, and Winter left her there.

For some time afterward his family knew nothing of his whereabouts, but about a month ago they received a letter from him. The letter was written from Granaity Creek, near West Port, New Zealand, and at that time apparently he was working at the mines. That presumably was before he made his rare stroke of luck.

This is one of the biggest gold finds ever made in New Zealand. Mr. Winter is now on his way home.

Granted His Own Vacation.

From The Philadelphia Record.

Capt. George Thompson, who for some time past has been Acting Superintendent of Police, is a living exemplification of how too much red tape may result in the existence of a local Fool Bah. It is necessary when a Police Captain takes his vacation to receive the sanction of the Superintendent, and when Capt. Thompson wanted to go away last Monday he discovered that in order to preserve the records of the department it was necessary for him to write a letter to himself. This he did in the following fashion:

Capt. George Thompson, Acting Superintendent of Police:

Dear Sir: I beg leave to announce that my vacation begins on Monday, Aug. 29. Awaiting your sanction of this arrangement, I remain, yours truly,

GEORGE THOMPSON,
Captain First Division.

Then Capt. Thompson, in all gravity, sat down and indited this reply:

George Thompson, Captain First Division:

My Dear Captain: I am in receipt of your favor of even date, and see no reason why you should not take your vacation at the time mentioned.

Yours truly,

GEORGE THOMPSON,
Acting Superintendent of Police.

Thwarted by a Witness.

From The Philadelphia Record.

"A little flash of humor on the part of a witness will often destroy the best of legal examinations," said a well-known lawyer. "Not long ago I had a criminal case in which one of the best witnesses for the prosecution was a negro. Before the Coroner he had made two different statements as to the number of times he had seen one of the principals in the case, and I intended to trip him up on it in the cross-examination. If he said the first number I should confront him with the other statement from the testimony before the Coroner, and vice versa. I thought I had him cornered, no matter how he answered. I was reserving the question for the climax, and finally I asked him in my most confident manner: 'How many times did you say that you saw this child?' He hesitated a moment and then replied, in a surly tone: 'I didn't say I saw it at all. I said I seen it.' Even the Judge had to smile, and, though I hammered away at him, all the effect that I had sought was lost beyond repair."

Horseflesh Causes Typhus.

From The London Pall Mall Gazette.

An extraordinary story comes from Berne, Switzerland, concerning the origin of the typhus epidemic which is at present existing in that city. The Nouvelle Gazette de Zurich states that it is commonly reported at Berne that the outbreak has been traced to certain horseflesh which was served at a cheap restaurant, and that this horseflesh had been bought from the Bacteriological Institute, where the horse in question had previously been the subject of certain experiments with anti-typhus serum. The charge has created general indignation, and a searching inquiry into the whole affair has been demanded of the Berne sanitary authorities.

BIG BRIDGE POLICEMAN ABETS LITTLE ROMANCE

Tells Lovingest Pair in the World Where to Get Married.

BECOME ONE AT ST. PAUL'S

Run Away from Buffalo, Girl's D., L. & W. Papa Pursuing—Up-State Papers May Copy Now If They Want To.

Timidly approaching Policeman Schilp in the telephone booth at the Manhattan terminal of the Brooklyn Birdge last night, a well-dressed young man asked whether it was necessary to obtain a marriage license in New York before having the ceremony performed. The policeman, who answers all sorts of questions daily, immediately became interested in the stranger. He asked the young man whether he contemplated matrimony, and the stranger replied that he was so anxious to get married that he could not wait another hour.

"Well," said Schilp, "if you've proposed to the girl and she accepted you, go right down there to St. Paul's Church on Broadway, and they'll fix you up in less time than it takes to tell it."

"Where is Broadway?" inquired the young man. "I'm a stranger over here, although my father lives in Brooklyn. You see, I've been up to Buffalo for a year, in business there, and I became acquainted with the prettiest girl in this whole world. She is waiting for me now, and she just told me to hurry up, because, as she said, 'there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip,' and if her father appeared on the scene the marriage would be stopped.

"You see, we ran away from Buffalo and reached town last Friday, and the girl has been stopping with a friend in Brooklyn, who decided to keep our secret away from everybody until after we're married. Her father is opposed to the marriage, but he won't know anything about it until it's over. Just wait here a minute and I'll introduce you to her."

A minute later the young man appeared holding the hand of a pretty girl attired all in white.

"This is her," he said to Policeman Schilp, and the bridge cop smiled and shook hands.

"Did he tell you we want to get married right away to-night?" she asked.

"Oh, yes," said the policeman. "He was telling me what a sweet girl you were."

"Didn't I run away from my home in Buffalo for you?" said the girl.

"Yes," replied the young man, "and I suppose your father is hunting through every city in the United States for us."

"How old are you?" asked the Bridge cop, addressing the young man.

"I'm twenty-two," he answered. "She is eighteen."

"I'm just over eighteen," added the girl. "But we want to get married right now, don't we, Joe"

"Yes," said Joe, "we had a wedding ring engraved with our initials and the date Sept. 5, Labor Day, but we can't wait till then, 'cause her father may be on our trail."

"Well," said Policeman Schilp, "if you have a legal right to get married they will marry you down there at St. Paul's Church."

The couple hurried away after the bridge policeman had told them how to reach St. Paul's. At the church they told the sexton that they had no time to lose but wanted to get married before 9 o'clock, as they believed they never would have the chance again if they did not marry before that hour. The sexton directed them to the clergy house around on Church Street.

Here they introduced themselves to the Rev. Mr. Griffin. He was not sure that they had a legal right to marry so he told them to come back later in the evening. They said that they would return before 9 o'clock. Then they walked around the block holding hands, going through Vesey Street to Broadway and down to Fulton Street and back again to Church Street. After a rigid examination by the Rev. Mr. Griffin the couple qualified for the sacred bond of matrimony. As witnesses were needed the Rev. Mr. Griffin called in the housekeeper, Miss Katherine Wilson, and another employe of the house, Rupert J. Schwartz. The couple were then married, and the girl came out of the clergy house holding her marriage certificate in her hand.

It set forth that Joseph H. Porter, formerly of Buffalo, was married Sept. 1, 1904, to Rosalind Purcell of Buffalo, and that the ceremony was performed at the Trinity Clergy House by the Rev. Alfred Williams Griffin. Mr. Porter said that he was a river boat captain. The bride said she was the daughter of William Purcell, of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad.

"I didn't know it was so serious, but it is, isn't it?" remarked the bride.

"Yes," replied the bridegroom. "It was fierce to pass through all the questions the clergyman asked."

The bride and bridegroom walked back through Park Row to the bridge terminal, where they found Policeman Schilp still on duty at the telephone booth.

"We're married," they exclaimed in chorus, so loud that a score of men and women stood and stared at them.

The bridge policeman congratulated them, and wished them luck. "Stick together for life," he said.

"I could not help sticking to Joe," said the bride. "Oh, I love him so awfully, awfully much."

"Yes, sweetheart," remarked the bridegroom, "and I love you so much I could kiss you right before the eyes of every man and woman in New York. Nobody ever loved like we do, did they, darling?"

"No, dearest," replied the bride, "but we must hurry over to Thirty-second Street, Brooklyn, where my friend has prepared a wedding supper for us. Isn't it lovely to be married. I'm Mrs. Porter now. Buffalo papers please copy."

With this remark the happy bride grasped the hand of the bridegroom and went over the bridge on a Third Avenue trolley car, while several women who had heard them talking out loud about the marriage, waved their handkerchiefs and shouted: "Good luck."

"WILLIAM," SAID HERBST.

But Wife Called Him George, Whom Detectives Wanted.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Sept. 1.—George Herbst, well dressed and well mannered, was brought here last night from Albany and locked up on a charge of issuing worthless checks. He formerly lived in Rutherford and is accused of having swindled many tradesmen there.

When the detectives called at his home in Albany, they say, Herbst, who answered the bell, said:

"My name is not George. I am William Herbst."

Just then his wife, who didn't know to whom her husband was talking, called down from the head of the stairs:

"Now, George, why didn't you put on your necktie?"

The detectives thereupon took Herbst into custody.

SEEKING DUNELLEN MAIDS.

Bachelors Ask the City Officials to Find Wives for Them.

Special to The New York Times.

DUNELLEN, N. J., Sept. 1.—Mayor Wyckoff and other village officials are receiving letters from hapless bachelors and widowers imploring them to find helpmeets for them among the marriageable old maids so numerous in staid old Dunnellen. Ever since a youthful statistician made it known to the world that there were not enough young men to go around the girls have been in a high state of indignation, and their tempers were not improved by a big sign tacked to the Post Office building last night. It reads:

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

One of Dunellen's old maids has been captured!

The citizens are very indignant over the sign, but as yet Postmaster Brakely has not ordered it torn down. Among the letters received by Mayor Wyckoff yesterday was one from L. Hirt of 222 Suydam Street, Brooklyn, who asked to be "put in communication with a nice respectable girl of good family, not of extravagant habits or tastes."

WILL SUE SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

Kentucky Taxes to be Based on $315,000,000 Valuation.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 1.—State Revenue Agent Bizot will now press suit against the Southern Pacific for back taxes on a valuation of $315,000,000, and it is said the company may reincorporate in another State.

Bizot was willing to settle on a $100,000,000 basis, but the company wanted to pay $30,000 to settle all back taxes and $10,000 annually hereafter.

This compromise the revenue agent refused to make and all negotiations are off.

BEREFT BY SLOCUM, MIND GONE

Bertuch Got Message from Above, He Said, to Burn His House.

Hugo Bertuch, thirty-six years old, of 171 Brown Avenue, the Bronx, was locked up in the Westchester Police Station last night after he had tried to burn down the house in which he lived. He was later sent to Bellevue Hospital, where it was said that he was mentally unbalanced.

Bertuch lost several relatives in the Slocum disaster, and hasn't been right since, so the neighbors say. John Garvey, who owns the house at 171 Brown Avenue, saw smoke issuing from Bertuch's apartments last night and, running up, found the bed ablaze and Bertuch in the act of throwing the furniture on the flames. Garvey got a policeman and Bertuch was locked up.

Bertuch said at the station house that he received a telephone message from heaven yesterday afternoon that Mrs. Garvey had compelled Capt. Van Schaick to set fire to the General Slocum, and that God had ordered him to set fire to the house and burn up Mrs. Garvey and her family.

EZRA KENDALL'S NEW PLAY.

First Production of "Weather-Beaten Benson" Given at Atlantic City.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 1.—"Weather-Beaten Benson," Ezra Kendall's new play, had its first presentation at Young's Pier Theatre here to-night. The veteran actor was supported by a cast which includes Joseph Slaytor, Thurlow Burgen, William A. Hackett, Harry Hanlon, Lotta Linthicum, Ethel Brandon, Zellie Davenport, Lucille Laverne, and little Edith Taliaferro, the ten-year-old sister of Mabel Taliaferro.

Ezra Kendall has perhaps a more serious part than he ever before essayed, but the play gave every indication of success. The house was well filled and the audience was enthusiastic.

IN THE SHOPS.

Here is something that really should please the most difficult person in the world for whom to buy a present, the Man. This is a pipe with the initials carved upon it. The monogram is even better than the letters and these will cost from $1.50 to $3. Or the initials may be put on in silver, and these will cost $2.50 a letter. But be sure that this is done as it should be, or a lower price will be found poor economy. The silver letter should be cut from a sheet of silver, the place into which it is to go cut out for it, and the silver inlaid in the regular manner. It is sometimes done by making a silver amalgam, which is pressed into the opening cut for the letter, and this, when the pipe becomes hot, rolls down the sides of the bowl in silver tears.

It is time to begin to think of Hallowe'en days, though they are still a good time off. In making plans there are jack-o'-lanterns of all sizes to be found to hold candles, pumpkin bonbon boxes, black cats, witches, and figures representing Mephistopheles, to help on the mystic spells. All of these except the first are bonbon boxes. Black witch cats in papier-maché cost from 15 cents apiece up to 50 cents, and with fur coats, 35, 50, and 75 cents. The jack-o'-lanterns come in all sizes, from tiny things just large enough to hold a candle, and cost from 10 cents to 75, while pumpkin boxes cost from 15 cents to 90, and the latter will hold a generous supply of candy. The witch, who looks like the old lady "who flew so high to sweep the cobwebs from the sky," and Mephistopheles cost different prices, acording to size.

Devil pipes are among Indian novelties for favors. They have a head of Mephisto carved on the bowl and cost 25 cents a piece or something less by the dozen.

Father Knickerbocker as a bonbon box costs 35 cents.

If a woman bets a hat this election she can pay it if she loses with a favor derby, a tape measure which looks quite near enough like the genuine article if it is a little small. Little brown jugs, hat boxes, and any number of other things are also tape measures and cost, most of them, 25 cents each.

A jack-o'-lantern with a stick costs 45 cents.

For the would-be hygienic individual there are toothbrush holders, which are quite the best things seen yet. One of these for a single toothbrush has a back about the size and shape of an ordinary thermometer back and is of solid glass. At the lower part is a little receptacle in which the handle end of the tooth brush stands. The brush is at the upper end in a little glass case, and while the air can circulate around it, it is at the same time protected from dust and germs. The holder is made to hang upon the wall and costs $2. There is a less expensive one for two brushes. It has a wider wooden back, two metal holders at the bottom, and two glass covers at the top. It costs $2.25.

Toilet sets for the children, wash bowls, pitchers, &c., are in a deep cream toned pottery, with designs of children after Kate Greenaway upon them in delicate colors. They are pretty in shape, decoration, and coloring.

They manage these things better in—London! It is a sentimental journey that Miss Edna May takes from her convent school to the open Stock Exchange, and finally to a students' ball in the Latin Quarter, but that is not the point of the allusion. The point is that, in itself, "The School Girl" is for the most part commonplace enough, and that whatever life and charm it has—and it has much more than a little—comes not from the matter but from the manner.

The secret of the charm of these English importations, that have become so to speak a fixture at Daly's, is first refinement and then modulation. The scenes are in a simple way, richly beautiful, the costumes modish and well worn, the dances lightly graceful and seemly. The wit and horseplay are never cheap, and are always such as one can give way to without parting with the finer and dearer risibilities.

Above all, the finer shadows of the art of musical comedy are as carefuly observed as the high lights, and as one may add, the loud noises. From the scene in the convent yard, in which the chorus was of modest blueskirt schoolgirls, through the half world of the Parisian Stock Exchange, and into the full swing (not top full) of the Latin Quarter, there is a gently varied climax of sound and movement that delights all the senses, and wounds none of them. If in this particular case, the fun is nowhere fast and furious, that does not argue that it might not have been—and all the faster and more furious for the moderate working up toward the finish. They manage these things better in London, even when the things themselves are not of the best.

Of invention in plot and character Messrs. Paul Potter and Henry Hamilton have revealed no great store. The music of Mr. Leslie Stuart (eked out by Mr. Paul Rubens) is a little more scintillant; but the main responsibility for the evening's enjoyment rests with the actors.

Miss Edna May's demureness is perhaps a trifle more sedate than when she was last seen here; her features certainly reveal more charactar than is to be found in the soft sublimes of her portraits. Her dancing has not gained in sprightliness; but, to adopt one of the lines of the piece, she is a long way from being fogey underfoot, and dances with bewitching grace and mastery. Her convent costume of aesthetic blues and grays she wears through both scenes of the first act, and she is equally charming in it as the leader of the girlish romps at school and as a young person mistaken for a typewriter, or rather typist—which is the English word, of fairer connotations. In the last act she blooms forth in splendid ball costume. But it can scarcely be said that she took the house by storm, and will probably always enjoy her most genuine successes in London.

She generously shared the honors of the evening with the men. George Grossmith, Jr., was unflaggingly amusing as a silly-ass old roué, acting in the manner long familiar to the London stage, and best embodied of late years by Mr. G. P. Huntley of "Three Little Maids." Mr. James Blakeley as a clownish nouveau riche was equally amusing and equally reminiscent—Clyde Cherier and the music hall stage. Many of the sallies of both were of the daintiest and crispest sort of fooling. With Mr. Fred Wright, Jr., they made a capital trio, and one of their songs, "Be Simple," was the brightest spot in the evening. The cavortings of three old boys of the town with children's toys admirably satirized the modern fad of the simple life.

Mr. Talleur Andrews acted the part of the juvenile lover with all the intensity and humorlessness of grand opera, but sang well. Miss Mildred Baker, as the Mother Superior, had one good sentimental song and sang it well. Miss Clara Braithwaite did a sketch of a bonne with character and humor. Miss Constance Hyen was the sentimental maiden, and very pretty and pleasing, except for the suspicion of a simper and a bad habit of ogling the gallery.

Quality and charm are the virtues of the new piece, and if it does not duplicate its long run in London, it will no doubt amuse many audiences of cultivated people.

THE CHORUS GIRL POLITICIANS.

Parker Club Wants Cockran and McConville to Speak for Them.

At the Democratic Headquarters yesterday Judge McConville was approached by a bevy of chorus girls. They asked him to speak at their meeting next Tuesday afternoon at the Lyric Theatre and he promised to do what he could. The organization is called the Theatrical Women's Parker Club. The club has invited W. Bourke Cockran to say something too, but no answer has been received from him yet.

The chorus girls have spent $70, they say, in advertising their meeting, and they expect several hundred theatrical women to be there. Mr. Sampson, at Democratic Headquarters, has arranged for much campaign literature to be scattered at the meeting.

"THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN" AGAIN.

Wallack's Crowded at Revival of George Ade's Political Comedy.

A big crowd went to Wallack's Theatre last night to see "The County Chairman," George Ade's comedy, which achieved such a great success at the same house last Winter. There were evidently some hundreds there who had seen the play before, for they were ready to laugh before Jim Hackler, Sassafras Livingston, and the rest cracked their jokes. The opening of "The School Girl" across the street and of "The Royal Chef" up on Forty-second Street did not affect the attendance at the Ade play. There were no empty seats.

Maclyn Arbuckle is still the astute Jim Hackler. He brushes the dust off his shoes in exactly the same way as he did 259 nights last season. As Sassafras Livingston, the impecunious, rheumatic "nigger," Willis P. Sweatnam still divides honors with the Chairman himself. Frances Ring, a sister of Blanche Ring, is the only new member of the cast. She is filling the part of Lucy Rigby, and is thoroughly satisfying in the part.

"The County Chairman" will be at Wallack's Theatre only for a short engagement. It will be followed by "The College Widow," Ade's new comedy.

ASBURY PARK LAKE CARNIVAL.

Crowd of 50,000 Spectators Thronged the Illuminated Banks.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 1.—Fifty-thousand spectators enjoyed the closing event of carnival week to-night, the carnival on Deal Lake. The crowd occupied every vantage point on the north and south banks of the stream. The cottages in North Asbury Park and Loch Arbor, bordering on the stream, were illuminated and decorated. Strings of incandescent lights were strung between the Main Street and Park Avenue Bridges on either side. Pryor's Band occupied a float midway between these structures. Illuminated motor boats and canoes to the number of 200 took part in the fete. There were also several very pretty floats representing the Allenhurst and Deal Beach hotels.

Titania, Queen of the Carnival, impersonated by Miss Edith Leaming Reeves of Philadelphia, was the guest of honor, occupying with her Court ladies an illuminated launch in charge of Commodore J. Edward Wortman. Floating beacons of colored fires, aerial bombs, and showers made the surroundings as light as day. The boats made no attempt to form a procession, but flitted about the lake in Venetian style. Six silver loving cups were given to the owners of the floats and canoes which excelled in decorations and illuminations.

NAVAL OFFICERS' ROWS UPSET LAUNCH PLANS

Stand Put Up for the Connecticut Ceremony Is Torn Down.

DISPUTES ABOUT THE SEATS

Now a Small Stand Will Accommodate Official Guests—Washington Regards Matter as Local.

Visitors to the Brooklyn Navy Yard were astonished yesterday to see workmen razing the new stand built at an expense of $400 for the launching of the new battleship Connecticut on Sept. 29. It is thought that the order was issued from the Navy Department because of the disputes that have arisen among officials over the assignment of seats, and is taken to be in the nature of a rebuke. Trouble arose over the right of certain officers to assign front seats on the stand to their friends.

It was the intention of the officers to make the launching of the battleship as exclusive a function as possible. An appropriation of $1,500 was made for the entertainment of 600 people, and invitations were to be issued chiefly to prominent naval officials and their families.

The construction of the stand was begun at the prow of the battleship, the stern of which is toward the water. It occupied the entire length of Building No. 117. A large force of men were employed and the work hurried as much as possible. As soon as the work was completed the assignment of seats was discussed and heated argument immediately arose, and so warm did it become that the story reached Washington.

About twenty-five men, most of whom were employed in building the stand, commenced the job of undoing their work, and last night only a few beams remained standing. It is now said that the bickering officers will be made to suffer by being compelled to stand with their guests and watch the ceremony of the launching from the ground.

The order, whatever the source, also directed the erection of a smaller stand, large enough to contain those directly interested in the launching, together with the official guests. The original plan contemplated the building of three stands, holding about fifteen hundred people. It is now expected that 3,000 people will be permitted to enter the yard to witness the ceremonies. These people will choose their own vantage ground, and in this way the dispute for precedence has been settled.

The elimination of the stands will give to the citizens who are permitted to go within the yard, a better view of the ceremonies, and as residents of Brooklyn are very generally interested in their first battleship, it is believed that pressure will be brought to bear at Washington to compel the officers at the yard to let all who desire visit the yard on the day of the launching.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The launching of the Connecticut at the New York Navy Yard is regarded at the Navy Department as a matter wholly in the control of the Commandant of that yard. No orders have been issued from Washington to take down the stand erected for the accommodation of visitors to the launching, and Assistant Secretary Darling said he did not known whether the stands had been put up or taken down until he was advised of the matter to-night. The department in all probability will take no hand in the matter.

HITCH IN PHIPPS AGREEMENT.

Children Were to Have Been Returned to Their Mother Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—The two children abducted from a New York hotel by Lawrence Phipps were not returned to their mother to-day as was expected. Henry Phipps had advised Lawrence Phipps, his nephew, from London that it was his wish that the children be returned to their mother pending a settlement of the dispute. This was to be done Sept. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Phipps have practically reached an agreement relative to the charge of the children. The hitch on a final settlement is a financial one.

HOTEL ASTOR OPENS.

Its Dining Rooms, Cafes, and Corridors Thronged with Visitors.

The new Hotel Astor, in Times Square, between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, was opened for business last night, and a large number of persons availed themselves of its accommodations. All the machinery of the hotel was in working order and a full complement of employes were on duty. The dining rooms attracted numerous guests, meals being served in all the cafés. The hotel was thronged with visitors, who were shown through the building by guards.

Although the hotel is ready for business, the official opening will not be until Sept. 10, as several minor details of its equipment are still uncompleted.

GOTSHALL TO TRY AGAIN.

New Application and $100,000 Bond Guarantee Now Planned.

According to William F. King, Chairman of the Merchants' Association's Committee on Franchises and Transportation, every effort will be made to provide for the building of the Port Chester Railroad despite the Board of Aldermen. Mr. King said yesterday that he had held a conference with William C. Gotshall, President of the Port Chester Company, and a representative of Charles D. Barney & Co., who appeared as financiers back of the railway project, to consider a plan for a new application.

"It is expected that such an application will be made," said Mr. King, "and when made it will be accompanied by a bond or a certified check for $100,000, guaranteeing that the road will be constructed in conformity with the terms of the ordinance, it passed by the Board of Aldermen."

WILL SPECIFIED COFFIN GOWN.

Miss Brady Asked to be Buried in Cream Silk, with Ruffles.

Among the wills filed for probate yesterday in the Surrogates' office was that of Miss Isabella Brady, who died in this city on July 12 last. In it the testator makes her own funeral arrangements and goes into detail as to the style of dress which she desired to wear in her coffin.

"I request," she says in the will, "that my burial casket be plain and simple, covered with black cloth, and lined with white satin, having silver handles, nails, and inscription plate, and a black velvet pall, edged with white, thrown over it.

"I desire to be buried in a plain and simple cream-colored silk dress, with real thread lace ruffles round the neck, and sleeves of the same color, with sash to match. I desire that the mourning ring for dear mother be allowed to remain on my finger.

"The sum of $15 is to be expended upon the purchase of a black dress, hat, and gloves for Mrs. Emma Keeler of 225 East Tenth Street, this city."

In the codicil of the will this clause is revoked. After making provision for the purchase of a burial plot in Kensico Cemetery, together with a headstone for her grave, the testator directs her executors to set aside the sum of $500 to keep her grave in order. Then she adds:

"I direct my executors to expend the sum of $1,000 for the purchase of a drinking fountain, for the use of the public, at the entrance to or in or near Kensico Cemetery, the same to be provided with a tablet, on which shall be inscribed the following: 'Erected to the memory of Richard and Isabella Blunt, parents of my dear mother, Mary Harriet Brady, by her loving daughter, Isabella Brady.'"

James King Duffy, the attorney of the testator, is directed to proceed to England after the testator's death, and there erect a monument to the memory of Miss Brady's mother, in the Erith Churchyard. Funds are to be provided for the expenses of the attorney to and from England, and the executors are directed "to pay particular attention to the letter of instructions in relation thereto." The value of the estate is believed to be large.

MORE ATHLETIC RECORDS

M. J. Sheridan Increases World's Discus Throwing Mark to 132 Feet.

NEW YORK ATHLETES WINNERS

Myer Prinstein Breaks Olympic Record for Running Broad Jump—Flanagan in Poor Form in Weight Events.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 1.—M. J. Sheridan of the Greater New York Irish Athletic Association of New York City, throwing from scratch in the discus handicap, broke the world's record for throwing the discus, with a throw of 132 feet. Sheridan held the former record of 127 feet 9½ inches. Three Olympic records were also broken. The weather was ideal from an athletic standpoint. It was late in the afternoon before the sun came from behind the clouds, and all day there was a cooling breeze blowing across the field.

The discus throw was one of the handicap events, and attracted little attention until the announcers called the result of M. J. Sheridan's first throw. It came within a few inches of equaling the world's record made by himself of 127 feet 9½ inches. When Sheridan again stepped into the seven-foot ring the crowd awaited almost breathlessly while the steel discus whirled through the air. The measurers, who had been drawn comparatively close to the circle by a former throw, raced to the spot where the discus had buried itself 130 feet 9 inches from the starting point. The result of the measurement was greeted with cheers, but the demonstration was as nothing to that which followed the announcement of the result of the next throw, 132 feet even. So that there should be no question regarding the authenticity of the record, the discus used by Sheridan was weighed, and found to be one-eighth of an ounce overweight.

The greatest race of the day and one of the most sensational of the entire meeting was the 800-meter run. The distance in American measure is 874.89 yards. Entered in the race were representatives of the United States, Germany, Canada, and New Zealand, but the first four places were claimed by men running under the colors of Chicago, New York, and Milwaukee athletic clubs. Not only did James D. Lightbody of the Chicago Athletic Association lower the Olympic record by five and two-fifths seconds, but he ran the legs off the German representative, who collapsed at the finish. The pace also proved to be heartbreaking for E. W. Breitkreutz of the Milwaukee Athletic Club, who, after crossing the tape in third place, fell exhausted on the track. It was several minutes before he could leave the field.

The result in the 56-pound weight-throwing event proved a disappointment. It was confidently expected that Flanagan of the Greater New York Irish Athletic Association would break the Olympic record and possibly the world's record. The New Yorker was in rather poor form, and not only did he fail to surpass the records made by himself at former meets, but he was bested by a clean foot by E. Desmarteau of Montreal, Canada. The latter's best throw was 34 feet 4 inches, 2 feet 3½ inches below Flanagan's Olympic record. In the 56-pound handicap event Desmarteau did a trifle better, throwing 34 feet 10¾ inches.

The enthusiasm of the crowd was renewed a short time later when Myer Prinstein of the Greater New York Irish Athletic Association added 6½ inches to the Olympic running broad jump record established by A. C. Kraenzlein of the University of Pennsylvania at the Paris games in 1900. Kraenzlein, who was also the Olympic champion in the 200 meter hurdle, was deposed by H. L. Hillman of the New York Athletic Club. The race was one of the prettiest of the day, the first three men crossing the tape in a bunch, and making it difficult to determine the winner from the grand stand across the field. Hillman got away in front, and although headed in the early part of his race, regained the lead and crossed the tape in record time of 24 3-5 seconds.

In addition to the regular handicap events, the Olympic championship dumbbell competition was begun, Fred Winters of the New West Side Athletic Club of New York winning four out of five events determined to-day. There are no events scheduled for to-morrow, the day having been set side for the competing athletes to rest and prepare themselves for the final events which will be contested on Saturday. The summary follows:

YACHTS IN CLOSE FINISHES.

First Race of Atlantic Yacht Club Series in the Bay.

The Atlantic Yacht Club held yesterday afternoon the first of a series of races that will continue, Sunday excepted, until Labor Day. Eleven yachts started in a fresh south-southeasterly breeze and made an exceptionally pretty race, the winner in one clas being only two seconds ahead of the second boat, and in another class only four seconds ahead. Four of the yachts, the largest of the starters, sailed over a triangular course on the lower bay, while the remainder covered a quadrangle on Gravesend Bay.

The first division had a broad reach with booms on the starboard hand for the first leg, a beat for the second leg, and a run with spinnakers on the starboard hand for the third leg. The second division had an easy reach with booms to port, a broad reach with booms to starboard, a run with spinnakers to port, and a beat home. Both divisions went twice around the course.

The first round was finished as follows: First division—Maydic, 4:15:08, Redwing, 4:16:13; Bagheera, 4:22:42; Bobtail, 4:23:05. NATIONAL COMMISSION MEETS.

August Herrmann Re-elected President and New Rules Adopted.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 1.—The National Baseball Commission held its annual meeting to-day, and besides electing officers for another year, adopted new rules and investigated a number of cases. August Herrmann, President of the Cincinnati National League Club, presided at the meeting. John E. Bruce, Secretary of the commission, reported that the National League had purchased fifty-two players and the American League fifty players from minor leagues, making one hundred and two cases in all for the commission to settle. Brooklyn had the longest list, twenty-three.

The adoption of the new rules disposed of many of the cases of players purchased from minor leagues, notably what was called "the Baltimore bunch," claimed by Hanlon of Brooklyn. The rules, adopted before the commission considered any special cases were intended to prevent all cases of "covering up players."

It was stated when copies of these additional rules were handed out to the press and to representatives of minor leagues that there would be "no hiding of players" by major leagues to be returned to minor leagues.

The purchases of the Chicago and Washington American League Clubs were approved. The purchase of Sullivan by Detroit from Minneapolis was approved. The Cleveland American League Club received until Sept. 20 to pay one-third of the purchase money for Player Kahl. The Greater New York Club received until Sept. 20 to pay one-half of the purchase price for players Yeager and McManus of Montreal. The purchases of the Brooklyn Nationals from Jersey City were thrown out. The players purchased by the New York Nationals from the Springfield Club were approved.

The following players were drafted by the Brooklyns: Frank Hershey of Ilion, William Lauterborn of Syracuse, and J. P. Volz of Manchester. Minnehan of Birmingham was stricken from its list, it being shown that he had been purchased by Cincinnati.

Rival Trotters to Meet Next Monday.

The Labor Day matinee of the New York Driving Club at the Empire City track may settle the season's trotting championship, as the principal race brings together Thomas B. Leahy's black trotter, Princess Pique, and John F. Cocker'll's mare, Anna Little. Princess Pique leads her rival by four points, and if she wins on Monday it will give her a lead that would secure for her the silver trophy when the season ends on Oct. 1.

So close is the pacing championship that it cannot be known for a couple of matinees just what horse is liable to prove a winner. On Monday, Don Riley, Free Advice, and Bud Stout have an inning. The first two are tied with the mark of 2:13 for the record cup.

Eleven races are scheduled for the matinee and some high-class sport is assured. As this is a purely amateur meeting, admission is free to the public, even the programmes being distributed with the club's compliments. The first race will be called at 1:30 P. M.

Boston and Cleveland Divide Honors in Double Header—Brooklyn Loses with New Pitcher.

Boston's one defeat by Cleveland in a double-header yesterday and the Greater New York's victory over Detroit makes another close and interesting contest for the leadership in the American League, the champions having but one point advantage over the local team. At Philadelphia the Quakers were compelled to succumb to St. Louis, while at Washington the tail-enders beat the Chicagoans by 1 to 0. Only two games were played in the National League, Chicago shutting out the Brooklyns, who used their new pitcher, Koukalik, and St. Louis beating Philadelphia. Summary follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Greater New Yorks Play Without an Error and Beat Detroit.

Perfect fielding and Coughlin's errors were responsible for the Greater New York victory over the Detroit team yesterday. The batting was rather light, both Donovan and Powell pitching in good form, but while the number of base hits was in favor of the local team those of the visitors counted for more, as they earned both of their runs, while the New Yorks were entitled to but one. With Coughlin at third base and Hickman at first the Detroit team appeared to be greatly strengthened since its former visit to this city, in July, although Coughlin yesterday made the only mistakes credited to his team.

One of the pleasing incidents in connection with the game was the appearance of some 400 boys and girls, the inmates of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, on Amsterdam Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street. They were accompanied by a band composed entirely of the children of the institution, and before the game began played a number of popular selections quite creditably. While the local men were practicing the fife and drum corps, made up of some of the smallest boys of the asylum, marched up the field under the leadership of a drum major, whose fur hat was almost as tall as himself. After saluting both teams the boys broke ranks and sat with their comrades in the grand stand.

Two umpires officiated in the game, O'Loughlin judging balls and strikes and Connolly giving decisions on the bases. It was not until the third inning that the Detroit batsmen began batting. Powell with effect, but at that only one man crossed the plate. After Crawford had been thrown out at first base by Elberfeld, Hickman sent the ball into the corner of the right field for three bases, but in his anxiety to score on Beville's hit to Elberfeld, was caught on a splendid throw to Kleinow. After two strikes had been called on Lowe the veteran hit between left and centre fields for three bases, scoring Beville. O'Leary could not help his manager, and he was left on base. The visitors received no further chance to score until the eighth inning, when Lowe, for the third time, hit safely. It was a two base to left field. O'Leary advanced him to third, and on Barrett's high bounding ball to Williams Lowe tallied.

Keeler made the first hit for New York in the first inning, then Elberfeld followed with a base on balls. Anderson swung at the ball hard and sent it far into Barrett's territory for three bases, scoring both Keeler and Elberfeld. In the third inning, after two were out, Elberfeld, for the second time, reached first on four bad balls, but he unwisely attempted to make third on Anderson's rather short hit to left field. McIntyre made a good throw to Coughlin, and to many of the spectators it looked as though Elberfeld, by making a good slide, succeeded in his effort. Umpire O'Loughlin, however, who had stumbled and fell on his back, decided against the runner. In the fifth inning two more runs were added to the New Yorks' score. Dougherty bunted safely along the third base foul line, Keeler followed with another bunt, this time to Coughlin, and the latter threw so wildly to first base that Dougherty got home easily and Keeler reached third. Beville subsequently made a good throw to Coughlin to catch Keeler off the base, but Coughlin allowed the ball to get away from him, and "Willie" ran home. The score:

Boston Lost and Won.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Cleveland won the first of two games here to-day, but Boston's victory in the second contest enabled the champions to retain the lead in the pennant race by the narrowest of margins.

The earlier game was practically decided in the second inning, when the visitors bunched hits after two men were out and scored three runs. Rhoades was effective after the first inning, aided by support in which Lajoie and Turner were very conspicuous.

The second game was characterized by Boston's heavy batting, although the presence of an immense overflow crowd in the outfield limited the value of hits to three bases. Gibson's clever pitching and a running catch by Parent were the other notable features. Scores:

Personal property of foreign corporations doing business in New York is taxable when kept within New York.

By the laws of New York both lineal and collateral inheritance taxes are imposed, not only on the estates of residents, but also on the personal estate of non-residents found in New York. No such laws exist in New Jersey.

It is therefore evident that it is of great advantage both to individuals and corporations to have Safe Deposit accommodations and Bank Accounts in New Jersey.

PHILADELPHIA TRANSACTIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—The "outside" arbitrage shares—Reading, the Steels, Erie, and Rock Island—contributed the bulk of to-day's dealings, although the sales in Reading were only about one-fifth the business transacted yesterday. Warwick Iron and Steel and Philadelphia Rapid Transit joined the list of active stocks to-day, but it did not appreciably affect their prices, which were only fractionally higher. Electric Storage Battery was up ¾, and the Consolidated Lake Superior issues were also slightly higher. Consolidated Traction of New Jersey made a new high record by selling at 72. International Smokeless Powder was off 1¼ from last previous sales, but ½ each was added to the prices of Minehill Railroad, North Pennsylvania and Germantown, Norristown and Chestnut Hill Railroad. There was some important selling of Philadelphia Traction, but the stock was promptly taken at 90. Total sales, 25,321 shares; $56,100 bonds. Transactions:

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Strong; Call Money Easy, 7-8@1 Per Cent.

Business Renews Its Buoyancy—The List Generally Higher Despite Continued Uncertainty Regarding Cotton and Grains.

The stock market yesterday provided further disappointment for those who had been expecting that reaction which they need in their business, and it did so in spite of news adapted to promote that result. The grain crops were not destroyed further or again, but the produce markets were firm and active, more so here than abroad. But the foreign markets more than ours reflected the old reliable Journal of Commerce's whack at the cotton crop. Its 1,300 correspondents have informed it that the present condition is 77, against 64 a month ago. This leaves the condition about two points below a year ago, but it should be said over an acreage so much larger that the yield should be ample, nevertheless.

The influence of this news was not any more clearly reflected in the stock market yesterday than earlier in the week. The grangers did not yield because the produce market was strong, and the cotton carriers, which have been weak without any clear reason recently, were not weaker than others yesterday. What the improvement lacked in amount it recouped in generality, advances being liberally distributed. The weakest spot on the list was the tractions, with the exception of Brooklyn. The exception is meritorious, for Brooklyn's future contains influences opposite in character to those which are depressing Metropolitan. The weakness in Reading was remarkable only because it has been so industriously tipped for the rise. The Rock Islands, common and preferred, sprang into sudden activity and strength, as has long been anticipated by those who have watched the steady rise in the system's bonds and guaranteed issues. Steel continued strong, of course, contributing a fifth of the day's total business. It was easily the leader of the market. The news of the trade was not good, the rumored price agreement being denied, and price agreements being a poor substitute for business, anyway. But it is useless to quarrel with facts. The Steel stocks rose upon buying of a different and better sort than covering by shorts. The strength in the Tobacco stocks also continued. Consolidated Tobacco 4s were dealt in to the aggregate of $4,358,000, or about one-half the day's total bond business once more. Their tone was feverish, the close being below the best, 73¼. Cynics still thought the movement distributive, but in conservative quarters the statement was made that the security is worth even its present price. A bond secured upon a stock is something of a nondescript, but if the stock is both a good earner and representative of actual cash rather than water, the security may be better than its description.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

The Louisville Railway Company has filed amendments to its articles of incorporation increasing its capital stock by $1,100,000.

Coal shipments over Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburg and Erie for the week ending Aug. 27, it is stated, were 745,587 tons, making the total for the year to date, 25,894,216 tons, against 27,785,769 tons last year.

The St. Louis Southwestern net earnings for the month of July were the largest net earnings for any month of July in the history of the company.

U. S. Realty Deposits.

The time for the deposit with the New York Security and Trust Company of the stocks of the United States Realty and Construction Company under the reorganization plan expired yesterday. It was authoritatively stated that a large amount of the old stocks have been turned in under the agreement, and that only a few scattered holdings still remain out. It was stated that no further extension for depositing the stocks is likely to be made.

Steel Pools Procrastinate.

Regarding the meetings of the Steel Beam and Plate Pools, which were held in Jersey City, it was learned that the two associations took no action, but adjourned to hold another meeting in a few weeks. This in

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Activity in Consolidated Tobacco 4s Continues—Increasing Interest in Japanese Bonds.

Extraordinary activity was displayed again yesterday in Consolidated Tobacco bonds, and they were again conspicuously strong, opening up 2¾ points and closing with a net gain of 1½ points. There was not much activity in the various tobacco stocks quoted on the Exchange, and most of them reacted slightly from the previous day's prices, but little interest attached to the movement in the stocks, owing to the much greater activity and strength of the bonds. Rumor was again busy with the affairs of the Tobacco Trust, but a great many were inclined to the belief that the activity in the bonds was inspired largely by a desire on the part of insiders to create a better market for the bonds, which had long been selling at a price almost ridiculously low for any 4 per cent. security, even remotely entitled to be designated by the name of bond. It is at least certain that the movement in Consolidated Tobacco bonds has the support of some conservative banking interests where the opinion is expressed that the advance is entirely warranted by the earnings of the company.

Shorts Suffer Again in Steel.

There could be little doubt that the shorts were being rather roughly handled in Steel preferred, and the way the stock advanced with little encouragement from any outside source indicated pretty clearly the truth of the statement so often made recently that the stock had been very much oversold. The Street is hearing now that the advance in Steel preferred is likely to go much further before the movement is over. Certainly yesterday's advance was well maintained, and there was no sign of weakness in the stock when the market closed, the final price being within an eighth of the best and showing a net gain of 1¼ points.

One Advance with a Reason.

In the showing made by the St. Louis and Southwestern for the month of July there seemed to be plausible reason for the advance that occurred in the company's preferred stock, but of late stocks have so often moved without any reference whatsoever to the news affecting them that there was a disposition to consider the increased earnings as a mere coincidence of the advance rather than its cause.

More Interest in Japanese Bonds.

Japanese bonds within the past few days have become quite active, and it is said that interest in them is becoming broader, probably as a result of the further progress of the Japanese in the Far Eastern war. It is stated that the bonds are being bought here for foreign account as well as by local investors. Among the large buyers of the bonds yesterday was Sig H. Rosenblatt, who was said to be buying the bonds on European orders.

Surplus	19,919.54
Previous surplus	1,537,862.31
Balance forward	$1,557,781.85

President Ingalls says:

"The encouraging feature of this report is the increase of the rate per ton per mile on freight and the increase in passenger earnings. There would also have been an increase in freight earnings instead of the slight decrease shown if the business could have been moved.

"The history of the operations of your railway for the last year is very much like that of others. Within the last five years earnings have increased nearly 50 per cent., and it has been impossible to enlarge the facilities in a corresponding ratio, consequently the tracks became crowded and business congested, which added largely to our expenses of operating. With the slight decrease in business and the improved weather, our trains have been running more regularly and expenses greatly reduced.

"At the date of writing this report the business of the company is fairly good; the passenger business, on account of the World's Fair at St. Louis, is large, and this will continue for the balance of the calendar year. The freight business is slightly less than a year ago, but still in fairly good volume. The crops along our line are looking well."

Stock Exchange List Changes.

The issue of New York Central and Hudson River Railroad 5 per cent. debenture bonds of 1904 has been stricken from the Stock Exchange list, as it fell due and was being paid off yesterday.

Application has been made by the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad Company to list $1,144,000 additional 4 per cent. refunding mortgage bonds of 1951.

Philippine Short-Time Bonds.

The issue of $3,000,000 of short-time Philippine bonds made a year ago, and which matured yesterday, were being redeemed by the Guaranty Trust Company. A large number of the bonds were redeemed. Some of them, deposited at Washington as collateral against Government deposits, have to be substituted for.

Southern Pacific Subscriptions.

Yesterday was the last day for the filing of subscriptions to the Southern Pacific preferred stock issue. According to an official statement, the subscriptions have been very gratifying, and it will not be necessary to form a syndicate to complete the plan. The total issue subscribed for is $40,000,000 out of an authorized $100,000,000.

Bank of France Statement.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following

HEAVY FEDERAL DEFICIT

Government's Expenses for August $6,000,000 Above Receipts.

War Department Increase $5,000,000, Navy $2,000,000—Cash Balance Below Usual Margin.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—August was an unusually bad month for the Treasury. The total receipts were $44,003,391 and the expenditures $51,246,603, leaving a deficit for the month of $8,343,212, while for the same month of 1903 the revenues exceeded the expenditures by more than that amount.

The receipts and expenditures will be watched with especial interest by those who are directing the political campaign. The largely increased expenditures the past two months are certain to challenge their attention, and are not without interest to the general public.

The increase in disbursements was mainly on account of the War Deparement, last month showing an increase over those for August, 1903, of more than $5,600,000. Civil and miscellaneous expenditures show an increase of $1,250,000 and the Navy nearly $2,000,000.

The total expenditure in the month just closed, $51,246,604, was an increase over August, 1903, of $8,000,000. The receipts for the month, $44,903,391, were a decrease compared with the same month of last year of nearly $5,000,000. Of this, nearly $2,000,000 were lost in miscellaneous receipts.

Taking the operations of the two months of the new fiscal year there is an excess of expenditures of $23,730,940, while the corresponding months of last year show an increase of less than $9,000,000 in expenditures. This great discrepency between revenues and expenditures, while caused by decreased receipts and increased expenditures, is mainly chargeable to the latter. Thus the revenues in the two months declined $7,000,000, but the expenditures increased $16,000,000.

The annexed table shows the receipts for the two months just closed compared with the same months of 1903:

Internal revenue	41,246,229	39,010,691
Miscellaneous	8,949,302	10,777,664
Total.....	$98,464,253	$91,689,779

BIG MILITARY EXPENDITURES.

The expenditures for the two months aggregate $115,440,719, against $99,412,733 last year. Examination shows this increase of $16,000,000 is attributable to three items, namely: Civil and miscellaneous, $3,000,000; War Department, nearly $6,000,000, and Navy, nearly $7,000,000.

For the entire year prior to the war with Spain the expenditures on account of the War Department, which include river and harbor improvements, were less than $49,000,000, and for the navy $34,561,546. In the year ended with June last the War Department expenditures were $115,338,695 and the navy $102,757,704.

The disbursements in detail for July and August, 1904, compared with the same months of 1903, are given below:

	1903.	1904.
Civil and miscellaneous...	$23,933,562	$27,052,271
War.....	26,716,413	32,508,773
Navy.....	15,746,048	22,145,148
Indians.....	2,413,923	2,117,923
Pensions.....	26,903,237	25,786,274
Interest.....	4,999,249	5,836,430
Total.....	$99,412,733	$115,440,719

The inroad of more than $6,000,000 made upon the available cash balance by the excess of expenditures reduced that balance to $147,975,364. Of that amount there is held by the depository banks to secure public money $103,436,907, and in addition thereto more than $9,000,000 to the credit of disbursing officers.

The latter amount, however, is for the convenience of the Government in making current payments, and is considered as entirely separate from the larger sum. Excluding that amount, the working balance of the Treasury is $44,538,457; and, including it, about $35,000,000.

ADMINISTRATION NOT SCARED.

There have been intimations that because of the reduction in the working balance it was contemplated by the Secretary to make a call on the depository banks for a return of a portion of their holdings. There is, however, no apprehension at the Treasury because of what is regarded as a temporary decrease in the available cash, and no consideration has been given to the matter of drawing on the depository banks.

While the expenditures continue to grow in consequence of the prodigality of Congress in making appropriations, the Administration hopes that the reduced requisitions in the coming month will enable the Treasury to recoup the loss sustained since July 1, when the new appropriations became available. During the month the depository banks lost to the Treasury about $1,500,000, and since Jan. 1, $54,000,000.

The custom has been to hold in the Treasury as a safe working balance at least $50,000,000, but it is not regarded as imperative that extraordinary methods should be adopted to maintain that sum unless an emergency should require action. The Treasury can reduce the holdings of the depository banks in the ordinary course of business by directing revenue collectors to deposit in sub-treasuries, and this could be done to the extent of gaining for the available balance the few millions needed to bring it within the so-called line of safety.

The gold holdings show an increase for the month of nearly $6,000,000. Including the reserve fund the Treasury now holds in gold coin and bullion $705,231,753.

The coin in the trust fund aggregates upward of $527,000,000, against which there is outstanding about $504,000,000 in certificates, the remaining certificates being against the coin being held in the Treasury cash. The certificates of gold and silver and Treasury notes outstanding aggregate $977,407,806, an increase in August of about $5,000,000.

Wreckage in Steamship Lanes.

The oil tank steamship Ligonier, which arrived yesterday from Port Arthur, Texas, reported that she passed considerable wreckage on the voyage. On Aug. 17, on the outward passage, about five miles north of Biscayana Buoy, in sixteen fathoms of water a submerged spar was noted close by. The spar appeared to be part of a wreck and was directly in the track of steamships bound south. On Aug. 26, about 275 miles from Tortugas, in latitude 24.45 longitude 87.30, some wreckage was passed which had a few miles and ropes attached in the track of vessels bound to Galveston or Sabine.

General Appraisers Make Rules for Duty on Singapore Pineapples.

Fourteen Per Cent. of Sugar the Maximum to be Allowed at Low Rate of Duty—Other Decisions.

In a decision written by Judge Somerville the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday laid down a series of rules for the guidance of local Appraisers in classifying canned pineapples from Singapore, on the protest of the Paul Taylor Brown Company of New York against their classification as fruits preserved in sugar at 1 cent a pound and 35 per cent. It was claimed that they were dutiable as pineapples preserved in their own juice at 25 per cent., and the whole issue turned on whether cane sugar had been added in the canning or not. This, it appears, is difficult to determine, as in addition to the invert, or grape sugar, which is present in nearly all fruits, the pineapple also produces a small proportion of cane sugar, or sugar that answers all the polariscopic tests for cane sugar.

Dr Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Agricultural Department, was consulted, and after experiments he lays it down as a general rule that pineapples in canning produce about 14 per cent. of total sugar, of which about 2 or 3 per cent. is cane sugar. Judge Somerville therefore lays it down as a rule that when there is no evidence tending to prove otherwise pineapples containing over 14 per cent. of total sugar are dutiable at 1 cent a pound and 35 per cent., and when containing less than 14 per cent. of sugar at 25 per cent. In the case before him the protest is overruled.

Gen. T. S. Sharretts is the author of a decision overruling a protest by Louis Metzger & Co., New York, against the classification of "spangled grosnes" and "spangled trimmings" at 60 per cent. as "fabrics of net or netting composed in part of beads or spangles of gelatine." The importers claimed that, as the spangles constituted more of the value, they were dutiable as manufactures of gelatine.

Protests overruled yesterday were by James Hawha and others, D. S. Hesse & Brother, and Marcell Schmitt, New York, and the San Francisco Glove Importing Company and others San Francisco.

Protests sustained were by F. F. G. Harper & Co., C. D. Bunker & Co., and Meyer Wilson & Co., San Francisco, and the Armour Packing Company, Kansas City, Mo. Protests partially sustained were by the H. B. Claflin Company and others, New York, and John Wanamaker and others, Philadelphia.

OYSTER IS KING AGAIN.

This Season's Yield Fine and Fat, but Much Scarcer.

With the coming of September the oyster is here again, and those who feasted yesterday remarked on the fine flavor of the season's yield. Seldom have oysters been fatter, or has there been a more seductive saltiness in their composition. There is ever a tinge of the "might be," however, in the brightest of "is's," and the oyster crop of 1904 is no exception to the rule. If the oysters are fine and fat they are exceeding few, and the chances are that before the year is much older there will be a raising of the scale in the price lists submitted to patrons in New York restaurants.

The scarcity is due, it is said, to the smallness of last year's "set." Seed oysters, in consequence, have cost from 25 to 35 cents more the bushel, and the finished product, so to speak, is to be had only at prices ranging from 50 to 75 cents higher the basket for Rockaways to 75 cents and $1 higher for Blue Points. As for the luscious Saddle Rock, dealers say that that particular brand of bivalve is rapidly becoming more or less of a myth, and that, while the name endures the oyster so sold hails from Virginia waters.

This year's "set" was much more satisfactory. There is every indication that next year's yield will be much larger, and that seed oysters may be had much more cheaply. At any rate, though, this year's prices will not be prohibitive. There will be plenty of oysters to meet all demands, even if the cost is a little greater, and, stewed, fried, steamed, broiled, roast, and scalloped, they will appear alike in the up-town menus and the down-town "beef and" resorts.

MAYOR BACK AFTER VACATION.

Moves Chief Clerk Up to Assistant Secretary's Place.

Mayor McClellan was at his desk in the City Hall bright and early yesterday morning, bronzed and happy after his three weeks' vacation at the seaside. The Mayor had nothing to say about the way the city has been managed in his absence, and declined to comment upon the action of the Board of Aldermen in turning down the Port Chester Railroad Company's application for a franchise.

He confirmed the rumor that his assistant secretary, G. Tarleton Goldthwaite, is to resign, and said he would appoint the present chief clerk, Thomas Hassett, to the place. The salary of the assistant secretary is $4,000. Mr. Hassett's present pay is $3,000 a year.

MRS. QUICKE'S WILL FILED.

The will of Mrs. Anna Mary Quicke, who died on July 14 at Ashbrittle, Somerset, England, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's office yesterday. Although the petition filed with the will gives the value of the real property at more than $10,000 and the personal property at more than $10,000, it is believed that the estate amounts to more than $500,000, outside of a special income which the testator received under the will of her father.

One-half of the personal estate left in England is bequeathed to the husband of the testator, the Rev. Charles Penrose Quicke, who is a rector of a church at Ashbrittle, England. There are also large bequests to the children of the testator. One-half of the fund inherited by the testator from her father, Robert Bowne Minturn, who was a resident of New York, is bequeathed to the children, and the other half to the husband of the testator.

BELMONT'S ANSWER TO EMPLOYES IS REFUSAL

Men Say Next Conference Must Be at Company's Request.

THE MOTIVE BEHIND THE FIGHT

Substitution of Electricity for Steam on Many Roads Alarms Engineers as to the Future.

There was another conference yesterday between August Belmont, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and the National officers of the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen. It ended, as have all previous parleys, with a flat refusal on the part of the company to grant the demand of the men for a $3.50-a-day rate for motormen in the subway.

The labor leaders left the confab vowing that they had made their final appeal to Mr. Belmont, and that if there were to be any further meetings the request must come from the company. While none of the parties to the negotiations would go so far as to say that a strike was imminent, it was not denied that the situation was more serious than at any time since the demands were made.

Calls were sent out last night for meetings both of the Brotherhoods of Engineers and Firemen and members of the Amalgamated Association of Electrical and Street Railway Employes of America, which takes in all the other elevated employes. If arrangements can be completed in time the meetings will start this forenoon and continue throughout the day.

A man in touch with Chief Stone said last night that from the point of view of the brotherhood there was a much larger question involved in the present negotiations than merely that of subway wages. Members of the brotherhood have viewed with apprehension the substitution of electricity for steam in the suburban service of some railroads running into this city, and the question of what would be the fate of the organization should the railroads be at liberty to follow up the change in motive power by putting in men at motorman's wages in the place of high-paid engineers, especially as it is expected that the movement started here will by degrees extend to other parts of the county—has been one of the gravest problems confronting the brotherhood during the last year. The brotherhood it was said looks upon the present situation in the light of a crisis which accounts for the presence here of Grand Chief Stone. If the brotherhood should succeed in enforcing its demands in regard to the subway, it was pointed out, they would have a precedent that would tell in all parts of the country.

The conference yesterday, which was of two hours' duration, was held at Mr. Belmont's residence at 44 East Thirty-fourth Street. In addition to Mr. Belmont, Vice President and General Manager E. P. Bryan and Superintendent Frank Hedley were present. The employes were represented, as at Wednesday's meeting, by Grand Chief Warren S. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Assistant Grand Chief J. J. Hurley of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and W. L. Jencks and W. H. Pinney, heads of the local organizations of engineers and firemen, respectively.

As to what transpired at the conference, the utmost secrecy was observed by the participants. It was learned, however, that both the officers of the company and the men had stubbornly held to their original contention and that no suggestion of compromise had come from either side.

"We did not arrive at any definite conclusion," said Chief Stone as he came out from the meeting. "All I can say is that the situation is serious."

As to whether there would be another conference, Assistant Grand Chief Hurley said the proposal must emanate from Mr. Belmont himself.

"Will there be a strike?" Mr. Stone was asked.

"There has been fa rtoo much strike talk already," he replied, with some warmth. "We will do everything to avoid a strike, and I hope there will be none, but we are in this thing to win, and we never take up a proposition unless we feel that we can bring it to a satisfactory conclusion."

Mr. Belmont referred inquirers to Mr. Stone for a statement regarding the situation.

"We were not able to agree," he said, "but the committee is considering another proposition and another conference will be held, at which I hope to see everything satisfactorily adjusted. I do not believe there will be a strike, and hope that everything will come out all right in the end."

At the conclusion of the conference Chief Stone went to his headquarters, at the Grand Union Hotel, and gave out a statement, in which he said:

"The statement that we are asking for an increase in wages is wrong, as the present scale ($3.50 for nine hours on the elevated) has been in existence for years. Any railroad building new lines applies the wage scale in effect through the acquired territory, and we think it only fair that the same should be done here. The claim of the company that they can get all the motormen they want at a cheaper rate for longer hours is perhaps true in one sense, but what kind of motormen will they be? It is the intention of the company to put in a service in the subway that is faster than any in the United States, and the only question that the subway should consider, and one of vital importance to the public is not how cheap, but how good."

LAWYER ACCUSED OF LARCENY.

Brandmaker, Client Says, Misappropriated $300 Bail Money.

J. Leon Brandmaker, a lawyer, of 63 Park Row, was arraigned before Magistrate Pool, in the Tombs Court, yesterday morning by a detective of the District Attorney's office, on a charge of grand larceny. According to the complainant, Robert A. Mendig of 95 Oakland Avenue, on July 9 last he was arrested on a charge of stealing brass, and retained Brandmaker, paying him $100 to look out for his interests, and also gave him $300 in cash for bail.

Instead of putting up the money as security, Mendig says that Brandmaker supplied real estate bail and was in St. Louis whne his case was called in Special Sessions. Having no lawyer to represent him, Mendig says he pleaded guilty and was fined $50.

Mrs. Mendig says that before her husband's case came up a man representing himself to be Brandmaker told her that it would be necessary to "square" one of the Justices of Special Sessions. Mrs. Mendig says that she gave the man $75.

Magistrate Pool held Brandmaker in $1,000 bail for examination next Wednesday afternoon.

MALONEY HELD FOR TRIAL

Schmittberger Calls Him "King Pin of Hand-Book Men."

Thomas J. Maloney, whom Inspector Schmittberger calls the "king pin of hand-book men" in the financial district, was held in $500 bail, for trial in General Sessions by Magistrate Pool in the Tombs Court yesterday on a charge of running a hand-book. Maloney could not furnish the bail at the moment, and was taken to the Tombs Prison for the night. His lawyer said he would have the bail by this morning.

Maloney held forth in a saloon in New Street under the shadow of the Stock Exchange. It is said that most of his customers were connected with the various Justice Amend Fixes $20,000 as Amount of Actress's Bond.

Justice Amend, in the Supreme Court, decided yesterday that Nan Patterson, the actress, accused of killing Bookmaker "Caesar" Young, should be admitted to bail in the sum of $20,000. Levy & Unger had secured a writ of habeas corpus to have the woman produced in court at 10 o'clock, and she arrived from the Tombs in custody of Warden Flynn.

There were about 100 men and women gathered at the Chambers Street entrance to the Court House to see the actress. Assistant District Attorney Sandford said that District Attorney Jerome would not oppose a motion for release on bail, providing the court would fix the amount high enough.

Justice Amend said he would fix the amount at $20,000, and that the prisoner's counsel and the District Attorney could come into court later and have this changed if they could agree on the sum. J. D. Patterson, the father of the girl, and Lawyer Levy hurried to the District Attorney's office. Mr. Jerome told them to try and secure the $20,000, but if they failed to return he would consider the matter of making the bond $10,000.

After being taken back to the Tombs the actress said she would not remove her hat, as she expected to be released before the close of the day. Lawyer Levy said she would probably secure a bondsman to-day.

KNOX BACK FROM LONDON.

Not Interested in Phipps Divorce Case, Ex-Attorney General Says.

Senator Philander C. Knox, the ex-Attorney General; Mrs. Knox, and H. S. Knox were passengers on the White Star Line steamship Baltic, which arrived here yesterday from Liverpool. Mr. Knox has been in England five weeks, two of which were spent in playing golf on the St. Andrews links. He said that the report that he went abroad in connection with the Phipps divorce case was wrong, and that he was not in any way interested in the matter. Mr. Knox would say nothing about the political situation.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I am out of politics now myself. I am no longer Attorney General, and I have not yet taken my seat as Senator, so I am nothing more than an ordinary citizen."

"But, Mr. Knox, the King makers are not all figureheads," put in a bystander.

"Neither am I in that class," he replied. "I expect to make a speech or two in the campaign, but I don't know when or where."

BIG BALTIC'S BEST RECORD.

E. H. Harriman, the Rev. Dr. Van De Water, and Others Aboard.

The big steamship Baltic of the White Star Line made this port yesterday from Liverpool after the best of three trips made to this country. She made the voyage in 7 days 4 hours and 35 minutes. On the Baltic were 2,731 passengers, the largest number ever brought on any one steamship from an English port.

The courtesy of the port was extended by the Collector to E. H. Harriman and family, who left the ship at Quarantine. Capt. Nelson B. Burr of the Twelfth Regiment, N. G. N. Y., returned on the Baltic with Mrs. Burr. The Captain had to be assisted from the ship to a carriage because of a swelling which rendered his left leg almost useless. Some of the other passengers were the Rev. S. Parks Cadman, Lady Clarke, Gen. J. M. Wood, the Rev. Dr. Van De Water, Mrs. Van De Water, and Miss E. Van De Water, Sir W. Lloyd Wise, Lady Wise, and Prof. Oscar Liebreich of the University of Berlin.

MAY KELLARD HELD FOR LARCENY

Police Say Woman Who Figured in Aub Case Robbed Flat.

May M. Kellard, who refused her address, was arraigned before Magistrate Barlow in the West Side Court yesterday on a charge of larceny preferred by Mrs. Charles E. Belden of 120 West Ninetieth Street. The prisoner, it is alleged by Mrs. Belden, rented a furnished flat at 172 West Seventy-second Street, and had either sold or pawned about $400 worth of the furniture and fittings. The Kellard woman pleaded not guilty, and in default of $1,000 bail was locked up.

The police say she is the person who figured in the Barbara Aub case several years ago. The Aub girl accused Frederick Langerman of assault, and was committed to the Mission Home of the "Door of Hope," of which the Kellard woman was in charge. The girl admitted to Miss Kellard that she had sworn falsely, and Langerman was exonerated.

The delegation was met at the White Star Line pier by members of the Chemical Club, whose guests they will be while in the city. Sir William will visit Prof. Remsen at Stout's Neck, and later will be entertained at the home of William H. Nichols at the Thousand Islands, who will soon succeed to the Presidency of the society. Sir William was here twenty years ago, having come by way of Canada.

ELECTRIC POWER IS TURNED ON IN SUBWAY

Crew After Crew Drilled on Board Trial Trains.

FINISHING TOUCHES NOT DONE

Main Line Completed to 145th Street and Broadway—East Branch Nearly to Harlem River.

Even if the Interborough Rapid Transit Company was unable to make good its earlier promises about opening the subway on Sept. 1, it celebrated the day by turning on the electric power all along the finished portion of the line. Throughout the day a train ran up and down. Crew after crew was drilled, and in the afternoon some of the Rapid Transit Commissioners accompanied members of the Belmont syndicate on an inspection trip. The power had been turned on for short intervals before—once when the first trial train made its run and several times in the night—but now, as an official expressed it, the electricity was "on to stay."

It is now practically certain that the tunnel will not be in operation this month, but the unanimous opinion of the officials is that regular trains can be run before October is past. One of those who has had a leading part in the construction and equipment of the road said yesterday:

"The state of the work to-day is this: The tunnel is finished, generally speaking, throughout the main line, up the west side branch as far as One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street and Broadway, and up the east side branch to Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Forty-second Street. The tracks and third rail are in place through these portions, and the current is on. The stations are completed for the most part."

"What is the chief stumbling block in the way of immediate operation?"

"There are various details left," was the reply, "of which the principal undertaking is the protection of the third rail. This protection is being installed. The building strike is what is stopping things for us. On all the odd jobs that have to be done along the line there is need of the class of labor that is at present out of reach."

Some of the stations, it was learned, were still incomplete as to the finishing touches required for the handling of passengers. The signal system, however, is in position down to the minutest detail, and there are plenty of the new cars on hand. Tests of the safety devices are to be made repeatedly within the next few weeks, and it will be only a few days before more trains are running up and down, filled with training crews. It takes some time, it is explained, to whip the crews into shape, and practically no start at the shaping was made until yesterday.

The Rapid Transit Construction Company, which was the corporation formed to build the tunnel, has been employing special watchmen along the work. The operating corporation, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, announced yesterday that it would give permanent employment to such of these men as were competent. The functions of the construction syndicate are almost over, except on the sections unfinished north of One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street, in the Bronx, and at the Harlem River.

There was a report yesterday that the operating company was planning to surprise the public by not announcing more than a few days beforehand the opening of the road. This was denied, but the stations are kept well closed to the outsider by orders from the Belmont banking house. Mr. Belmont has issued instructions that prevent his employes, high and low, from giving detailed interviews about the tunnel, and those who drop a bit of information are wary of letting their names be used.

"There are so many rumors and so many would-be interviewers," as one of them put it, "that Mr. Belmont has decided to stop all talking until he's ready to open."

The cars for the new tunnel are being taken in from the Harlem River at the head of Lenox Avenue. These cars had been used on the Second Avenue line of the elevated railroad until recently, but they have now disappeared altogether from the elevated tracks, being replaced by the old type of cars. From the elevated storage yards

R. H. THOMAS CAUGHT IN NORTHERN PACIFIC

Had to Buy 100 Shares at $1,000 Each on Panic Day.

REVEALED BY A STOCK SUIT

J. J. Hill Testifies That He Was Busy with Locomotives and Ignored Market That Day.

James J. Hill and many financiers of note crowded the office of Philip E. Reville, 19 William Street, yesterday, in response to summons to testify in a suit brought by John J. O'Leary, a Chicago capitalist, who desires to recover $55,000 from the brokerage firm of Sternberger, Field & Sinn, in connection with a transaction growing out of the Northern Pacific corner.

A development of yesterday's proceedings was the disclosure for the first time that R. H. Thomas, member of the Governing Board, Chairman of the Building Committee that put up the new Exchange Building, and former President of the Stock Exchange, was one of those caught most heavily in the Northern Pacific corner, having been compelled to buy in 100 shares at $1,000 a share.

J. J. Hill, President of the Northern Securities Company, as one of the first witnesses, was examined for fifteen minutes. He said among other things that on the day of the panic he had under consideration the purchase of locomotives and equipment and had not paid any attention to the market. He also testified that at the time of the corner his personal holdings amounted to $7,000,000, and that an additional $14,000,000 was held by friends of his. Mr. Morgan's holdings are said to have been $20,000,000. These holdings were in common stock.

Mr. Hill said that he neither bought nor sold any Northern Pacific stock for some time prior to May 9. He denied that he was responsible for the corner in any way.

The complaint of Mr. O'Leary alleges that on the day of the panic in Northern Pacific he was caught short about 200 shares at 112½. He had on deposit with the New York brokerage firm $55,000 as margin. The brokers closed him out after buying 100 shares at $350 a share and 100 shares at $400 a share. Although the stock soared to a much higher figure on that day Mr. O'Leary declares his trades could have been settled at $150 a share. He charges the firm with negligence in failing to consult him before closing out his stock.

On their part Mr. Sternberger and his associates contend that they acted according to the instructions of James J. Townsend of Chicago, member of the New York Stock Exchange, and his correspondent. At that time they declare that Mr. O'Leary filled the capacity of the undisclosed principal, the transactions having been made under instructions from James J. Townsend.

The firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., which was named in Mr. O'Leary's complaint as figuring in the transaction by which Sternberger, Field & Sinn acquired a part of the stock at a high price, was eliminated from the case by the testimony of L. A. Heinsheimer of that firm, who said that they had held a large amount of stock for investment, but that it was not for sale at the time of the corner. He said that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. neither bought nor sold on that day or for several days prior. Neither did they loan any stock.

The checks and purchase slips showing the actual purchase of the stock in controversy were produced. The checks indicated that the firm of Sternberger, Field &

ELEVATED EMPLOYES VOTE FOR A STRIKE

Still Demand $3.50 Wage for the Subway Motormen.

MEN A UNIT, THEY SAY

Indicate Tuesday as the Time for Going Out—Interborough Manager Calls on Police—His Statement.

By a vote that was almost unanimous members of the unions comprising the employes of the elevated system of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company yesterday decided to support with a strike if necessary the attitude of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in demanding that the wage for motormen in the subway shall be $3.50 for a working day of nine hours.

Last night officials of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America and of the two brotherhoods involved in the differences between the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and its employes were a unit in declaring that a tie-up of the elevated system would surely follow within forty-eight hours unless the company decides to accede the demand of their men. They declared that no compromise or half-way concession would be acceptable to them.

Warren S. Stone, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who has been in the city for several days, was in constant attendance at the voting yesterday. John Hannahan, Grand Master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, is ill at his home in Peoria, Ill., but has sent Assistant Grand Master Charles Wilson as his representative to this city. William D. Mahon, International President of the Amalgamated Association, arrived from Detroit last night. These men, with Local Chiefs Jencks and Pinney, and President George E. Pepper of the local branch of the Amalgamated Association, will hold a conference early to-day for the purpose of deciding upon a line of action.

Although the National officers of the brotherhoods and of the amalgamated association have power to declare a strike immediately, there is said to be little likelihood of any such policy being adopted. One of their officers said last night that a reasonable time would be allowed to elapse, so as to give August Belmont, President of the interborough company, and the other officials, as he put it, an opportunity to back down from the attitude of uncompromising resistance to the men's demands which they have maintained ever since the demands were made. The men, apparently, are also of the opinion that they will be able to strike a harder blow by allowing the matter to hang fire over Sunday and Monday, which is a legal holiday, and declare a strike on Tuesday morning when the business rush of the week will begin in earnest.

Police Asked to be Ready.

In the meantime indications were not lacking that officials of the Interborough Company are preparing for a fight and making arrangements to meet any trouble that might come their way as a result of the action taken by the men.

Vice President and General Manager E. P. Bryan and Superintendent Frank Hedley of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company called at Police Headquarters late yesterday afternoon and were closeted with Commissioner McAdoo for more than an hour. Neither of the two railroad officials was willing to do any talking when the interview came to an end, but the Commissioner admitted that they had discussed police arrangements in case of a strike on the elevated system.

"They did not tell me that there was going to be a strike," said Mr. McAdoo, "and I do not want to be understood as saying that there is going to be one. I am not in a position to discuss the merits of the case, but the police will do their duty in maintaining order and will be well able to cope with any emergency."

The vote of the electrical employes was taken at all-day meetings behind closed doors at their local headquarters. The members of the two brotherhoods cast their ballots in Horton Hall, 110 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street. The members of the Amalgamated Association, which comprises all the employes of the elevated system, except the men belonging to the brotherhoods, voted in Marion Hall, 150 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.

The polls opened at 10 o'clock in each place, and at that hour already there were little clusters of men waiting to register their votes. The voting went on briskly throughout the day.

"Strike or No Strike."

The vote was not on the question of an ultimatum, but flatly on the proposition of strike or no strike. On the ballots used by the members of the brotherhood were the words "For Strike" and "Against Strike." Under each there was a space where the voters made a cross to indicate their attitude, and there was also a dotted line for their signatures. The ballots of Amalgated members bore the following question:

"Are you in favor of sustaining your Executive Committee in the agreement made with the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen? (Vote yes or no.")

The meetings ended at about 10:30 o'clock, and then Local Chief Jencks of the Brotherhood of Engineers said that the number of votes cast at the Brotherhood meeting was about 750. Some of these, he said, had been cast by proxy. They were the ballots of the men who are out of town.

GERMAN PRINCE BANISHED.

Article by Ernst Guenther Angered the Kaiser—Another Prince in Disfavor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—In connection with the retirement of Baron von Mirbach from the duties of Secretary of the Empress's Cabinet and the administration of her charities, I learn that Prince Ernst Guenther of Schleswig-Holstein, brother of the Empress, has been banished from Court. The Kaiser is furious with his brother-in-law for writing recently a letter savagely attacking Baron von Mirbach. The announcement had been made by several papers that Prince Guenther had been invited to the manoeuvres, but was unable to attend "owing to ill-health." Guenther married a sister of escaped Princess Louise of Coburg.

Another Prussian Prince also in disfavor is Frederick Leopold. Although commander of a regiment, his conduct has been notoriously unmilitary. Therefore the Kaiser, in order to give him a real taste of war, arranged with the Czar to send him to Manchuria. To the surprise of every one a few days ago the papers announced that the Prince was unable to go on account of ill-health. Last night the official Norddeutsche Zeitung said that the Prince was unable to go because the Russian Government could not protect the Siberian Railroad from attacks of the Chunchuses.

It appears that the real reason the Prince did not go was that Kuropatkin, having heard of the Prince's character, informed the Czar that owing to the present position of the army in Manchuria it would be very difficult to extend proper consideration to such a high personage, or to guarantee his personal safety. Therefore the Czar, despite his previous consent, asked the German Government to postpone the Prince's trip. His equipment had cost him 50,000 marks, but he can stand the loss, as he is very rich.

5,000 SOLDIERS; LOSS 2 FOWLS.

Men Tagged as Wounded to be Treated in Hospital—Militia Arriving.

CORPS HEADQUARTERS, GAINESVILLE, Va., Sept. 2.—Fivethousand regular army troops have been roaming a territory comprising 65,000 acres of Virginia farms for nearly two weeks and the only depredation thus far reported has been the loss of two chickens. When the farmers of the manoeuvre zone were approached by army officers with a proposition to lease their lands for the manoeuvres they received pledges that there would be no depredations. These promises have been fulfilled to the letter.

The medical corps is to take advantage of the manoeuvres for its own development and as an object lesson to the militia. Soldiers are to be put out of action with specific wounds, at the ratio of two to a company.

These men are to be cared for and treated the same as if they were actually wounded in the manner in which they are to be tagged. In this way the ambulance and hospital corps will have an active part in the campaign.

The Twelfth New York will arrive at Thoroughfare at 5 o'clock to-morrow morning. The detrainment of troops is one of the lessons to be taught by the manoeuvres, and great preparations are being made to have the lessons perfect in all details.

MARRIED HIS TRAINED NURSE.

Gov. Wright's Son Made Her Go to Philippines Instead of Japan.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 2.—A courtship which began when the bridegroom was lying dangerously ill has ended in the romantic marriage of Raphael Semmes Wright, son of Gov. Luke E. Wright of the Philippine Islands, and Miss Maud Moser. It took place on July 22 at Manila.

News of the wedding has just reached here, where Mr. Wright formerly resided. Mr. Wright is the youngest son of Gov. Wright, and is a graduate of the University of Virginia. He was a member of Company H, First Tennessee Volunteers, in the Spanish war, and is at present the head of a large firm in Manila.

His bride's former home was in Galesburg, Ill., and she is a graduate of the Galesburg Training School for Nurses. Miss Moser nursed her fiancé through a long spell of illness. Recently, when she was herself taken ill and advised to go to Japan for a long rest, Mr. Wright asserted his authority, and the result was a quiet wedding in the Presbyterian Church in Manila.

LONG WALK TO SAVE $35,000.

Cleveland Man Paying Bet by Wheeling Barrow Across Continent.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Sept. 2.—"I'm just pushing a wheelbarrow; that's all I have to do," said D. P. Evans of Cleveland at the St. James Hotel this morning.

He arrived last night from Cleveland, which place he left May 2 with a thirty-two pound wheelbarrow and a long walk ahead of him. He will walk to San Francisco, Los Angeles, New Orleans, and Savannah, thence to New York and back to his home in Cleveland.

Evans is a member of a wealthy family, and he pays his bets. He made a wager that Herrick would not defeat Johnson 50,000 votes in the Ohio Gubernatorial race. Herrick's majority was 113,000, so Evans had to turn over $35,000 that had been put up or wheel the barrow all around the United States.

CANADIANS SEIZE FISHERMEN.

American Schooner Overhauled for Crossing Three-Mile Line.

NORTH SYDNEY, C. B., Sept. 2.—The American fishing schooner Samoset was seized to-day off this port and towed into port by the Canadian Government cruiser Gladiator. The Captain of the cruiser claims that the Samoset was fishing within the three-mile limit.

The Samoset was built in Gloucester in 1898, and registers thirty-two tons. It is understood that she is owned in Duxbury, Mass., although her home port is Plymouth.

Judge's Conscience Bars Death Penalty.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 2.—Judge John I. Mullins announced to-day that on account of his conscientious scruples against inflicting capital punishment, he had called a Judge from another district to take his place on the bench here during all murder trials at the Fall term of the District Court. There are ten persons awaiting trial for murder.

HIGGINS AND BRUCE ARE ODELL SLATE

Woodruff Not Even Down for Speech in Convention Plan.

BLACK TO START SPEAKING

Politicians Say Governor Was Afraid of Woodruff's Independence—Bruce a Sop to Platt Forces.

Gov. Odell's Saratoga Convention programme as it was made up last night was as follows:

For Governor—FRANK WAYLAND HIGGINS of Olean.
For Lieutenant Governor—M. LINN BRUCE of New York.
For Temporary Chairman of the Convention—Ex-Gov. FRANK S. BLACK.
For Permanent Chairman of the Convention—Senator GEORGE M. MALBY.

National Committeeman William L. Ward has invited Gov. Odell, ex-Gov. Frank S. Black, Congressman Lucius N. Littauer, William C. Warren of Buffalo, William Halpin, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee; William Barnes, Executive Chairman of the State Committee, and one or two other prominent Republicans to a clambake to be held to-day at Shell Island, in Long Island Sound, near Port Chester, and then, it is understood, the programme arranged by Gov. Odell and his lieutenants yesterday with respect to the State Convention will be ratified.

Lieut. Gov. Higgins was in the city yesterday, but he stayed away from the Albemarle Hotel, at which he registered, until about half an hour before the departure of the train on which he left for Albany. At Republican State Headquarters in the Fifth Avenue it was denied that Mr. Higgins had been a caller. Gov. Odell's companions said they had no information as to whether the Governor and Mr. Higgins had met elsewhere.

It is certain, however, that if Gov. Odell and Mr. Higgins did not meet, National Committeeman William L. Ward, Gov. Odell's chief political lieutenant, did have a conference with the Lieutenant Governor, and that he was able to fully inform him as to the Governor's views on the Gubernatorial nomination. He was able to tell him that at the conference of delegates to the State Convention, which Gov. Odell yesterday announced would be held on the evening of Sept. 13, the day preceding the convention, the Governor would recommend Mr. Higgins to the caucus as his first choice for Governor.

It was in order that the information of his selection by Gov. Odell as the most available man for the Gubernatorial nomination might be imparted to him, and his disposition toward the Governor-Chairman learned, that Mr. Higgins was summoned back by telegraph from New Hampshire, where he had intended to remain for several days longer.

It was the general opinion of the Republican politicians in touch with the situation that Gov. Odell has concluded that he would have to lay a rough hand on the candidacy of ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff. The request which has been made to ex-Gov. Frank S. Black to accept the office of Temporary Chairman of the convention was regarded as the Governor's initial hostile move toward Mr. Woodruff. Ten days ago Mr. Woodruff was asked to act as Temporary Chairman of the convention, and accepted the tender. He has already prepared his speech, and has submitted it to some of his friends for their judgment. The information from reliable sources yesterday that ex-Gov. Black has been asked to preside over the preliminary business of the convention came, therefore, as a great surprise.

Woodruff's friends put on a bold face when they heard about it and said it meant that Woodruff, being sure of the nomination for Governor, thought that the honors of the convention ought to be divided. But the generally accepted view was that Gov. Odell, having determined upon the nomination of Higgins, and fearing that if Woodruff got an opportunity to speak to the convention he might stampede it and bring about his own nomination despite all opposition, had concluded it necessary to eliminate Woodruff entirely.

Gov. Odell's friends were confident last night that he had the situation well in hand, and that there would be no row in Saratoga. They said that Woodruff would submit quietly to the inevitable when he found, as he would be certain to find in the caucus on the eve of the convention, that two-thirds of the delegates were against him.

"No man cares to go into a convention when he realizes that he is certain to meet with overwhelming defeat," was the argument advanced by one of the Odell leaders when the possibility of Mr. Woodruff's making a fight in the convention was suggested.

Other Republican politicians, however, did not believe that Mr. Woodruff would submit so easily as the Odell men seem to expect. They expressed the opinion that Gov. Odell's purpose practically to eliminate him from the convention proceedings by making Frank S. Black the temporary Chairman, would be a hurt to his vanity which he would not suffer without an effort to make trouble for those who had inflicted it. They thought that if he had a chance to make a speech to the convention he possibly might become reasigned to the loss of the Gubernatorial nomination. But to lose the nomination and also the opportunity to make a speech they were certain would move him to resentment.

It was said last night that the principal reason why Woodruff was dropped from consideration by Gov. Odell was the fear that if Woodruff was nominated his connection with Col. Michael J. Daly and Daly's well-known desire to get the fattest of the canal contracts, would give the Democratsa chance to make an aggressive campaign against him from the start. Another reason, and, some think, the reason which was perhaps the weightiest with Gov. Odell, is the apprehension which exists in the Odell camp that if Woodruff were nominated and elected he would at once set up in business for himself politically.

When the news that the temporary Chairmanship of the convention had been offered to Frank S. Black became known last night some of the politicians at the Fifth Avenue Hotel expressed the opinion that Gov. Odell would be taking as much chance in having Black act as temporary Chairman as he would if he allowed Mr. Woodruff to open the convention.

With Higgins as the nominee for Governor, it is the general opinion among the Republican politicians that the nomination for Lieutenant Governor will go to M. Linn Bruce of this county. Bruce was chairman of the Republican County Committee at the time when Gov. Odell succeeded in wresting the State leadership from Senator Platt. He was deposed by Odell, and Charles H. Murray named as his successor. The only reason for his deposition was that he owed his appointment to Platt. It was necessary to the establishment of Gov. Odell's claim to leadership that he should be able to demonstrate his power to reorganize the New York County Committee. The relations between Mr. Bruce and the Governor have continued pleasant, and if Odell brings about the nomination of Higgins as against Woodruff, who is the choice of Platt, it would be necessary, it is said, to placate the Platt men with the Lieutenant Governorship. There is little question that Platt would be for Bruce. Another argument in favor of Bruce's selection is that he is one of the best campaigners the Republicans have, and as Higgins is not much of a speaker it would be necessary, it is said, to have a good talker for second place on the ticket.

Many of the Odell men said last night

COAT OF MAIL SAVES SULTAN.

One of His Albanian Guards Shoots at Him in Palace Fight.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—The Paris edition of The New York Herald prints the following from its Geneva correspondent:

"A high official of the Ottoman Court has received news of a serious fight between the Sultan's Albanian guard and Bosnians, which continued almost to the doors of the harem. Many were killed or wounded.

"It is said that one Albanian shot at the Sultan, the bullet glancing off the coat of mail which he always wears.

"The Sultan has asked the Prince of Montenegro to supply him with a guard.

"The affair is certain to be denied, but its truth can be affirmed."

CANOE'S TRIP ROUND WORLD.

The Tillikum from Vancouver Arrives Off English Coast.

DOVER, England, Sept. 2.—A three-masted canoe, supposed to be the Tillikum, passed Beachy Head to-day, bound east.

The British Columbia sailing canoe Tillikum is of only two and one-half tons. It is an ordinary dugout, carved out of the trunk of a tree by an Alaskan Indian in 1843. The little craft is in command of Capt. J. C. Voss, who is accompanied by a single companion, named Harrison.

The Tillikum left Vancouver in May, 1901, bound for Europe by way of various islands in the Pacific, Cape Horn, and the Azores. She was last reported as having sailed from Ponta Delgada, Azores, Aug. 11, for London. At that time she had already covered nearly 40,000 miles of her long journey.

BIG GOLD STRIKE IN NEVADA.

Lode of Free Milling Ore Running $2,000 Per Ton Said to Have Been Found.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE, Sept. 2.—A rush to Goldfield, Nevada, is under way as the result of a sensational gold find in the Sand Storm Mine just north of the old town of Goldfield. A blind lode of free milling gold of the value of $6,000 per ton has been uncovered by miners of T. L. Oddie. The lode is said to be of enormous size and forty feet in width. That the ore is free milling makes the strike all the more sensational.

The Sand Storm strike follows close on the late sensational strikes in the Florence. Combination, and Jumbo Mines at Goldfield and has excited the entire district.

LORD MINTO IN TRAIN WRECK.

Vice Regal Party Escape, but Five Women Are Killed in Canada.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, Sept. 2.—Because the crew of a sidetracked freight train forgot to close the switch, the west-bound Imperial Limited Express of the Canadian Pacific Railroad was wrecked last night, colliding with the freight at Pintaluta, Northwest Territory. Five women in the tourist car were killed. Four other passengers, the porter, and the engineer were injured. The bodies identified are those of Mrs. Doesett, en route to Edmonton; Mrs. Warren of Sand Point, and Agnes M. Shirley of Ottawa.

L. P. Hart, the porter, is the only one seriously injured. It may be necessary to amputate his leg, and he is hurt internally. Wilson, the engineer of the freight train, had two ribs broken.

The vice regal party, including Lord and Lady Minto, were on the train on their way to the Pacific. They escaped unhurt and resumed their journey at 3 o'clock this morning.

COULDN'T GET INTO ITS VAULTS

Safe Deposit Company's Clients Have to Wait Until Official Is Found.

A safe deposit company in the Wall Street district which has close connections with one of the largest National banks was unable to get at its vaults yesterday morning, and an uncomfortable three-quarters of an hour ensued for the company's clients. It is the duty of one of the Assistant Cashiers of the bank to open the vaults every morning. The man who had been doing this is the son of the President of the bank.

Yesterday he did not come down town because the other assistant, who had been away on a vacation, was to have taken his place. But as the combination had been changed during the absence of the second assistant, he could not open the vault, and the President's son had to be found. This the bank officials succeeded in doing, after which the vaults were opened.

STUDENT LOST TO VASSAR.

Was to Have Gone There to Forget Her Love, but She Eloped.

Special to The New York Times.

CANON CITY, Col., Sept. 2.—After kissing her mother good-night and going to her room, apparently to retire, last night, Miss Gail Hall, daughter of a wealthy stockman, crept out of the house and eloped with Harry Graham, son of David Graham, owner of one of the largest and best farms in the Hudson River Valley. Miss Hall's mother objected to the match, and in order to separate the couple had packed trunks and was to start this morning for the World's Fair with her daughter, who was to go from there to Vassar.

The couple met early last evening, arranged the elopement, and were married before midnight, leaving at once for Salt Lake.

FELL TO DEATH ASLEEP.

Aged Somnambulist Walked Out of Second-Story Window.

While walking in her sleep last evening Mrs. Mary Reilly, aged seventy-one years, of 535 East One Hundred and Thirty-second Street, pitched headlong from a rear second-story window, and in falling landed on her head, fracturing her skull. Death was instantaneous.

Mrs. Reilly had been a somnambulist for many years. Her room has low windows, and about 9 o'clock last night, while sound asleep, she left her bed, tripped, and fell against the window sill, and then out of the open window to her death.

Drank Acid to Avoid Arrest.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Rather than face arrest on the charge of attempting to blow up the Avenue Hotel in Elmira Heights a week ago, Nicholas Thome drank carbolic acid to-day, and his body was found on the bank of the Chemung River, near Sayre, Penn.

Consternation in Czar's Capita Despite Optimism of Official Arguments—Kuropatkin's Report Withheld.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.
Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Saturday, Sept. 3, (10:30 A. M.)—It is expected that the main strength of Field Marshal Oyama's forces to the southward will succeed this morning in crossing the Tai-Tse River.

Gen. Kuroki yesterday captured a portion of the heights commanding Heiying-Tai, and it is hoped that he will dominate the railroad to-day.

The Russians appear to be gathering at Yen-tai colliery, northeast of Liao-yang.

TOKIO, Sept. 2—Premature rumors of the fall of Liao-Yang have been circulating in Tokio since yesterday afternoon.

A careful analysis of the official reports shows that the Russians have merely been driven to their last line of defenses, where they will probably make desperate resistance.

The three Japanese armies are closing round them.

BATTLE RAGES WITHOUT CEASE.

Japanese Armies Pressing Kuropatkin Hotly on All Sides.

TOKIO, Sept. 2.—It is probable that a great tragedy was enacted to-day along the Tai-Tse River.

Details of the progress of the battle of Liao-Yang received here at a late hour show that Gen. Oku, in command of the Japanese left army (which has been operating west of Liao-Yang and south of the Tai-Tse), has directed his energies to forcing the Russians to the river. The Tai-Tse is flooded and cannot be forded, and it is probable that many were drowned there.

Gen. Kuroki's right (the column that crossed the Tai-Tse Wednesday night to strike the Russians in the rear) is continuing to press the attack at Heiying-tai (twelve miles northeast of Liao-yang), seeking ground whence its guns will dominate the railroad.

The troops under Gen. Kuroki are jaded and weary. They have been marching and fighting since Aug. 23, but in spite of this they attacked with spirit. The Japanese are confident that they have already swept back the strong Russian force with which they have been engaged.

Fearful Losses Are Expected.

The indications are that the battle of Liao-Yang will prove to be the bloodiest since the Franco-Prussian war.

On the Japanese side over 25,000 men killed and wounded have already been reported. The calculations of casualties must include the losses since Aug. 23, for the contest has practically been continuous since then.

The opinion that the Russian casualties in the fighting of the past few days must have reached 30,000 is confidently believed in high quarters here. Neither Field Marshal Oyama nor the Japanese Army commanders, however, have yet estimated the Russian losses.

Field Marshal Oyama's right (under Kuroki) attacked a heavy force of Russians in the vicinity of Hei-ying-tai at 11 o'clock Thursday. The fate of the great bulk of the retreating Russian army hinged upon the bravery and fortitude of its left flank.

Before falling back, Gen. Kuropatkin and northward of Liao-Yang should be greatly strengthened in the hope of checking Gen. Kuroki's advance around his flank and to protect his line of retreat and communication.

The greatest portion of this protecting force seems to have been massed in the neighborhood of Hei-ying-tai, where it was fiercely assaulted by Gen. Kuroki at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. Kuroki won and struck the flank of the retreating Russian army and reached the railroad, placing the Russians in a serious predicament.

Japanese Won in Night Attack.

A telegram from the Chief of Staff in the field indicates that Gen. Oku, in command of the Japanese left army, gained the ascendancy over the Russian right and centre by a night assault. At dawn to-day he began pressing the Russians toward the Tai-Tse River.

Few details of the pursuit have been received here. It is evident that the Russians moved back slowly, contesting the ground and shielding their movements as far as possible.

Yesterday Gen. Oku's forces managed to interfere seriously with the train service from Liao-Yang. They used some guns captured from the Russians, together with some of their own, to bombard the railroad station at Liao-Yang, thus preventing the entraining of Russian troops.

The Chief of Staff of the centre army (Gen. Nodzu's), telegraphing early this morning, reported that the Japanese centre was continuing to advance to-day, with the object of taking a line from Shin-chi-yen to Liao-Yang, and effecting a rejunction with the left under Oku.

Great Fires at Liao-Yang.

A private dispatch received here reports that great fires are raging at Liao-Yang. This statement is not confirmed officially. The fires are believed to result from the Japanese shelling or from the efforts of the Russians to destroy their stores preparatory to the evacuation of Liao-Yang with the additional hope of injuring the city as a future Japanese base.

It seems that the Japanese avoided a direct assault upon Liao-Yang itself, but devoted their energies to the troops outside the city and an effort to cut off the Russian retreat. Liao-Yang is strongly fortified, and it is probable that the Japanese will not attack the city directly until they have succeeded in isolating it. Should the Russians abandon Liao-Yang the Japanese will of course enter.

The cannon captured by the Japanese which they are using against Liao-Yang are described as ten-centimeter guns. The number taken is not given.

Unofficial estimates place the Russian forces in the vicinity of Liao-Yang at 15 divisions, of 15,000 men each. These are probably excessive, but it is evident that numerically the Russians exceed the Japanese.

CZAR INFORMED OF DEFEAT.

Kuropatkin Said to Have Announced Retreat to Mukden.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegram.
Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Consternation is hardly too big a word to describe the state of mind of St. Petersburg, as reflected in the correspondence of Paris journalists. The success of Oyama's strategy since Kuroki succeeded in turning the Russian left is taken for granted.

The Czar is said to have received yesterday a communication from Kuropatkin to the effect that the numerical superiority of the Japanese in men and artillery would oblige him to carry out his original plan of retreat upon Mukden.

This message of Kuropatkin has inspired the mot d'ordre forming the basis of subsequent official statements from the War Office early this morning. Kuropatkin's abandonment of his positions on the left bank of the Tai-Tse was interpreted to correspondents as only another quite normal episode in the evolutions of the famous plan.

When later it was known that the railway line had been cut during the afternoon of yesterday the War Office still sought to find comfort in the fact. "We believe Kuropatkin let the line be cut intentionally," is what correspondents were told, the idea being that he sought to lure Kuroki as far north as possible in order to cut the Japanese General from his base.

KEEN SUSPENSE IN LONDON.

English Military Critics are Divided as to the Outcome.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 3.—The suspense with which the developments at Liao-Yang are awaited could scarcely be greater in Tokio than it is in London.

English military critics neither share Tokio's jubilation over the fall of Liao-Yang nor lay any stress on the advantage which Russian dispatches attribute to Gen. Kuropatkin's latest move.

The best-informed observers here, who veiled in the dispatches from Tokio and not given out at St. Petersburg, declare that the battle of Liao-Yang, however dramatic and historic in loss of life and tragic incident, can have no serious bearing on the eventual issue unless the Japanese have surrounded Kuropatkin.

The London daily newspapers, in their headlines, depict the conditions at Liao-Yang as "Russian Rout" and "Defeat or Débâcle." Their editorials, in a more careful vein, point out that the latest dispatches leave the issue of the greatest battle of this generation still in doubt.

Depends on Cutting Off Army.

From the expert British point of view, Marquis Oyama's sacrifices will have been in vain unless he is able to cut off Kuropatkin from Mukden. On this point there are chaotic hypotheses.

The Daily Graphic frankly says: "We are in the dark as to the final outcome," adding that it seems not unlikely that Kuropatkin may still manage to carry a fighting force with him to Mukden.

The other critics doubt whether the Japanese in the face of "indomitable Russian pluck" are strong enough to press some of the preliminary successes already won.

The Morning Post concludes a careful and rather impartial survey of the four days' fighting with the opinion that the battle of Liao-Yang will take its place beside that of Waterloo, and believes that "whether or not Kuropatkin's force is able to continue its retreat it will be broken and useless for some time to come."

The Russian view that Gen. Kuropatkin ly crossing the river divided the opposing forces meets with slight consideration, as it is pointed out that all the Japanese units can now attack simultaneously from different directions, which eliminates any advantage to the Russian side and really aggravates the seriousness of their position, the Japanese force being superior in numbers.

"Supreme Effort of Forlorn Hope."

The Daily Telegraph, which hailed the initial successes at Liao-Yang with the degree of finality, now admits that "it is not inconceivable that Kuropatkin may extricate a portion of his forces," though this is characterized as the "supreme effort of a forlorn hope." The Daily Telegraph continues:

"One of the most exciting problems ever known in war has been narrowed down to one point, viz., whether a part of the retreating army will succeed in tearing through Yentai, leaving many thousands of men and some hundreds of guns behind them, or whether Gen. Kuroki will rivet the iron ring by hammering blows. Perhaps a seventh day fight must be waged before the issue can be finally declared."

The Daily Telegraph's military critic, in common with other English experts, sees nothing but a superior Japanese force and strategy to account for Gen. Kuropatkin's present position. This authority predicts an endeavor on the part of the Russian force to reach Chinese territory.

Retreat or Rout?

The Standard bluntly voices the thought of everybody in England by saying, "Is it retreat or rout?" It cautiously says that Gen. Kuropatkin in his precarious condition is not without some prospects of avoiding the signal catastrophe of a surrender en masse if he can still get away to the north. Even with the loss of many guns and valuable supplies the success of the Japanese will be a good deal modified.

The Times compares the battle of Liao-Yang with the battles of Wagram, Leipzig, Koniggratz, and Gravelotte, but it says:

"We still have to learn whether the Japanese reaped the fruits of victory in such abundant measure as to make the battle the thoroughly decisive turning point of the war. From the news thus far available there seems to be a strong probability that they will be able to do so."

MAY BE SEDAN OF FAR EAST.

German Military Critics' View of the Battle of Liao-Yang.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Military specialists treat the news from Liao-Yang as indicating a great Russian reverse that, with the railway northward cut and bad roads, may be turned into a rout.

As to-day is being celebrated as the anniversary of the battle of Sedan, frequent allusions are made by editorial writers to the possibility of Liao-Yang being the Sedan of the Far East, and parallels were drawn between the two situations.

The semi-official North German Gazette alone regards Gen. Kuropatkin as saving his position by as skilful a retirement as possible.

Lieut. Col. Oi, the Japanese military attaché, and Col. Chebeko, the military attaché of Russia, who were among the Emperor's foreign guests at the review to-day, were looked upon with much curiosity by the other officers, especially when they saluted each other gravely on joining the Emperor's party. The Emperor spoke with each, but rather longer and more freely with Col. Chebeko.

BEAUTIFUL, TERRIFYING SIGHT.

Russian's Graphic Description of Three Days of Fierce Battle.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 2.—A delayed dispatch to The Official Messenger from Liao-Yang, under date of Aug. 31, gives some details of the three days' fighting from Aug. 29.

The correspondent states that he was with a battery on Koulack Hill, to the left of the railway line, at dawn Monday when the Japanese guns opened.

"It was," he continues, "a simultaneous salute by hundreds of cannon, and during the first hour the firing was simply terrific. We were under a perfect rain of shrapnel, bullets, and splinters of shells. The Japanese did not know the country or the location of our defenses, so they constantly shifted their batteries, trying to search out our positions.

"It was in the course of these manoeu-of interest to the Japanese artillerymen. The sight was a beautiful but terrifying one. Although we were masked and tolerably protected, the sides of our hill were rent and torn by bursting shells. Dirt, dust, and rocks filled the air; sand and smoke hung like a golden halo overhead. We watched the shells fall upon the ruins of the thousand-year-old watch tower, where they completed the ravages of the centuries.

"The Japanese got our range and tried to enfilade us from a village on the right. Here we had the advantage in knowing the ranges, and simply smothered them with shells. Consequently the Japanese withdrew hurriedly. A second attempt to enfilade us was made at 10 o'clock in the morning, but again it failed. We swept the Chinese cornfields whence the fire came, and turned out the Japanese gunners like a nest of angry wasps. Our rifle brigade held the village of Maietung against the rolling against that position time and again, until our reserves swept down and cleared the front at the point of the bayonet.

"The roar of the fight was not stopped by darkness. The scene became infinitely more beautiful as the hills were lighted by the glare from flame-spitting batteries, which had been scarcely visible in the daylight. Each of the thousands of shells became a pyrotechnic spectacle, while lines of fire racked and quivered back and forth where the infantry was holding our trenches against the creeping Japanese columns.

"The latter had almost reached the trenches of the Twenty-fourth Regiment, aided by the darkness. The men, who were at supper, dropped their soup and black bread, turned out quickly, and drove off the Japanese with their bayonets. Then they returned to their sorely needed meal.

"The fighting on Tuesday was heavy on the right flank. A spy captured while attempting to pass the lines, said the Japanese Guard Division suffered terribly."

WAR CORRESPONDENTS QUIT.

Americans and British Disgusted with Their Treatment by Japanese.

CHE-FOO, Sept. 2.—Richard Harding Davis and John Fox, Jr., the American newspaper correspondents, have arrived here from the headquarters of the Second Japanese Army and will leave for the United States Sept. 8.

They say that the foreign attachés and newspaper correspondents with the Second Army witnessed the battle of August 26 from a distance of eight miles, and that this was so unsatisfactory to them that they united in a round robin to the Japanese authorities protesting that because of this restriction on their movements their usefulness was at an end.

Gen. Oku replied, saying that in the future they would be permitted to witness engagements from a distance of four miles, whereupon Davis and Fox, together with Melton Prior and George Lynch, the British correspondent, left the Second Army. Lynch will make an attempt to reach Port Dalny.

POWERS NOT TO MEDDLE.

Mediation to be Offered Only at Request of Belligerants.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—The German Foreign Office, taking note of the fresh assertions that the neutral powers are comparing views with the object of offering friendly mediation in the war between Russia and Japan, says that such an idea is absurd at this moment, as the Russian purpose to continue the war has been clearly made known.

All the Governments understood that Great Britain and France, at some time agreed upon, would offer to mediate when both belligerents desired it. When that time arrived, naturally, there was nothing to preclude other neutral Governments from participating.

CAPTURE RUSSIAN SUPPLIES.

Japanese Seize Twenty-six Junks Bound for Port Arthur.

TOKIO, Sept. 2.—Admiral Hosoya reports that the Japanese guardships near Yentao, south of Sanshantao, near Talien Bay, Sunday and Monday captured twenty-six Chinese junks which were attempting to carry provisions into Port Arthur.

They were taken to Talien and were tried and confiscated. The crews were released.

AMERICAN PROTEST TO RUSSIA.

Official Action on the Seizure of the Steamship Calchas.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 2.—The United States has protested to Russia against the seizure of the cargo of the British steamer Calchas, which was captured by the Vladivostok squadron while bound from Puget Sound to Japan.

The protest follows the lines of the case of the Portland and Asiatic Line steamer Arabia, also seized by the Vladivostok squadron, in declining to recognize as of a contraband character goods and foodstuffs in the ordinary course of trade and not designed for the use of belligerents.

NAVAL LESSONS OF THE WAR.

Capt. Matousevitch Says the Wireless Telegraph Is Invaluable.

TSING-TAU, Sept. 2.—Capt. Matousevitch, the late Admiral Wittsoeft's Chief of Staff, who arrived here wounded on the Russian battleship Czarevitch on Aug. 12, in an interview to-day with a correspondent of The Associated Press on the naval lessons of the war, said:

"I do not believe that the operations of either navy have demonstrated anything which will materially change naval warfare. The greatest lesson has been the usefulness of wireless telegraphy. In the fight of Aug. 10 we used the wireless system in signaling until the apparatus was shot away. We found it worked more reliably and quicker than the flags. I believe that in the near future every ship in all the navies, even gunboats, will be fitted with wireless apparatus.

"Much has been learned about mines and torpedoes. The only defense against mines is good judgment, or insight, as to where they are likely to be placed by the enemy. If it is imperative that ships must go to that vicinity, send 'sweepers' in advance. The war has demonstrated that the most powerful searchlights cannot pick up floating mines which were unknown before this war.

"The Japanese made as many as fifteen ineffectual torpedo attacks in one night. Torpedo nets are of very little use. When a ship is in action they cannot be used sucessafully, as they retard her speed and hamper her movements. If several ships are together and they concentrate their searchlights, it is almost impossible to successfully attack them with torpedoes. I do not agree with the critics who say the battleship is a thing of the past. In the Port Arthur movements the battleships, cruisers, and torpedo boats did the work cut out for them.'

"Since I have been at Tsing-Tau I have had an opportunity to read the Japanese reports of the Port Arthur engagements and find them inaccurate. The Russians have done much damage to the Japanese boats, which have not been reported by either side."

China Stops Repairs on Russian Ships.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 2.—The Chinese Government, acceding to the demand of Japan, effected the stoppage to-day of all repairs on the Russian protected cruiser Askold and the Russian torpedo-boat destroyer Grozovoi.

NEWS KEPT FROM PUBLIC IN RUSSIA

Kuropatkin's Dispatch to the Czar Withheld.

HOPE AND FEAR EXPRESSED

Officials Affect to Belief that the Army by Retreating Gained Immense Advantage.

ST. PETERSBURG, Saturday, Sept. 3.—The public here is still in complete ignorance of the new phase which the battle entered upon on Thursday, but interest is at white heat. Every foreign telegram is eagerly pounced upon, and the newspapers are printing extra editions four or five times a day, a thing unprecedented in the history of the Russian capital.

The town is filled with all kinds of rumors, ranging from a complete victory for Gen. Kuropatkin to a disastrous defeat of the Russians.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the War Office received a dispatch from Peterhof, sent to the Emperor Thursday night by Gen. Kuropatkin, dated 5 P. M. Thursday. As transmitted to the War Office for publication the information is extremely meagre and only reveals the truth in the light of the interpretation of those who are conversant with the situation at Liao-Yang. It is possible that this is justifiable on strategic grounds.

Gist of the Dispatch.

As communicated to the press the dispatch states that an artillery battle proceeded till the hour of sending it, and that the Russians were retiring upon their "main position"; that Gen. Kuroki was attacking the Russian left, north of the Tai-Tse River; that the railroad station, which is situated a mile northwest of Liao-Yang, had been set on fire by Japanese shells; that the station had been transferred across the river to a point on the north bank; that Kuropatkin had passed in review the Third Siberian Corps under Gen. Ivanoff, which suffered greatly in the earlier stages of the battle on the east front, and finally, that the Russian losses for two days were 5,000 killed or wounded.

The text of this dispatch was not made public last night, as was expected. It was promised to the local press, and was awaited with feverish impatience until 2 o'clock this morning, when it was announced that it would be issued to-day.

All the news, therefore, as far as St. Petersburg is concerned, is contained in telegrams from foreign sources, and there is painful suspense awaiting news from Russian sources.

Continued and dogged confidence in Gen. Kuropatkin is expressed in many quarters, and the public generally, as well as many of the military authorities, absolutely refuse to believe that Liao-Yang has been abandoned, or, if it has been abandoned, that Gen. Kuropatkin is not in a better position to make a strong stand north of the Tai-Tse River.

There seemed to be an air of considerable confidence at Peterhof last night. An official who saw the Emperor in the afternoon said that his Majesty was extremely confident and in good spirits.

Experts who are familiar with the nature of the intricate and powerful defenses constructed north of the Tai-Tse by Gen. Velitchko, one of Russia's foremost army engineers, believe that the Japanese are facing an almost impossible task in attacking them, especially with divided forces.

Kuropatkin's dispatch as given out does not admit that he is withdrawing across the Tai-Tse River entirely. It is possible that, owing to the pressure of the Japanese, the Russian Army, as stated in the Tokio dispatches, was thrown into confusion and greatly hampered.

Movement Screened by Guns.

In the light of the knowledge that the "main positions" of the Russians are on the north bank of the river, the dispatch becomes intelligible. The artillery fight during the day makes it evident that a screen of Russian guns was used to cover the movement across the river. The guns on the north bank doubtless were also employed for this purpose, being placed so as to protect the railroad bridge spanning the Tai-Tse.

The review of the Third Siberian Corps mentioned in the dispatch probably refers to a march past of the troops while crossing the river, it being impossible to suppose that a formal review occurred while the battle was in progress.

The fact disclosed for the first time in these dispatches on Thursday night that the strongest Russian position prepared by Gen. Kuropatkin was not around the town of Liao-Yang, as the public had been led to believe, but on the right, or north, bank of the Tai-Tse River, was a secret so successfully guarded that not even an intimation of it had leaked out.

It is now explained that the Russian Commander in Chief had all along anticipated that the Japanese, when they made their advance on Liao-Yang, would pursue the identical tactics which had been so successful in every previous stage of the campaign, and, while attacking in front, would attempt by a wide detour to outflank the Russian position. This time Gen. Kuropatkin was not caught napping. He was prepared for just what happened, and as soon as he received word that Gen. Kuroki had crossed the Tai-Tse twenty miles above Liao-Yang and was moving westward, he met the move by throwing his whole army over at night.

By this piece of strategy Kuropatkin, in the opinion of the General Staff, gained an immense advantage. His army is concentrated on one side of the river and the road is still open for his retirement northward, while the Japanese armies, which must act in unison, are separated by the river, which places Kuropatkin in a position to oppose Kuroki with his whole army, while Gens. Oku and Nodzu are stranded on the other side, which gives Kuropatkin a possible opportunity to imitate Napoleon's tactics and defeat the opposing forces in detail.

Only One Parallel in History.

"There is only one parallel in history," said a high officer of the War Office yesterday, "and that is Metz, when Prince Frederick Charles straddled the Moselle with the German armies. But Kuropatkin has not repeated Marshal Bazaine's mistake of sitting still while the enemy closed him in."

Kuropatkin's great strength in cavalry, in the opinion of the War Office, will stand him in good stead now.

There are two good, regular bridges at Liao-Yang, over which the Russian crossing was effected, and then there is the railroad bridge, about two miles down the stream.

The Tokio report that Kuroki's forces were in action at Hei-ying-tai, north of the Tai-Tse River, indicates that Gen. Kuropatkin has already engaged him with a portion of his army.

It is understood that throughout the fighting of the last few days Kuropatkin's main reserves did not leave their position on the right bank of the river.

The report that telegraphic communication between Liao-Yang and Mukden has been severed is not admitted at the War Office, which points out that it has only been receiving two telegrams daily from Gen. Kuropatkin and Sakharoff.

Balloon Corps of Great Service.

Nemirovitch Danchenko, the well-known Russian correspondent in the service of The Associated Press, in a dispatch from Liao-Yang dated Aug. 31, says:

"The Russian balloon corps has been of the greatest service throughout the several days' fighting in locating the Japanese advance through the thick cover of the Chinese cornfields, where Japanese columns frequently tried to creep up and surprise the Russian positions.

"The Japanese are using lyddite and Shimose powder. The latter is terrific in its effects, and its brown haze is easily distinguishable on the curtained slopes of the hills, where hundreds of Japanese guns all day long poured in a deadly rain of fire.

"The soldiers are in excellent spirits. Gen. Stakelberg is personally visiting and inspecting the various positions. In some of the batteries it has been impossible to remove the killed or wounded for three days."

BISHOP MURDERED IN CHINA.

Two Missionary Priests and Some Native Slain.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cablegrams.
Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Sept. 2—On July 19 Bishop Verhaeghen and two missionary priests, all Belgians, were murdered near Shinan-fu. The First Secretary of the French Legation was sent to hold an inquiry, and as a result of the investigations the following demands have been presented to the Chinese Government: First, punishment of the guilty; second, degradation of the Sub-Prefect and other minor officials who not only failed in their duty to protect the foreigners but who had shown some sympathy with the guilty; third, the erection of a hospital open to all Chinese without regard to creed; fourth, an honorific funeral for the victims; fifth, compensation to the extent of a few hundred dollars to the families of the Chinese murdered at the same time as the missionaries, and compensation for the Chinese property destroyed.

No pecuniary compensation is demanded for the murdered missionaries. France, no doubt recognising the anomaly of her position as protector in China of missionary bodies whom she has expelled from France, has sought to derive no political advantage from the murders. China will agree willingly to the terms of the demands.

NEW SCHEME TO BEAT SHOPS.

Detective Says Woman Tried to Buy Freedom When Arrested.

Mrs. Selma Vogel of 339 Sixth Street was locked up in the Tenderloin Station last night charged with shoplifting. The arrest was made in a department store by Private Detective George Bernard, who says she had a system of getting money that didn't belong to her that worked as a sort of an endless chain.

"Mrs. Vogel would saunter up to a hose counter," Bernard said, "and take up three or four pairs of socks. Then she would go to the cashier, and say she had bought them the day before and wanted to return them and get a credit check. When she got the credit check she went back to some counter, bought ten or fifteen cents' worth of merchandise, and took the rest of the credit in cash.

"I watched Mrs. Vogel a long time before I would arrest her, because she was very well dressed and seemed to be prosperous. Finally she was taken into a private office and confronted with the evidence against her. Suddenly she threw herself on her knees and begged for mercy.

"'Take this,' she sobbed, holding out a roll of eighty one-dollar bills, 'and let me go.'

"When I told her she couldn't get off that way, she produced another roll containing $15, and still another of $22. She had a bankbook with her which indicated that $1,200 was deposited to her credit."

At the police station she refused to talk. She was visited by O'Hare and Peyser, attorneys.

BOYS SAVE 300-POUND WOMAN.

Rescued Her After She Upset Boat—Husband Saved Son First.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Carl Barton and George Merriam, two High School boys, rescued a 300-pound woman from drowning this afternoon. They were in a skiff, perhaps fifty yards off the public float in the bay, when a party consisting of a man, a woman, and a boy set out from the float in a skiff.

The boy sat in the stern and the woman, presumably his mother, tried to sit down beside him. The six-year-old boy proved unable to balance a 300-pound woman and the boat turned over. The man came up first. The boy bobbed up next, and the man grabbed him and struck out for the float. He landed the boy, climbed on the float himself, and picking up the lad sped up the runway. Meanwhile the boys were alongside her. When she came up for the second time Barton grabbed her skirts, and although their boat half filled with water before they succeeded in their work, the boys finally got the woman to the float. By this time the man had returned and helped to drag the woman up. All three disappeared while the boys were gone after their boat.

EX-JUDGE L. S. BURR ARRESTED.

Embezzlement Charged Against Jurist Who Once Talked Atheism.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Sept. 2.—Lyman S. Burr, ex-Judge of the City and Police Courts, and for more than twenty years a practicing attorney of this city, was arrested and held under bonds of $5,000 today, charged with the embezzlement of $5,493.53 from the estate of Timothy W. Loomis.

The Judge retired from the bench because of deafness two years ago. He attracted attention on the day of his last sitting in court by giving vent to certain atheistic utterances, which were quoted in newspapers throughout the country. He is prominent in fraternal societies and military circles. To-morrow he will be brought before the court over which he formerly presided. He is about fifty-one years old, and has a wife and family.

Vaudeville Interests Combine.

A contract was signed yesterday by the B. F. Keith International Circuit of Theatre Enterprises and the Shea-Garden Theatre Company, controlling theatres in Buffalo, Toronto, and Cleveland. There will be but one vaudeville theatre in each of the cities hereafter, and the bookings for the same will be done through Mr. Keith's agency in New York, which represents fifteen theatres in the leading cities east of Chicago.

DISCONTENT IN UNIONS MAY FORCE SETTLEMENT

Building Alliance Finds It Hard to Keep Men in Line.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS ANGRY

Ask Walking Delegates to Resign, but They Will Take a Vacation Instead.

While the Building Trades Alliance still publicly declares that it must be recognized by the Employers' Association before the building tie-up can be settled, there were more signs yesterday that it will find it impossible much longer to control the discontented members of the affiliated unions. The employers take the stand that as the alliance is at the root of the present disturbances they cannot and will not recognize the organization in any settlement which may be reached.

The impatience of the members of the unions at their enforced idleness was strongly manifested at this week's meeting of Electrical Workers' Union No. 3, which was locked out for ordering strikes in violation of the arbitration agreement. An independent union of electrical workers has been formed by the employers with about 400 members, and it is not pleasing to the old union to see the new one taking its place.

The meeting of No. 3 began on Thursday night and ended in the small hours of yesterday morning. After the situation had been discussed the Executive Committee called for the resignation of George W. Whitford and John Dickman, who represented the union in the Building Trades Alliance. They refused to resign, and then there were open declarations that the men were tired of remaining idle owing to a fight which did not involve wages or hours of labor. After a stormy discussion the two Walking Delegates were asked to take a vacation of several weeks in the hope that the trouble will be ended before they return. Notwithstanding this the two Walking Delegates were still on deck yesterday.

The regular meeting of the Building Trades Alliance was held yesterday afternoon, but it was said that there would be nothing new to say about the peace plan of President Nason until after Labor Day.

Robert J. Ainslow, business agent of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Union, said that a new organization of employing stonecutters had been formed, in connection with the Building Trades Employers' Association, and that the new association had asked to meet a committee of the union, with a view to a settlement.

The union, he said, replied that if the lockout was declared off or the men were put back to work the Building Trades' Alliance would be willing to send a committee to confer with the employers. It was through the employment of non-union stonecutters at the Trinity Building, he said, that the whole trouble started.

Several meetings between committees of trade associations of employers and unions and their respective trades took place yesterday afternoon and evening at the Building Trades' Club. It was said afterward that the conferences had no reference to the present troubles, the unions attending not being involved.

Lewis Harding, Chairman of the Press Committee of the Employers' Association, said last night that so far no peace proposition on the part of the unions had been received. It did not follow, however, that individual employers might not have been approached. He had no personal knowledge of the matter. As to recognition of the Building Trades Alliance, he said:

"While we will not recognize the Building Trades Alliance under any circumstances in the present dispute, I do not say that it may never be recognized or that we will not concede that the unions have a right to have a central body. The alliance, however, is responsible for the present troubles, and we cannot and will not recognize it as a body in any settlement of the present dispute."

Regarding Nason's proposition to have conferences between committees of individual unions and the individual trade associations of employers he said:

"We would have no objection to that if the committees have power to act. If they had no power to act there could be no conference."

TO FORCE MEAT FAMINE.

All Union Men May Quit—Boycott Is Declared on Meat.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—"A meat famine will be forced at all costs. It is the best weapon with which to fight the trust packers, although it may not be welcomed by the independents."

In these words President Donnelly of the butchers' National organization to-day declared a boycott against all meat and announced that union men will quit in all packing establishments this afternoon regardless of where live stock is secured.

Donnelly's announcement was made at the conclusion of a meeting of the Allied Trades Conference Board. Donnelly's statement is as follows:

The Conference Board, representing all organizations involved in the present packing house strike, has taken action to place all meats upon the unfair list. This order will be sent to every packing house in the country and no member of the Meat Cutters' and Butcher Workmen's Union will be allowed to dress any animal until the strike is settled. The packers have resorted to extortion as the result of the strike, buying live stock on the hoof for almost nothing and charging almost any price for the dressed product. The public will now be given an opportunity to retaliate by refusing to eat meat until such time as they can procure the same at fair market price.

By ignoring any attempts on the part of the independents to bring about peace, and by adopting such an aggressive step, the strike leaders demonstrated their intention to make it a fight to a finish.

MEAT STRIKERS VIOLENT.

Assaults and Theft Charged—Magistrate Cornell's Warning.

Police Captain Langtry of the East Fifty-first Street Station detailed several policemen yesterday to arrest striking butchers and their sympathizers, who gathered upon the roofs of houses in the vicinity of the meat plants, and threw bricks down at the men who had taken the places of strikers. The police captured Thomas Callahan, who refused to give his address, and William Tierney of 320 East Thirty-fifth Street. The prisoners were held in $500 bail for trial in the Special Sessions.

John McLaughlin of 717 Second Avenue was also held on a charge of assaulting Jeremiah Gaston, a negro strike breaker who attempted to seek employment at Schwarzschild & Sulzberger's plant.

Theodore Singer of 518 East Seventy-sixth Street, who threw a bottle of petroleum over a load of beef in front of the United Beef Company's plant, was held in $1,000 bail for the action of the Grand Jury.

Frank Zeller of 423 East Seventy-third Street, who was charged with stealing a side of beef from a wagon at Forty-sixth Street and First Avenue, was held for further examination, and Ernest Lehm of 28 Second Avenue, who was charged with assaulting a strike breaker, was held for examination to-day in the Yorkville Court.

In disposing of these cases Magistrate Cornell, in the Yorkville Court, denounced the actions of the strikers and their friends and said that he intended to make an example of every prisoner brought before him who was guilty of assaulting strike breakers.

While on his way to work yesterday morning, Edward Armes, a strike breaker, of 327 Pleasant Avenue, was attacked by three of the strikers, one of whom stabbed him in the right leg with a butcher's knife. The men escaped.

He added that practically all of the members of the Brotherhood had voted, and that not more than 1 or 2 per cent. of the total membership had neglected to vote. He refused to tell the result of the balloting, but a member of the Executive Committee volunteered the information that the Brotherhood men had voted unanimously in favor of striking if the railroad officials did not grant the demands of the men.

At the meeting of the Amalgamated Association it was said that out of the 3,700 members of that organization 3,500 had voted in favor of a resolution to sustain the Amalgamated's Executive Committee in an agreement it had made with the Brotherhood to stand by the Brotherhood in the fight. The balloting figures, however, were not given out officially.

There had been some doubt until yesterday as to what attitude members of the Amalgamated Association would take in the struggle between the Brotherhood men and the Interborough Company. President Pepper and a committee of the association called upon Vice President Bryan of the company a few days ago for the adjustment of some differences in reference to the matter of priority and seniority of Manhattan employes desiring to be shifted into the subway. Mr. Pepper and his colleagues went away declaring that all differences between their organization and the company had been satisfactorily adjusted, and for a time the relations between the men of the Amalgamated and members of the Brotherhoods seemed a little frigid.

New Kind of Alliance.

President Pepper dispelled every doubt on the question of their present relations by declaring the three organizations would stand together through thick and thin until they had won this fight. To make an alliance with any organization outside of the "Big Four" Railroad Brotherhoods is a new departure for the Brotherhood of Engineers, too, but Grand Chief Stone asserted, as had Mr. Pepper, that on this matter they surely would make common cause to the end.

Chief Stone of the engineers and Vice Grand Master Wilson of the firemen made speeches both at the meetings of their own men and those of the Amalgamated Association. Mr. Stone, in answer to questions put by reporters, said he had received no communication from officials of the company, and that he did not expect any for the present.

"It is all up to Mr. Belmont," said Chief Stone. "He alone can say the word that will avert a strike. Mr. Belmont's attitude is that he can get, and in fact has already engaged, all the motormen he needs for the subway, at $3 a day. We want these men to have $3.50 a day, and we will not give in until they get it. Mr. Belmont seems to forget that the tunnel is a public property and that he will be responsible for the safety of passengers carried in it.

"We maintain that Mr. Belmont should engage for the responsible position of motormen only a class of men better than those that can be gotten for $3 a day.

"We cannot afford any compromise in this case. What the company wants to do is to reduce the existing wage schedule all round in the subway, and we will not stand by and see that done."

Mr. Stone expressed the opinion that there was still a possibility of peace at another conference with officers of the company, but said the initiative must by taken by them.

The Interborough's Side.

General Manager Bryan of the Interborough last night issued a signed statement which he began with the agreement made on Sept. 15, 1902, between the Manhattan Railway Company and the engineers, firemen, and motormen employed on the road and the engineers' and firemen's brotherhoods. This contract, which provided for a nine-hour day, with a pro rata overtime charge, was, he continues, inherited by the Interborough. Mr. Bryan continues:

"The Interborough Company was aware that the contract provided for a higher rate of pay and for shorter hours than were being granted motormen anywhere else in the United States. The former management of the Manhattan Railway explained their reasons for giving these exceptional rates of pay and hours for work as being on account of the long and faithful service of the engineers.

"These engineers were not motormen. They had been trained in their duties as such; many of them were familiar with the vacuum brake only, then being used on the Manhattan Railway, and had to be instructed in the use of train line air. In many instances they were past middle life and have not as readily learned such duties as would younger men.

"Preparatory to the opening of the subway special did not leave the Pennsylvania station until 10:30 o'clock, the second section following soon afterward.

Two Brooklyn commands, the Fourteenth Regiment of Infantry and Troop C, started from that borough last night for Manassas, to take part in the maneoeuvres of the army and National Guard.

The regiment, 850 strong, including 42 officers, with Col. George R. Dyer at their head, presented a very business-like appearance. The men appeared for the first time in their new olive-drab uniforms, prescribed by the United States Government, and were equipped with the new kaki suspender belts, haversacks, canteens, leggings, shelter tents, rolls, blankets, and ponchos. They carried, also for the first time, the new model of Krag-Jorgensen rifles, fitted with knife and bayonet.

Among the officers who went South were, besides Col. Dwyer, Lieut. Col. Mayhew Wainwright, Majors Buek and Husten, Adjutants De Russy, Knapp, and Vermilye, Surgeons Le Boutillier, Terriberry, and Brown, Quartermasters Richards, Lee, and Kernochan, Chaplain Connolly, and Capts. Parker, Burr, Robb, Dudley, Benkard, Hoppin, Quarrier, and Power. Among the Lieutenants were Cornelius Vanderbilt, H. H. Rogers, Jr., Deputy Police Commissioner Lindsley, C. S. Wadsworth, and James C. Lord.

The regiment marched from the armory to the foot of West Twenty-third Street, where the ferryboat St. Louis of the Pennsylvania Line, was in waiting to take it to Jersey City. There two trains, one of nine cars and another of eight, were in readiness to transport the Guardsmen to Thoroughfare, Va.

Capt. Dillon and the reserves of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station were kept busy clearing the way for the regiment as it came out of the armory. The course taken was through West Sixty-first Street, down Broadway to Twenty-fourth Street, and thence to the ferry. All along the line crowds were waiting to greet the soldiers and wish them good luck. At the Grand Circle the crowd numbered fully 5,000, and street traffic was delayed for several minutes to allow the regiment to pass. Another big crowd gathered at Broadway and Thirty-fourth Street, and another at Twenty-fourth Street and Eighth Avenue.

Lieut. Cornelius Vanderbilt of Company B commanded the detachment which preceded the regiment to the trains, and is to do police duty until the battlefield is reached. This detachment was to have been commanded by Deputy Police Commissioner Lindsley, but it was found necessary to change the plans at the last moment.

The citizen-soldiers looked well prepared for the hard work before them, and, despite their heavy equipment, marched with precision. An ambulance corps and commissariat detachment, the latter in command of Capt. Munson Morris, accompanied the regiment.

The only mishap, so far as could be learned, occurred to Guardsman Hertz of Company B, who fell overboard from the ferryboat. He was quickly rescued by one of his comrades, who thrust his rifle over the side of the boat. Hertz grasped the weapon and pulled himself aboard.

There was some delay in starting the trains, and the first section of the regiment

DEMOCRATS ALARMED BY HILL'S JUDICIARY PLAN

Want to Join Republicans in the Cullen-Werner Ticket.

AVOIDING GOV. ODELL'S TRAP

Growing Opposition to Stanchfield for Governor—Tammany Asserts Increasing Strength of Palmer.

According to the opinion of many prominent Democratic politicians ex-Senator David B. Hill is likely to strike a snag if he persists in his intention of having the convention at Saratoga on Sept. 20 nominate his Herrick-Cunneen judicial slate. These same men say, too, that there will be more trouble if Mr. Hill attempts to nominate John B. Stanchfield of Elmira as the Democratic candidate for Governor. Included among the men who view Mr. Hill's programme with alarm are a number who were Judge Parker's supporters before the St. Louis Convention. And some of them are so positive in their views that they assert that the ex-Senator's place at the head of the State organization will be threatened if he does not recede from his present course.

First and foremost the opposition of the anti-Hill men is being centred on the judicial situation, and it is said that Judge Parker has been importuned to check Hill's plan of ignoring the ticket for the Court of Appeals to be nominated by the Republicans. As it stands now Mr. Hill seems to be going ahead in his efforts to nominate D. Cady Herrick of Albany for Chief Judge and John Cunneen of Buffalo for Associate Judge, regardless of what happens.

Next there is an effort on foot to stop the nomination of Stanchfield for Governor, and in this the opposition is booming the candidacy of George M. Palmer of Schoharie County, the minority leader on the floor of the State Assembly. On the judicial question it is understood that both William F. Sheehan and August Belmont are in harmony with Tammany Hall and the other opponents of the Hill slate.

At Democratic National and State Headquarters, too, there is a growing sentiment that the plan is unwise. The party managers are of the opinion that if the Republicans place Judge Cullen, a Democrat, in the field for Chief Judge, with Judge Werner on the ticket for Associate Judge, the Democrats will have to indorse that ticket or else lay the party open to the charge of injecting politics into the judiciary. Such a condition had much to do with losing the State for the Democratic ticket in 1898 when Roosevelt was narrowly elected Governor over Van Wyck, after Richard Croker had "turned down" Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Daly for a renomination because of a personal dislike. While none of the Democratic managers would talk for publication yesterday, many of them expressed the conviction that much the same situation would develop this year if Mr. Hill should be permitted to name Herrick and Cunneen to run against Cullen and Werner. Governor-Chairman Odell, they say, has clearly set a trap for the Democrats in the make-up of the judicial slate, and they are determined to keep Hill from leading the party into it.

These men argue that the Democratic Convention should indorse Cullen and Werner if the Republicans name them, in order that Democratic success in the State may not be handicapped in any way.

Ex-Senator Hill returned to Albany yesterday, after spending several hours at the Hoffman House in consultation with various leaders. He declined to comment on Gov. Odell's appointment of Judge Cullen to succeed Judge Parker, and said that the Democratic Convention would meet all conditions on the judicial situation "after the Republicans had made their nominations." He also had something to say about the Murphy-McCarren situation.

"There are a few persons who seem to think that the Democrats up the State stay awake nights worrying about factional disputes in this city," he said. "They do not, however. The up-State Democrats do not care about these little rows down here. I know nothing of the so-called Murphy-McCarren fight."

The opponents of Stanchfield, as well as the opponents of Hill, it is believed, will rally to the support of Palmer for the Governorship, especially now that Tammany has come out semi-officially for him. This, of course, excepts the Kings County delegates under McCarren's control, who will be for Grout for Governor on the first ballot at least, and who then would switch to any one else but Palmer as long as they might have a chance to defeat Tammany Hall's candidate.

At both State and National headquarters yesterday it was believed that Leader Charles F. Murphy had made a clever stroke in taking up the candidacy of Palmer as a blow at Hill on the one side and at McCarren on the other. It is not conceded by any means that Stanchfield has the strength that has been claimed for him, and there is reason to believe that Mr. Belmont, Mr. Sheehan, and other friends of Judge Parker will throw their influence in the convention against him.

PEABODY KNIFED BY FRIENDS.

Corporation Influences Said to Have Betrayed Colorado's Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Sept. 2.—The Republican Party, which was supposed to be solid for Gov. Peabody for re-election, has been rent asunder by the report that the Denver Tramway, which controls the machinery, has made a deal with the Democratic city administration by which Peabody may be side-tracked in the convention. In return for this the city authorities are said to have entered into a deal by which the tramway secures a renewal of a franchise worth $25,000,000.

Denver is the key of the situation, holding the balance of power in the State election, and a deal of the kind suggested would be disastrous to the party that is trying to secure vindication for Peabody.

THURSTON SHOUTING NOW.

Admits He Was Lukewarm Toward Roosevelt Before Convention.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 2.—Senator John M. Thurston of Nebraska addressed the convention of the New Jersey State League of Republican Clubs, which was held in the Beach Casino to-day. He said, in part:

"Everybody knows what the Republican Party is. Nobody knows what the Democratic Party may be. Every plank in the Republican platform tells of something done. The expurgated edition of the Democratic creed is as meaningless as the dictionary read backward, and the strength of their candidate is the fact that he has never voiced a political opinion.

"Theodore Roosevelt presides at a table where the master minds of the twentieth century calmly consider and successfully solve the mighty problems which involve American growth and glory and the peace and welfare of the civilized world.

"Most of us politicians were lukewarm about his nomination, but the plain people, with keener insight and better appreciation, were with him at the convention in June and will be with him at the polls in November."

PLATT ELECTED A DELEGATE.

His County Convention Demands Resubmission of Canal Question.

Special to The New York Times.

OWEGO, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The Republican County Convention to-day elected the following delegates to the State Convention: T. C. Platt, W. A. Smith, D. P. Whitter, E. S. Hanford, W. T. Johnson, W. S. Moore.

Edwin S. Hanford was renominated for Assembly. Resolutions were adopted instructing the Senator and Assemblyman to vote to secure a resubmission to the thousand-ton barge canal question to the people.

FIGHT IN MAINE AND VERMONT.

Democrats Stirring Up Much Enthusiasm in Both States.

Chairman William F. Sheehan of the Democratic National Executive Committee left for Bar Harbor, Me., yesterday to look over the situation in that State. He will return early next week.

Representative Benjamin F. Shiveley of Indiana, who has been speaking in Vermont and Maine for several days, returned yesterday. He opened his tour at Brattleborough, Vt.; spoke in several other Green Mountain towns and wound up at Waterville, Me., where lives the Democratic candidate for Governor.

"I had good audiences everywhere," said Mr. Shiveley, "and had plenty of evidence that the people of both States are interested in the campaign. At the election in Vermont on Sept. 6 we shall make a great showing, and the returns from Maine a week later will, I believe, be especially impressive."

Ex-Senator Charles A. Towne is scheduled to speak in Maine on Sept. 9 and 10 at meetings which will wind up the campaign.

Col. James M. Guffey, member of the National Committee for Pennsylvania, was at headquarters yesterday, and said that next week he would stay here regularly for the campaign.

Another visitor to see Chairman Taggart was Harlan Cleveland of Cincinnati, one of the Parker supporters at St. Louis. Mr. Cleveland had just returned from a trip through West Virginia.

"From a Democratic point of view conditions could not be better in West Virginia," he said. "Judging from what I heard and saw every man who ever voted the Democratic ticket is in line for Parker and Davis, and I also heard of hundreds of Republicans who will support them. I am confident the State will go Democratic."

BUSY DAY FOR FAIRBANKS.

Comes to Missouri, Goes to Kansas, and Comes Back Again.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 2.—Senator Fairbanks arrived here to-day from Marion, Kan., and spent a busy day. After breakfast in his car he was escorted by a local reception committee to the Midland Hotel, where a public reception took place. Following this there was a drive about the city.

After luncheon the Missouri State candidates and a number of native Indians were received by Senator Fairbanks. Then the Senator was taken in charge by a committee from Kansas City, Kan., and escorted across the line, where he made a brief speech.

At the meeting in Kansas City, Kan., reference was again made to Senator Fairbanks's availability as a Presidential candidate. It came from State Senator Cubbison, who presided over the meeting, and was in the following terms: "If President McKinley had lived Senator Fairbanks would almost certainly have been the Presidential nominee at this time, but under the circumstances all we can do for him now is to elect him to the Vice Presidency and then nominate and elect him President four years hence."

To-night he opened the Republican campaign in Missouri with a speech here in which he said:

"The protective tariff and the gold standard are well suited to our requirements. The people demanded good money. We have it. They demanded that good relations with other nations should be preserved. They were never better.

"They demanded an Isthmian canal. It is now in course of construction. No act of dishonor attaches to it. What has been done in connection with it involved no violation of international faith.

"There was no executive usurpation. President Roosevelt merely protected American interests. He acted in a prompt and firm way, clearly within our National rights, and thereby made secure the early completion of the great enterprise so important to our commerce and to our country."

JONES TO HELP IN CAMPAIGN.

Ex-Chairman, as Well as Johnson of Kansas, to Join Taggart's Staff.

Announcement was made at Democratic National Headquarters yesterday that Chairman Taggart had induced ex-Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas and J. G. Johnson of Kansas to aid the National Committee in an advisory capacity during the campaign. Both men will be at headquarters practically all the time for the next two months.

As Senator Jones was the Chairman of the National Committee, and Mr. Johnson, the Chairman of the National Executive Committee during the two Bryan campaigns of 1896 and 1900, their appointments were looked upon with satisfaction by the Bryan men. Chairman Taggart earlier in the week enlisted Charles A. Walsh of Iowa, Mr. Bryan's personal friend, who was formerly Secretary of the National Committee. This was followed by the announcement that Mr. Bryan had consented to speak for the Parker and Davis ticket in October.

Chairman Taggart also announced yesterday that the National Association of Democratic Clubs, a Hearst adjunct, would be revived for Parker and Davis, and that Max F. Ihmsen, Secretary of the National Association of Democratic Clubs, would be in charge of the work.

HILL DID NOT SAY FRAUD.

His Alleged Personal Attack on Roosevelt the Invention of a Reporter.

This statement was issued yesterday afternoon by The Associated Press:

"An investigation by The Associated Press discloses the fact that a number of serious errors were made in its report of Senator D. B. Hill's speech at Deposit, N. Y., on Thursday, Aug. 25.

"It seems that a reporter of a local Democratic paper, upon whom The Associated Press depended for a report, failed to attend the meeting, but instead invented a speech for Senator Hill which contained several statements wholly misrepresenting the Senator's views and quite at variance with his utterances.

"Among the phrases thus inserted as a part of the speech was one to the effect that Senator Hill had charged President Roosevelt with being a 'fraud.' Senator Hill said nothing of the kind.

"This correction is made without the knowledge of Mr. Hill or any of his friends, but in the interest of accuracy for The Associated Press service."

NEW JERSEY BOLTERS TO MEET

Convention Called to Meet at Atlantic City Sept. 10.

Calls were issued last night for a State mass convention of the newly organized People's Democratic Party in New Jersey, to be held in Atlantic City on Saturday, Sept. 10. The calls were signed by George A. Honnecker, Chairman of the committee, and state that the convention is to be for the purpose of nominating candidates for Presidential Electors, State officers, and the selection of a State Central Committee.

The party is made up of those who bolted from the convention at Trenton some time ago.

Warren County Leader Deserts Platt.

Special to The New York Times.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 2.—J. A. Emerson, a candidate for Senator from this district, to-day requested THE TIMES correspondent to say that his brother, ex-Congressman Emerson, who heads Warren's delegation to the State Convention, recognizes the leadership of Gov. Odell and will follow him faithfully. He has for many years been devoted to the political interests of Senator Platt.

Wayne County Delegates for Woodruff.

LYONS, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The delegates elected by the Wayne County Republican District Convention, which was held here to-day, were pledged to support Timothy L. Woodruff of Brooklyn for Governor and James E. Robson of Canandaigua for Justice of the Supreme Court for the Seventh District, Fourth Department.

PARKER NOT GOING TO ST. LOUIS AFTER ALL

Changes at Sundown the Official Plans of Noon.

TO SPEAK LITTLE IF AT ALL

Two Embattled Deveryites Descend Upon Him and Demand Sulzer's Nomination for Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ROSEMOUNT, Esopus, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Judge Parker will not attend the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. At noon to-day arrangements to start for St. Louis on the 24th were practically completed; at sundown the trip was declared off. Some very strong arguments were presented against such an expedition, and they weighed sufficiently with the candidate to induce him to forego further thought of viewing the great show.

It can be stated that speechmaking plans are not being contemplated at Rosemount at this time. If the candidate should not make a half dozen speeches all told it would not surprise anybody here. It is understood he will await the trend of events, and if they force an issue which he believes should be at once handled in a speech, then such a speech will be delivered.

It is a curious condition which exists with relation to possible speechmaking tours. Able men, high in the councils of the Democratic Party, come here and tell the candidate the proper and best thing to do is to take the stump, take it quick, and hold it long; others journey to Rosemount and seriously question the advisability of a general stump campaign, a few even taking a decided stand against any appearance in the limelight at all.

The Judge listens to all arguments for and against and weighs them on their merits. The verdict in the case of St. Louis vs. Parker was reversed on the findings of the late afternoon.

At this time there is not an expedition of any sort on the programme of the candidate's official household. So far as known, the residence at Rosemount will be his abiding place for days to come.

Mayor Granger of Louisville, who, with Congressman Sherley of the Fifth Kentucky District, was prominent in Gov. Beckham's crusade for Parker delegates in the Spring, was a guest of the candidate, as was Charles M. Preston, who happens in at Rosemount every day or two, now that he is Chairman of the Democratic General Committee of Ulster.

William E. Ryan, candidate for Congress in the Thirty-first New York District under the apportionment based on the census of 1890, now the Thirty-second, and formerly clerk in the Agricultural Department in Washington, and who, despite the oft-used title of "ex-Congressman" has yet to serve in the House, came up from the Ninth New York District (where he has achieved some reputation as a follower of William Stephen Devery) unabashed at the handy trouncing the ex-chief received from Tom Smith and Frank Goodwin Tuesday, and began to talk of the strength of Congressman William Sulzer for Governor.

Ryan made such an impression he was invited to luncheon. He has been to Rosemount before as the special emissary of Devery, but there is no record that he ever before achieved an invitation to eat. He had a companion who, while at table, presented Sulzer arguments balanced on a knife and fork, which were always pointed straight at the Judge.

Henry Watterson came to Rosemount by invitation to-day and discussed with Judge Parker certain details of the Democratic campaign from the point of view of one who has participated actively in seven political conflicts. He was accompanied by Mrs. Watterson, and they remained at Rosemount for luncheon, returning to New York in the afternoon.

Col. Watterson said:

"I was asked to make an address Wednesday night to the Democratic editors who are to meet in New York, and I have accepted. I have decided to speak on the subject 'If I Were a Republican.'

"My talk will not be a discussion of issues to any great extent. It will come nearer being the philosophy of politics based on the present conflict. If I were a Republican now I would vote for Parker, and in my address I will tell why I would vote for him."

Col. Watterson had never met Judge Parker, though Judge Parker knows Col. Watterson. In 1890 Judge Parker listened to the Kentucky editor when he made a vehement denunciation of the New York delegation to the Democratic National Convention at Cincinnati. Judge Parker said afterward that Col. Watterson had expressed the views he would have liked to deliver to the delegation.

John Lind Won't Run for Judge.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 2.—Congressman John Lind of Minneapolis has declined the Democratic nomination for Justice of the State Supreme Court for business and personal reasons. The State Central Committee will fill the vacancy.

Election Betting Odds Unchanged.

Betting continues at 10 to 6 on the Presidential campaign. Yesterday J. J. Judge, a curb broker, placed $1,500 against $900, put up by a Stock Exchange firm. The odds closed at 10 to 6¾ offered on Roosevelt, while the best offered by Parker supporters was 8 to 10.

POLICE LOCK UP A TIGRESS.

Citizen Objects to Daily Parade of Animal Through the Streets.

A nine-months-old tigress, one of the principal properties of a play at the American Theatre, was a prisoner in the West Thirty-seventh Street Station for several hours yesterday afternoon, on the complaint of James McCarren of 245 West Forty-seventh Street, directly opposite the theatre.

McCarren asserted that the practice of the theatrical manager in causing the animal to be led through the streets daily, to be fed at an Eighth Avenue restaurant, was dangerous to the children of the neighborhood. The arrest was effected by Policeman McCauly who came upon the animal as it was being led from its feeding place back to the theatre by a boy employed for the purpose. After a little trepidation, the policeman took the leash from the boy and led the beast to the station, where it was chained fast in a back room.

The tigress was finally released by Capt. Hayes, on the promise of Manager Weis that he would not have the animal exhibited in the streets in such a fashion again. Upon this agreement, McCarren withdrew his complaint.

Trolley Kills Little Girl.

Minnie Lohr, five years old, the daughter of James Lohr of 631 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, was knocked down and killed by a Park Avenue trolley car almost opposite her home last night. One of the children who had been playing with her ran to the Lohr home and shouted to the child's mother that Minnie had been run over by a trolley car. The mother hurried to the corner, and fell in a faint when she learned her child had been killed. The motorman, William Brody, was arrested.

Malcolm McBurney's Golf Cup.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 2.—The finals for three golf trophies were played at Stockbridge in the annual tournament to-day. Malcolm McBurney, son of Dr. Charles McBurney of New York, won the handsome Stockbridge Cup, defeating Walter R. Tuckerman, 7 up and 6 to play. McBurney becomes the owner of the trophy by winning to-day, as he won in 1902, and the cup goes to the player winning it twice. Tuckerman won the cup last year. W. J. Browne of Great Barrington won the Governors' Cup, beating C. H. Kerner, Jr. of New York, 3 up and 2 to play.

CORTELYOU TRIES TO HARMONIZE DELAWARE

Two Republican Tickets in the State Cause Worry.

ADDICKS MEN THREATEN BOLT

United States Senatorship in Doubt—Faction Leaders Called to New York for Conference.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 2.—The Republican National Committee is taking an active hand in the factional fight in the State, and Chairman Cortelyou is doing his utmost to secure harmony. Senator Allee and Secretary of State Layton of the Union or Addicks party and T. Coleman Du Pont, the leader of the regular forces, were summoned to New York last night for a conference.

The report that the Presidential Electors would not serve on the Union Republican ticket has aroused the National Committee, and the visit of the leaders from this State has aroused the local politicians. It is understood the two factions were directed to get together in order to save the State.

Just what has become of J. Edward Addicks at this juncture is decidedly interesting. He seems to have disappeared and left all the harmony proceedings to his lieutenants. No one believes that he intends to abdicate.

The head of the National Committee is not satisfied with the way the head of the Delaware majority party is acting. Senator Allee is between two fires.

The head of his party on one side demands that such peace negotiations be made at once between the sponsors of the two separate Republican tickets in Delaware as will not only insure the State's three Electoral votes to Roosevelt but much more. The two Republican Parties have two nominees for Congress to run against a solid Democracy, while the election of a Republican Senator to succeed Senator L. Heisler Ball for a term of six years is very much in doubt.

On the other hand, Union Republicans all over the State are threatening to leave the party if Henry C. Conrad, their candidate for Governor, or the other candidates on their State ticket be taken off for the substitution of either a Regular or an independent.

The Regular Republican State Committee will meet to-morrow, and it is expected that the members will then take some definite action toward bringing about harmony between themselves and the Union Republicans.

ALL OVER, BEVERIDGE SAYS.

Sees No Hope for Parker—President to Get Reports Late.

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 2.—Senator Beveridge of Indiana called on the President to-day. He said it seemed to him that the Republicans had practically won. "Unless," he said, "there should be a Democratic landslide, and there are no indications of such a thing, I believe Roosevelt will be elected by the biggest majority a President has received since the civil war. I think Parker will be defeated even more decisively than Bryan was in either of his campaigns."

Among the other callers on the President to-day was Henry R. Hall, an attorney of St. Louis. Mr. Hall desired to enlist the President's interest, and if possible his aid, in the case of Ignacio Loperana, an American citizen, who resides in St. Louis. Loperana's father owned large properties in the City of Mexico, but the son never has been able to obtain possession of them. The case is pending in the Mexican courts, where, it was said, Loperana appears to be a victim of a statute of limitation which was made retroactive.

Drafts of annual reports of some department officials have begun to reach the President, but it is too early for the reports of the heads of departments on which to some extent he bases his annual message to the Congress. Because of the campaign, it is said, those reports may be later this year than usual.

TERMINAL STOCKHOLDERS ACT.

Plan to Protect Interests of Those in Chicago Transfer Company.

A committee consisting of William M. Heaton, of Day & Heaton; H. K. Pomroy, of Pomroy Brothers; Charles W. Maury, of C. W. Maury & Co.; Albert E. Goodhart, of P. J. Goodhart & Co.; and A. O. Slaughter of Chicago informed stockholders of preferred and common stock of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railway Company that, owning and representing an extensive interest in the stocks of that company, then intend taking action to protect their interest and those of all parties who may join them.

They ask all the owners of the stock of this company to have their stock transferred and to send their names and addresses to the Secretary of the committee, having been informed that the transfer books of the company are to be closed Sept. 21.

From the nature of the annual report of the Chicago Terminal and Transfer Company made public on Monday, it was probable that a reorganization would be proposed. The total net income for last year was $201,942 less than the interest on the funded debt. There was a deficit in its accounts of about $300,000, including the materials on hand and disputed claims. By Dec. 31 the company will have to spend $600,000 more for track elevation as required by a Chicago ordinance. It has only $70,000 in bonds available under its first mortgage, and these sell at 74, so that their cash value is only about $50,000.

NOT ENGAGED TO FRAZER.

Fay Templeton Denies That She Is to Wed Syracuse Man.

Miss Fay Templeton last night denied the report that she was soon to wed Blair Fraser of Syracuse.

"I've no doubt," she declared, "that the rumor started in his home city. I know him, and we are good friends. His friend, Mr. Gillespie, left for the Klondike two days ago, and I hear that Mr. Fraser may have gone with him. I haven't seen him in the last two or three days.

"Even if I am not going to marry him, I may marry somebody else. Any way, I'm wedded to my art."

TWICE FOILED AT SUICIDE.

Detective Burke Saved Life of Alleged Defaulter Both Times.

After failing in an attempt to shoot himself when he was arrested on a charge of grand larceny at the Savannah Line pier yesterday morning as he was about to sail for the South, John H. Short, thirty-one years old, of 14 West One Hundred and Fourth Street, a bookkeeper, charged with a shortage in his accounts, slashed his throat with a razor as he was about to be measured at Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon, and the second time nearly succeeded in ending his life.

The razor just grazed his jugular vein, and but for the quick work of Detective Sergeant Burke, who snatched the weapon away in time, Short would have accomplished his purpose. Short is now held at Headquarters on the additional charge of attempted suicide.

His wife, who was with him when he was arrested and who accompanied him to Headquarters, was waiting in the Detective Bureau while her husband was taken away to be measured, and did not see his suicidal attempt. She fainted when he was brought back to the bureau, his neck and head swatched in bandages.

Short was formerly employed as a bookkeeper for Herman Sobel, a real estate dealer at 39 West Twenty-seventh Street. He had his employer's complete confidence and collected the rents from all his properties. About a week ago he disappeared, and Sobel says that an examination of his accounts showed him to be more than $700 short.

Detective Sergeants Galvin and Burke, who were put on the case, learned that Short and his wife were to sail yesterday on a Savannah Line steamship, and they were at the pier awaiting them.

When Detective Burke told him that he was under arrest on his employer's charge Short, according to the detectives, drew a revolver from his hip pocket and placed it to his side. Burke grabbed the revolver before Short had a chance to pull the trigger.

BOYS STUCK PINS IN HORSES.

Before They Stopped They Had Wrecked Two Stores in Second Avenue.

Several young hoodlums jabbed pins into two big horses attached to a wagon owned by Emanuel E. Mans, a bottler at 344 East Forty-ninth Street, yesterday. The horses bolted through Sixth Street, and when their wild career was ended they were tangled up in the ruins of two large plate-glass windows and had wrecked the fronts of two stores on the ground floor of an apartment house at 104 Second Avenue. The damage will reach $1,000. The boys escaped.

The horses ran from 204 Sixth Street into Second Avenue, and, running up on the sidewalk, demolished the big plate-glass windows in the establishments of Emil Kiss, a money broker, and E. Kliemer, a tailor. The horses, with the heavy wagon careening after them, crashed first into Kiss's window, and after extricating themselves plunged into Kliemer's establishment.

They stopped in the tailor shop, scattering Kliemer's Fall patterns all over the place and sending a shower of broken glass over the dismayed proprietor. The wreck was even worse in Kiss's establishment. When he recovered from his fright Kiss wept over the ruin of the window. "It will cost me $2,000 for another," he cried. He looked again, and made it $3,000. Kliemer's loss was as great, but he named no figure.

Policemen and bystanders, after much effort, extricated the horses. One was badly cut on one of its forelegs.

PHYSICIAN CHARGES BLACKMAIL.

Says Men Demanded Money After He Refused to Attend Woman.

In a statement made yesterday by Dr. Samuel H. Slote of 75 McKibbin Street, Williamsburg, regarding his appearance before Coroner Jackson in Manhattan on Wednesday, he declared that he was the victim of a number of men who are trying to extort money from him.

Dr. Slote said that two months ago he was called to a house in East Sixth Street, Manhattan, to see a woman, but refused to have anything to do with the case. He heard no more of the matter until Aug. 23, when he was called by telephone to go to the same house. Two men met him and, he says, accused him of being responsible for the serious illness of the woman he refused to attend, and advised him to settle. He refused, and a few days later a man who said he was a lawyer called upon him and demanded money. Again he refused and the next Dr. Slote heard of the case, he said, was when he was summoned before Coroner Jackson.

TOOK HER LIFE IN THE PARK.

Unidentified Woman with "M. K." on Clothing Swallowed Carbolic Acid.

A woman of evident refinement, expensively dressed, and between thirty-five and forty years of age, committed suicide yesterday in Central Park near the Belvedere by drinking carbolic acid. She was found unconscious by Officer Frizzell of the Arsenal Police Station, and removed in an ambulance to the Presbyterian Hospital, where she died. The police were unable to establish her identity.

She was of fair complexion, brown hair, and brown eyes, five feet five inches in height, and weighed 160 pounds. She had a Prayer Book with the initials "J. C. S." in it, a silver-handled umbrella, a gold locket and chain, with "M. K." engraved on the locket; two pocket handkerchiefs marked "M. K.," and a purse containing $1.52. She wore a white sailor hat, a black silk coat, and black silk skirt.

Buried in the Grave He Dug.

Joseph Zalinski, a grave digger in Calvary Cemetery, Long Island City, was digging a grave yesterday when one side caved in, burying him under a mass of earth. Other workmen dug him out and found that he had a broken collar bone and bruises about the body.

The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store

Store Closes Today at 12 o'clock

This, the last, is likely to be the busiest half-Saturday of the season. Not only are our own New York people busy with their Autumn plans already, but the pleasant weather in New York is bringing many thousands of strangers who count WANAMAKER'S as one of the sights of the city. But the few morning hours that we are open will provide abundant interest both in merchandise that has special prices, and in goods that illustrate the coming season's fashions.

Even this whole page can only hint at a few of the things that the store holds to interest you this morning. With stores closed on Monday, don't leave anything forgotten today.

If You Had A FORD CAR This Afternoon—

Think out the plot for yourself. Perhaps you will know the roads you would like to travel and the places you would like to go to.

The Ford is a car that is not expensive in the first place, and it is continuously economical because Henry Ford has learned how to build a car that does not get out of order easily. The double-opposed motor, while giving ample power and making a smooth-riding car, is part of the perfected simplicity that has made the Ford one of the most popular cars of the day.

There are a good many machines that most men could not afford to keep up after the purchase. The Ford makes small repair bills and running expenses, and gives the best enjoyment of Automobiling for the man who does not demand a large Car.

Gilbert Parker's New Book—

"A Ladder of Swords"

"The Right of Way" is still one of the most popular books of the present time. It had a freshness about it that made it stand out as distinctly different from other popular novels.

It is this same originality of character-drawing that will make people enjoy Gilbert Parker's latest book, "A Ladder of Swords." The plot does not run in the same grooves, as the usual popular novel, and you must expect some surprises and some disappointments in your expectations; not in the quality of the story but in the experiences of the characters. It is exactly this unusual treatment, and this not knowing what is on the next page, that give an unusual fascination to Gilbert Parker's work. Price, $1.08 postpaid.

LA SAVOIE ARRIVES WITH CABINS CROWDED

"Garde Republicaine" Brings Music of France to America.

PATRIOTIC AIRS AT THE PIER

Special Envoy to St. Louis Fair and Delegates to Peace Congress Among the Passengers.

With every cabin occupied and at least one of her officers sleeping in a bathroom in order that an additional saloon passenger could cross the Atlantic, the French liner La Savoie, from Havre, got in last night. Among the 554 cabin passengers on the great liner were many distinguished Frenchmen, including M. Alfred Picard, Special Envoy and delegate of the French Government to the St. Louis Exposition.

Also on the liner and numbered among those in the saloon were the seventy-six musicians who constitute the famous Parisian band that is known as the "Garde Républicaine." This organization is also going to St. Louis, and will, on its return from the Exposition city, give a concert in the Metropolitan Opera House.

Not in years, according to the police, has such a throng greeted an incoming liner as gathered yesterday to welcome the fleet French liner. The pier was packed almost to suffocation, while a crowd covered the pavements in front of the pier entrance and stretched across to the opposite side of West Street, a distance of at least two hundred feet.

The majority of the crowd had journeyed to the water front to see the "Garde Républicaine," the members of which, in order to show their appreciation of the vociferous welcome accorded them, rendered the "Star-Spangled Banner" and the "Marseillaise" while the vessel was being docked.

The members of the band were among the first to leave the liner, their departure being hurried in order to make it possible for them to attend a reception that was given in their honor at the Lafayette-Brevoort House last night.

A committee of local Frenchmen, of which Alfred Bars was the Chairman, met the members of the band at the pier and escorted them to the hotel, which was elaborately decorated for the occasion, and where the new-comers met the representative French residents of New York. A dinner at Martin's will be given the organization at 11 o'clock this morning. They leave for St. Louis at 5 P. M. to-day.

M. Picard, the French Envoy to the St. Louis Exposition, is on his first visit to the United States. He said that he would visit President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay the first of next week, after which he would proceed to St. Louis, where he will remain a month. Later he will visit Chicago, Niagara Falls, Boston, and several of the larger Canadian cities.

Among the passengers on La Savoie were the French Senators and Deputies who will represent the French Government at the forthcoming Peace Conference at St. Louis. This party included Senators Forgemol de Bostquenard, M. Gotteran, M. Thullier, Paul Le Roux, Paull Strauss, and Messieurs Armez, Cazanviela, Chastenet, Cochery, Baron de Grandemaison, Janet, Lachaud, Noel, Roch, and Rigal, Deputies, and M. Watel, the delegate of the Department of Public Instruction.

Prof. Sylvain Levi, the distinguished Sanskrit scholar, and Alexander Guilmant, for thirty years the organist of the Church of the Trinity in Paris, who is to play the great organ at St. Louis, were among the saloon passengers. On his return from St. Louis Guilmant will give several recitals in this city.

On La Savoie was the body of Miss Lena Morton, the daughter of ex-Gov. Levi P. Morton, who died several weeks ago in Paris. The body was brought over by two of the Morton servants. Gov. Morton and his other daughters are coming over in the Lorraine, two weeks hence.

Gov. Murphy's Approval of Trotting Races Encourages Idea of Racing Bill.

RIDGEWOOD, N. J., Sept. 2.—The remarks made yesterday afternoon by Gov. Murphy in a short address at the fair of the North Jersey Agricultural Association have aroused interest among horse owners in New Jersey. The Governor was witnessing the trotting races from the grand stand when he was introduced to the crowd by Starter George H. Mills, who shouted through a megaphone:

"The North Jersey Agricultural Association feels highly complimented to know that Gov. Murphy has honored them with his presence. He is not only the Chief Executive of the State, but a friend of horsemen and the speedway. He is a gentleman whom I believe would sign a racing bill such as they have in New York State should the New Jersey Legislature pass such a bill. This bill has done a great deal for the breeding interests in our neighbor State and has made it a most profitably industry for the farmers. Gov. Murphy is a friend of true pleasure and the liberty of sport when confined within the laws."

The Governor, speaking briefly, did not refer to politics, but confined his remarks to horsemen, and said:

"My friend across the track here has said that I am a friend of the horse. I am a friend of the horse and have driven one ever since I was big enough to hold the reins, and I hope that I will never get too old to drive a horse.

"I am sorry that there is not more chance and opportunity to develop the horse in New Jersey. I am glad that the sort of racing here seen is conducted by the Fair Association, and I hope it may continue."

Prominent horse owners in the State are encouraged by the remarks of Gov. Murphy that in the near future a new modified racing law may be enacted in the State.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

In a scrimmage at the starting post in the second race at the Sheepshead Bay race track yesterday Jockey Oscar Sailing, who had the mount on Atwood, was kicked on the lower part of the leg by Canajoharie and so disabled that he fell off the horse. H. Callahan was substituted as rider ot Atwood and rode the race. Sailing, a clever light boy under contract to M. T. Danaher, was removed to a Brooklyn hospital and will not be able to ride again for a month or so.

The one-time first-class race horse McMeekin, seven years old, by Fonso-Daisy Rose, owned by W. M. Barrick, fell dead at the Gravesend track yesterday morning after working a mile in 1:44.

Jockey T. Burns, with engagements to ride in nearly all the races of the day yesterday, canceled his contracts after the first race on hearing of the death of his infant son, only a few days old. One of the mounts surrendered was that on Broomstick, winner of a sensational race later with Hildebrand up.

Jockeys H. Cochran and D. O'Connor were suspended for two days each by Starter Fitzgerald for misbehavior at the post in the second race.

W. Davis, a new comer from the West among the jockeys, made a successful beginning of his career in the East by riding Dekaber a strong finish and winning in good style with the mare. Davis has been riding at St. Louis, where he was rated as one of the best jockeys there.

H. B. Duryea has withdrawn from the partnership in the gelding Bedouin and the horse is now owned in partnership by E. W. Jewett and R. H. Russell. Bedouin was a Futurity starter.

The biggest plunge by the J. A. Drake Stable and its followers since the Saratoga meeting was made yesterday on High Chancellor in the third race, the horse ridden by O'Neil being backed down to 6 to 5 at post time. He broke back in the crowd, however, and O'Neil had to go to the whip to rouse him in his effort to make up the lost ground. High Chancellor then shot to the front like a flash, but the early effort and the bustling he got proved too much for him and he was beaten as the horses turned into the stretch for the run home.

The partnership between Walter M. Scheftel and "Bud" May, the firm that won fame as the owners of the American Derby winner Highball, has been dissolved. After the death of Highball, who was killed after an accident at Brighton Beach in the Summer meeting, the stable played but a small part in racing. The best horses owned by the firm at the dissolution were Major Pelham, Fireball, and Pendragon.

The weights for the Ocean Handicap, one mile, to be run at the Sheepshead Bay track Monday, have been announced by Handicapper F. Hughburgh, with Hermis as top weight with 133 pounds. Dick Wells second with 130 and McChesney 128, Molly Brant 124, and Alan-a-Dale 120 following as the next highest weights.

BROOMSTICK'S FAST RACE

S. S. Brown's Colt, After a Terrific Pace, Lasted to Beat Molly Brant.

TIME BEAT TRACK RECORDS

Stout Old Carbuncle Captured the Turf Handicap at Sheepshead Bay from the Fast Gunfire.

In the fastest mile race of the Sheepshead Bay Autumn meeting, Broomstick, the three-year-old holder of the world's record for a mile and a quarter, was winner yesterday over the stout mare Molly Brant in the most sensational race of a most excellent afternoon's sport. Only four horses ran. Broomstick, with 115 pounds and ridden by Hildebrand, started favorite, with Molly Brant, 119 pounds and ridden by Odom, a close second choice, while Hurstbourne and Sigligh were equal-price outsiders. At the lifting of the barrier Broomstick showed in front, followed by Molly Brant, and instantly the horses separated into two divisions, the three-year-old and the filly going on together, while the other two outrun from the first jump, hung head and head, making practically two races in one. The pace was terrific from the first jump, and the further they went the further Broomstick and Molly Brant went away from the outsiders.

Molly Brant showed in the lead on the turn into the back stretch, and from there on to the bend at the head of the quarter-stretch the rivals alternated in first place, after running at a rate that eclipsed the Sheepshead Bay record for half a mile, five furlongs, and three-quarters of a mile—the three-quarters being run in time that equaled the world's record for the distance held by the champion mile horse Dick Wells.

The terrible pace told on both as they began the last quarter of a mile, but, tired as they were, the stoutness of the Bonnie Scotland breed of colt and filly showed itself, and when whips were drawn and the last call was made both went on unflinchingly under the punishment. Broomstick was in the lead as they straightened out for the run home, and he held his place through the long and bitter fight to the winning post, though Molly Brant hung at his side with desperate courage and kept him fighting to the extreme of his power to the last stride. Both all out and stopping at the end, Broomstick passed the post first by a scant half length, while Molly Brant was ten lengths before Hurstbourne. The fractional time of the race was: Furlong, 0:12 2-5; quarter, 0:23 4-5; three furlongs, 0:35 1-15; half mile, 0:46 4-5; five furlongs, 0:59 1-5; three-quarters, 1:11 4-5, and the mile in 1:39 2-5, no time being caught for the seven furlongs. The second, third, and fourth furlongs each was run in eleven and a fraction seconds, and the time for half mile and five furlongs was close to the world's records, while the three-quarters just equaled the best time ever made for the distance on a circular course.

The veteran of many campaigns, old Carbuncle, of R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, stable, added immensely to the turf laurels he won in his younger days when in the last race he captured the single stake event of the afternoon, the Turf Handicap, at one mile and a quarter on the turf course, beating the once great mare Gunfire, Hurst Park, Gold Money, and Brigand. Gunfire was the favorite at odds on, and, running without a hood, as also did Carbuncle, the mare sprinted to the front at the start and went on at a fast pace, leading into the back stretch by several lengths. Hurst Park first, and then Gold Money, went after her, Hurst Park giving it up before the far turn was reached, while Gold Money hung on and finally wore down Gunfire on the last turn. Into the stretch Gold Money looked to be winning, but after they were straightened out Carbuncle, after having been shut off on the turn, closed again, and, wearing down Gold Money in the last furlong, got up and won by a neck, with Gold Money three lengths before Gunfire. Greater New Yorks Send 37 Men to Bat in Seven Innings.

WILD PITCHING BY CLARKSON

No Game Scheduled for McGraw's Men—Brooklyns Outbat Champions, but Were Beaten.

Only three games were played in the American League and two in the National League yesterday. The New York Americans, by hard and free batting, easily defeated the Detroit team in seven innings, the game being called on account of darkness. A peculiar feature of the contest was that seventy men went to the bat in the seven full innings, thirty-seven for New York and thirty-three for Detroit. Boston and Chicago were victorious in the American League, but Philadelphia and St. Louis were prevented from playing by wet grounds. But two games were decided in the National League, Pittsburg beating Brooklyn by one run and Chicago winning from St. Louis. Summary follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Greater New Yorks Score an Easy Victory Over the Detroits.

Killian, the usually effective left-handed pitcher of the Detroit team, met with a warm reception at American League Park yesterday. Thirty-seven men greeted him at the bat in seven innings, and when the game was called by reason of darkness the Greater New Yorks had made twelve hits, with a total of eighteen bases, and scored twelve runs to six, of which they earned nine, to two for Detroit. Every man but Orth and Keeler made at least one base hit, Ganzel leading with three. The New Yorks only scored in two innings, eight in the first and four in the fifth. Eleven men went to the bat in the first inning and nine in the fifth.

After the second inning, when the Detroits had scored two runs, Clarkson was substituted for Orth. With a big lead for his team the ex-Harvard pitcher received an excellent opportunity to exhibit his true form. For four innings not a hit was made off him, but he gave three men bases on called balls, forcing a runner home, and hit one batsman. Against strong hitters this wildness might have been costly, but the Detroits failed to bat, especially in the fourth inning, when Barrett left the bases filled by being caled out on three strikes in succession.

In the first inning eleven men faced Killian, Dougherty and Keeler twice. Dougherty's high bounding ball got away from Hickman, and Keeler reached first on called balls. Elberfeld filled the bases by a little bunt to first base. Anderson's hit was too hard for Coughlin to handle and Dougherty scored. Then Ganzel bunted toward first and reached there safely because Hickman and Killian expected the ball to roll outside of the foul line. In the meantime Keeler had crossed the plate. Both Williams and Conroy made single hits, each scoring a man. Kleinow cleared the bases and made third himself by a terrific hit to left field. Orth was the first one out, and on Dougherty's long fly to left field Kleinow scored the eighth run. In the fifth inning Ganzel led off with a three-base hit, followed by a single by Williams, which scored Ganzel. Lowe's fumble gave Conroy a base. Kleinow advanced both by a sacrifice hit which Killian fielded. Then Clarkson brought all the spectators to their feet by a long hit between right and centre fields, and Williams and Conroy tallied. Clarkson finally ran home on Keeler's hit to O'Leary, Hickman dropping the thrown ball.

The Detroits scored two runs in the second inning on singles by Crawford and Lowe and a two-bagger by Drill. Then Clarkson went into the box, and a fumble by Conroy, two bases on balls, and hitting a batsman gave the visitors a run. In their last inning seven men went to the bat, Killian starting off with a three-base hit. He scored on McIntyre's effort, the ball hitting Umpire O'Loughlin, who was behind the pitcher. McIntyre was forced out at second by Barrett, and on Coughlin's hit to Dougherty, which the latter fumbled, Barrett scored and Coughlin reached second. Hickman batted to Williams, who threw out the runner at first, but Coughlin got home. The score:

THE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES.

In words of truth and soberness Mr. WILLIAM B. HORNBLOWER puts before the voters of the country some of the weightiest considerations to be urged in this campaign in behalf of the Democratic nominees. Addressing the College Men's Parker and Davis Club, Mr. HORNBLOWER says:

> The candidate of the Democratic Party is the embodiment of sound, conservative constitutionalism. He is not only a trained jurist, but he is by temperament and conviction a believer in and defender of the fundamental principles which lie at the basis of our free Government. Upon his clear-sighted ability and his firm and unflinching loyalty to law we can rely without fear or hesitation.

Are these words of truth too soberly put to interest and convince the voters? They are in the tone and spirit of Judge PARKER'S speech. There is no "big stick" in them; there is no demand for "Rais Uli dead;" there is nothing about snap-shot recognitions of three-day-old insurrections as sovereign States; there is neither the roar of guns nor the smell of saltpetre—not even a sneer at cravens and weaklings. Are the American voters so constituted that those who appeal to their minds and consciences must do so to the accompaniment of thunderous cannonade? Must there be ginger-and-pepper, detonating figures of speech in every argument intended to assist them in making up their minds?

These are serious matters of which Mr. HORNBLOWER speaks, of which Mr. PARKER spoke in his address of acceptance. There is no more serious issue than the Constitution, and the Constitution is an issue in this campaign. This is a Government of laws, not of men. On the Isthmus of Panama and in Pension Order No. 78, President THEODORE ROOSEVELT has made it a Government of men, not of laws. If in these three years when he was President by succession his great stride has taken him so far beyond the safe bounds of the Constitution, if he has already trodden upon so many of the fundamental principles, what might he be expected to do in a four years' term as an elected President?

No voter need be troubled by any such doubts as to Judge PARKER'S course. Upon "his firm and unflinching loyalty to law we can rely without fear or hesitation."

THE STRUGGLE ON THE TAI-TSE.

The most interesting, if not the most striking, feature in the unprecedented conflict waging on the banks of the Tai-Tse River is the marked resemblance in the operations of each army to those attending the first great struggle at the mouth of the Yalu. Everything is on a far larger scale, but that renders the analogy more impressive as showing the character and methods of the contestants. In each case the Japanese threatened and the Russians prepared for a substantially frontal attack. The attack was made with vigor and resisted stubbornly. But the result was determined by a flank movement carefully prepared by the Japanese and skilfully as well as swiftly executed, for which the Russians were unprepared. In each struggle the Russians seem to have hesitated between partial and full resistance and to have proved unable either to withdraw at reasonable cost or to hold the positions they had selected.

The movements on the Yalu were accomplished in relatively short time and covered a comparatively limited area. Those which have preceded and led up to the tremendous series of battles about Liao-Yang have been going on since the last of July. KUROPATKIN has had ample time to decide, if the decision were really in his hands, whether he would adopt the plan of wearing out the Japanese by as stiff resistance as was consistent with safe withdrawal to the north, or would make a final stand in and about Liao-Yang. So far as can now be judged, he halted between the two lines of action and has been outgeneraled and outfought from the beginning to what now seems almost sure to be the end. It is to be noted that during the severe fighting on the south and southwest of Liao-Yang KUROKI, especially since the 31st, has been comparatively quiet. He was plainly completing his preparations for crossing the Tai-Tse. When that was done the advance was made with the utmost energy on all sides of the Russian position, and, with great loss, KUROPATKIN was forced to cross the river also and renew on the right bank, as best he may, the conflict so unsuccessfully waged on the left bank.

At the present writing the outcome is still in doubt. It is still possible that the Russians may have been able to concentrate sufficient force across the river to overcome the Japanese divisions on that side. But there is nothing whatever to indicate that this really has taken place. Pending conclusive information, the more probable inference is that the foresighted, forehanded Japanese have repeated on a gigantic scale the plan of the Yalu and that the immediate result will be as favorable to them. The final result may be of far greater importance, for decisive victory in this case means victory in the year's campaign.

DISAGREEABLE FIGURES.

The Treasury figures for August contain some items that cannot be entirely agreeable to the Administration. At the close of the first two months of the fiscal year there is a change for the worse as compared with last year of nearly $24,000,000. The receipts have declined nearly $8,000,000 and the expenses have grown by some $16,000,000. Of this amount about $6,000,000 is due to expenditures for the War Department and some $7,000,000 to expenditures for the navy, or $13,000,000 in all.

These are not the kind of increases that are usually expected in a time of profound peace. Seven years ago, preceding the Spanish war, we spent less than $85,000,000 on the army and navy. Last year we spent $218,000,000, and so far this year we have been spending $54,600,000 in two months, which is at the rate of $327,600,000 a year. Of course the total will not run so high as that, but it will be something like three times as great as it was seven years since. These are cold facts which the people, in the course of a campaign in which the question of the prudence or imprudence, the peaceful or the bellicose spirit of the Administration, are in issue, can hardly fail to note.

CHEAPER FOOD AND MATERIALS.

The extreme protectionists are scolding Senator LODGE for his recent utterances on reciprocity. They say he is scared unnecessarily by the pressure from Massachusetts manufacturers, and they warn him, in the words of the Philadelphia organ, "that the protected industries of Massachusetts cannot dicker for cheaper foodstuffs and raw materials for their own special advantage without bringing down the whole fabric of protection in wreck and ruin."

There is a good deal of truth in this. Mr. LODGE does seem to have taken counsel of his own private political interests and to be trying to make his own election sure at the risk of some disloyalty to the sacro-sanct Dingley tariff. It would be sheer hardihood if he did not, for the signs have been very threatening. As to the risk to the "whole fabric of protection" from cheap foodstuffs and raw materials, it is unquestionably great. If the needless burden were removed from these two classes of commodities a very large part of the contributions now made to the war chest of the Republicans would be withheld. The Sugar Trust, the Steel Trust, the Beef Trust, the Anthracite Coal Trust, would be driven to change their methods and to try to serve the American consumer instead of the Republican Campaign Committee. But hundreds of industries throughout the land which are now hampered would be rendered more free and hopeful and strong. The fabric of protection would go "down in wreck and ruin," no doubt, and the greed of its pampered favorites would be denied some of the gorging of the past, but honest American enterprise and labor would prosper therefrom. The New Englanders are working in the right direction, and their work is beginning to tell.

A SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT.

At last we have a suggestion from a Republican source for a fair adjustment of the really serious injustice growing out of the suffrage laws in the Southern States and their conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution. Heretofore the only remedy proposed on that side for the inequalities in Federal representation is the enforcement of the Fourteenth Amendment and the reduction of Southern representation. In a very interesting article in the current number of The North American Review Mr. CHARLES W. THOMAS, a lawyer, of Ohio, a Republican in good standing, a member of the Republican National Conventions of 1880 and 1904, and one of the prime movers in the nomination of GARFIELD in the former year, points out that the enforcement of the Fourteenth Amendment would be at once unjust and highly impracticable and suggests a Sixteenth Amendment. This repeals the Fifteenth Amendment, with the second and third sections of the Fourteenth, and enacts the following:

> Section 2—Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to the number of male inhabitants of the age of twenty-one years and over, being citizens of the United States, who are permitted by law in the States respectively to vote for the choice of Electors for President and Vice President of the United States and for Representatives in Congress.
> Section 3—Congress shall have power, by laws uniform in their operation, to fix the time and prescribe the manner of holding elections for the choice of Electors for President and Vice President of the United States and Representatives in Congress, and the power to enforce all the provisions of this article by any appropriate legislation.

The difference between this plan and the present provisions of the Constitution is that the reduction of representation is based solely on restrictions placed upon the right to vote for National officers, whereas the Fourteenth Amendment authorizes reductions for restrictions placed upon the right to vote for State officers as well. Mr. THOMAS does not condemn the Southern States for their action in restricting the suffrage. He says:

> No fair man can fail to see the difficult political problem which these [new] constitutional provisions presented to the people of the Southern States. Their chief complaint has been that the Fifteenth Amendment, if honestly enforced or acquiesced in, takes from the intelligent and property owning class of people in that section the direction of their local affairs, and gives it entirely, or in a great measure, to an ignorant constituency, wholly incompetent to manage the affairs of any Government whatever. Whether they were governed by any proper code of political ethics or not is a question which need not be discussed. They were certainly impelled by considerations of self-preservation; and, while they may be blamed by rigid political moralists, the sound common sense of the people will not fail to recognize the threatening emergency under which they acted.

Mr. THOMAS is deserving of credit for the spirit of these comments, and, as we have said, his proposition for an adjustment has the merit of fair intention. We think, however, that he has overlooked an important provision of the Constitution. He says of his proposed amendment:

> It permits the States, as far as their local elections are concerned, to abridge or deny the right to vote thereat as they see fit, and visits them with no penalty whatever for so doing. It simply provides that their representation in the Electoral College and in Congress shall be as they severally choose to make it by affirmative legislation.

But the second section of the first article of the Constitution provides that members of the House of Representatives shall be elected by electors in each State who "shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature." Voters for Representatives are such because they are voters for the more numerous branch of the Legislature. The latter right confers the former. The State cannot, as we think, give the one without the other. Voting for President and Vice President may be provided for as the Legislature shall direct in each State, but the right to vote for Representatives goes with the right to vote for members of the Legislature.

We welcome the suggestion of Mr. THOMAS because of the unusual candor and fairness with which it is urged. Apart from the difficulty we have pointed out, however, we do not think that the question of the suffrage in the South is likely to be made the subject of further constitutional amendment, nor do we see any way in which it can be profitably treated in legislation, at least at present. The remedy for such injustice as is actually done by the action of the Southern States we think may come from the gradual acquirement by the disfranchised citizens of the qualifications now demanded, either educational or property. That process is reported to be going on in some of the Southern States at present.

IS THE SURFACE CAR DOOMED?

The Manufacturers' Record quotes a well-known mechanical engineer who has had a prominent identification with surface railroad extension as making the following startling prediction:

> In the course of a few years there will not be a street car track in all New York.
>
> Five years ago there were no automobiles. During the last twelve months our automobile output exceeded in value all the locomotives built in America by $20,000,000, and the industry is scarcely out of its infancy. The trolley car and draught horse will go together; there is no room in the crowded streets of our largest cities for either.

There is at least a basis of probability underlying this prophecy. The period "a few years" is safely vague.

The change from horses to cable traction and from that to electric propulsion involved immense cost. Nor is it certain the end has yet been reached. The overhead trolley is admittedly a temporary makeshift, and the time is not far distant when in every large and progressive city the conductor wire and its supporting poles must go. If electric propulsion is still adhered to, further cost almost too great to be calculated will be involved in putting conductors under ground. This done, there is no telling how long that system will last, or when the encroachments upon public property which it involves will have become intolerable. Meanwhile it may very well be that the progress of invention will have established such a relation between street surfaces and motor vehicles not requiring tracks, that street railways cannot easily be financed for still another reconstruction. All these are the possibilities of the not remote future. Something may put the present type of electric car out of business as effectually as that put out of business the cable car, and that, in turn, the horse car. But the immense investments in operating plant and equipment cannot be wiped out and replaced by new devices as costly, or more so, without destroying confidence in surface roads to such an extent that capital will hesitate to identify itself with their vicissitudes. To scrap its power plant and substitute something else would involve problems for the management of even the most important street railway corporation which would account for a great deal of insomnia. The report of the Metropolitan systems which reached Wall street yesterday, showing on an immense volume of business, and just on the eve of the opening of the subway, a deficit of $1,748,043 after dividends, opens the discussion of the whole subject, and may give it a direction quite different from that which it would have taken, say, a year ago.

THE SATURNALIA.

Signor BIONDI'S big bronze of the Saturnalia at Rome under the Emperors has the fatal gift of bringing discord to happy families of artists and others. Its appearance at the exposition in 1900 in Paris was the signal for explosive protests on the part of Italian sculptors, not, of course, on account of any objection to it on moral grounds of a simple sort, such as nudity, but because its artistic quality roused opposition among those who detest realistic work in big sculpture.

Just before it was to be shown at the Metropolitan it was seen by friends of certain Directors, and once more its baleful influence was felt. Without apparent reason for so much excitement these friends and relatives besought the removal of the culprit group, and in violation of an agreement with Signor BIONDI it was at once removed. But it is among the sculptors that the sinister quality of this work of realistic art gets in its finest work, exciting the blood, rousing wild surmises, inciting one alleged sculptor to call the bulk of his comrades a cabal, and another to throw about ugly words like blackguard and liar.

As is well known to all Italians and perhaps to the world generally, the persons who cast the Evil Eye are usually unaware of their horrid gift. It is certain that Signor BIONDI is not to blame; one may regard him rather as the victim of the Frankenstein he has created. It sets everybody by the ears. From its rollicking figures emanates a deadly ether which affects our good Museum Directors and curators, our sculptors and others with a Bacchic madness, causing them to break contracts, utter hoots and actionable words, and invade the classic calm of the morning journals with insinuations, invectives, and delirious accusations, spurring our Italian comrades to patriotic fury and Signor BIONDI to damage suits of colossal size!

Meantime, down in the cellars of the Metropolitan Museum the orgiasts of the Saturnalia are leering through the darkness as they lean this way and that, and enjoying thoroughly, you may be sure, the scandals and sensations they have started in sober-sided little old New York.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—If it be really true, as reported, that "society" at the Canadian capital so dreaded or feared the installation of an "American Duchess" in Rideau Hall that it prevented the appointment of the Duke of MARLBOROUGH as Governor General and brought about that of Lord GREY, the episode is a very curious one. Little light upon its mysteries is thrown by the Canadian papers. A few of them, especially one in Toronto, has expressed a hot antagonism to the selection of the Duke, but its objections consisted merely of ill-natured flings at Americans in general and at the Duke as a political nonentity, which, being a working member of the Balfour administration, with about as good an official record as a man of his age can be expected to have, he almost certainly is not. The better class of Canadian papers in all parts of the Dominion have, however, strongly condemned the campaign against the Duke, and, instead of finding the American birth of his wife objectionable, have declared it an added merit of his selection, since she would tend to draw closer the social ties of Canada and the United States and so, by increasing mutual knowledge, do something toward destroying prejudices that are injurious to both countries. The Ottawa Free Press instances the case of Lady CURZON as showing that Canada had nothing to fear from an American Vicereine, and it severely chides the people who have shown themselves narrow and churlish where England was broad-minded and liberal. The Halifax Herald says that the opposition to the Duke "appears to us to be exceedingly paltry—not to use a stronger term," and The St. John Sun declares that the choice of the Duke would have been a good thing if for no other reason than that it would have done something to remove the impression so common in the United States that an English nobleman who marries a rich American woman is almost necessarily a mere fortune-hunter of no ability or importance. One of the Toronto papers even said that "were the Duke of MARLBOROUGH to be appointed Governor General, the residence of the Duchess in this country might serve a useful purpose in teaching Americans, who in general have a wrong idea of our system of government, how insignificant a part Viceroys or Vicereines play in the matter." There, of course, speaks one of the new Canadians. The matter, however, has ended in a victory for the foes of the Duke—or of his wife—and, with real Canadian opinion in his favor and hers, Americans can only puzzle over the nature of the apprehension which has given to a man who did not want it an honorable post which the Duke of MARLBOROUGH did want and apparently was competent to fill satisfactorily.

—Among the surprises of the war in the East is the frequency with which the opposing forces come to close combat and kill each other with cold steel. It was generally thought by the military experts, we believe, that the enormously increased range and accuracy of modern firearms had rendered such struggles almost or quite impossible, on account of the terribly numerous fatalities that would result from a charge of the old-fashioned kind upon any considerable number of intrenched troops, and it has been confidently predicted that the bayonet would soon be, if it was not already, as useless as the sword. The Japanese, however, have repeatedly demonstrated that, in their hands at least, the bayonet need not yet be degraded to the humble purposes of the shovel—always. Again and again they have rushed through a zone of withering fire, and enough of them have reached the Russian trenches to engage in desperate fights with individual foes, sometimes successfully. And, of course, these attacks by the Japanese had to be met in the same way by the Russians, so that the accounts of the battles have often read much as do those of the civil war, and even of NAPOLEON'S time. The peculiar qualities of the men now in conflict, with utterly reckless disregard for life on one side and stolid valor of an antiquated type on the other, may account in part for the employment of a weapon especially suited to each, but battle is a great leveler of distinctions, racial and other, and all men who will fight to the death are much alike when they get into action. So it seems probable that the day of the bayonet is not so near its end as was supposed, and that for some time to come there will be hand-to-hand encounters as well as those in which the contestants use telescopes in aiming high-power guns at each other.

—Westchester commuters have their doubts about the accuracy of the announcement by the officials of the Union Railway that the establishment of express trolley cars between New Rochelle and Bedford Park resulted in a marked decrease this week in the sale of monthly tickets over the steam line. Of course the new cars form a most welcome addition to the transportation facilities of the district, but for the present, at least, they do not mean much for the Simon-Pure commuters—for those, that is, who make two daily journeys all the year round, and for whom the ride to the city and back is a tiresome thing to be accomplished in the shortest possible amount of time. From New Rochelle the New Haven Road carries such travelers to Forty-second Street in thirty-five minutes for a fraction under 11 cents. The cost on the express trolleys is not a whole cent less, the time even to Bronx Park is ten minutes more, and the cars are more crowded, so that the papers, those precious beguilers of a tedious trip, cannot be so comfortably read. The people whom the new system really will attract and benefit are the suburban women, who will find journeys on them not only interesting, but cheap as compared with the cost of single railway tickets, and the men who live in the suburbs only a month or two in the Summer and therefore are not able to get commutation on as good terms as do the all-year residents. These two classes are large enough, however, to give the express cars all the patronage they can accommodate, and after a while, perhaps, arrangements will be made by which the passengers on them can be transferred directly to express trains on the elevated road or in the subway. Then will the possibilities of the various lines be fully utilized, and a competition be established which will give all the suburbanites a choice between several routes and good service on them all. That will be indeed a happy day for a long-suffering, though far from patient, population, and thereupon the commuters will—be content? Far from it; they will proceed to invent new grievances and deliver just as many impassioned lectures on railway management as they do now.

—Suit brought against an Iowa Congressman now seeking re-election has revealed that the cigars he is distributing among those whom he hopes will be his supporters are of the two-for-five variety. This can and will be taken as significant of much, but of just what is a question at least as delicate as interesting. For the interpretation of the facts will depend on the point of view. It can, for example, be assumed that a Congressman, even in Iowa, gives his actual and potential constituents the kind of cigars they like best, campaign time being one when expenditures of this sort are usually dictated by a wise liberality and in accordance with the carefully ascertained tastes of the people to be pleased. So considered, Representative HULL'S cigar bill indicates that Iowan preference in the matter of tobacco is for that most safely consumed in the open air. But, though many persons are inspired by motives of economy to convince themselves and to tell others that they really like two-for-five cigars much better than those of greater cost, it is not probable that these claims are any more veracious in Iowa than elsewhere, and the chances are that the friends whom Mr. HULL has and wanted will be shocked to learn the quality of his gifts. Everybody knows that a cigar supposed to be expensive is credited by all except rare experts with the good qualities it ought to have at the price allotted to it, and one cannot help suspecting that the Congressman at least allowed it to be assumed that his cigars were at least five-centers. Now that the truth about them is a matter of court record, his position is a rather dangerous one, and he may well await with apprehension the approach of November with its decisive days, particularly as he seems to have been a bit coy about paying even for the two-for-fives. A proud electorate that had smoked aristocratic, or even respectable, cigars might have overlooked a candidate's hesitancy in settling for them, but to have him hang back when they were of the Assistant Hostler's Comforter brand is likely to make a lot of unkind talk about him.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

Japanese Methods Contrasted with Those of the Russians.

From The London Telegraph.

MILAN, Aug. 28.—The correspondent of The Corriere della Saer has been allowed to visit the Russian prisoners interned in the town of Matsuyama, on a small island in the Japanese inland sea. To-morrow the journal will publish a letter describing his experiences. The prisoners are detained in several temples; about 200 stay in each. The correspondent spoke with many of them. All declare that they are well treated and get abundant food, which is cooked by Russian soldiers who were formerly army cooks. A great many wear new uniforms supplied by the Japanese Government, and made by soldier tailors.

The prisoners now number several thousands and enjoy some freedom. The officers are allowed to walk through the town. The correspondent found among the prisoners a Colonel who gave himself up not far from Kai-Ping because his horse was killed, and he, being too fat, was unable to run when the Japanese overtook him. Most of the prisoners were captured at Telissu, the battle of the Yalu, and at Kai-Ping. There is an admirable hospitals service at Matsuyama, where wounded prisoners, both Russian and Japanese, are well cared for.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 16.—A legitimate subject of frequent though ineffectual complaints preferred by the Japanese through the American Embassy here turns on the ignorance pleaded by the officials as to the whereabouts of the Japanese prisoners of war, although only about 300 of them exist in Russia. The Japanese have thousands of Russian prisoners, whose letters to their friends at home they dispatch in any language, and free of cost, giving their relatives full details about them every ten days. It was thus that Admiral Yamamoto communicated all details respecting the commander of the torpedo boat Sergheyeff, and Gen. von Wahl's son received 500 roubles from his father, while other prisoners in Japan are continually obtaining from their friends in Russia Bibles, icons, books, and presents.

The Russians, on the contrary, despite their express promises, have made no arrangements whatever to enable the Japanese prisoners to communicate with home, and hundreds of letters received here are still awaiting delivery, while numerous Japanese families are left in painful suspense as to the condition of the relatives. The American Ambassador has been frequently requested to make inquiries respecting the prisoners, but even the President of the section whose primary duty it is to know where each prisoner is regrets his inability to forward any correspondence on the ground that he does not know where the captives are.

It is desirable in the interests of humanity that some attention should be paid to this question abroad.

New Haven Road's Antiquated Engines.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

President Mellen's order restricting the maximum length of New Haven trains to ten cars is all very well so far as it goes, but the real trouble with the New Haven service, as to time, is due rather to the antiquated and insufficient type of passenger engines in use. All the New Haven passenger engines are of the old-fashioned eight-wheeled variety, none of the heavy moguls or "Atlantic" type engines installed by other large roads to meet the present-day heavy traffic having been put on this service, while many engines now in use have seen their best days long since.

Arsenic in Beer.

From The London Globe.

From the "arsenic in beer" investigations it appears that arsenic in beer comes from impure glucose, and also from malt roasted by coal or coke more or less arsenical. M. Bordas has therefore been led to study certain aliments roasted by coal or coke, for example, chicory. He finds that young children might be harmed by the proportion of arsenic they contain. His results were brought before the Academy of Sciences, Paris.

Ship to Carry 5,000 Tons of Cable.

From The London Globe.

The German Lackabelwerke Gesellschaft are building a new cable ship to lay their transatlantic cable from the Azores to the United States. Her displacement will be over 8,000 tons, and in her four tanks will carry 5,000 tons of cable at a speed of 11 knots.

ODELL AND THE CHAIRMANSHIP.

A Political Scandal Offensive to the People.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statement in your editorial of Aug. 18 that the scandal of the Governor of the State serving as Chairman of the Republican State Committee offends the people is a truth which should be daily published until the offending ceases. Besides, it should be published the truth declared by an eminent divine in the First Presbyterian Church of Syracuse Aug. 14, that the man who desires greater power, political or otherwise, will obtain it not by seeking it, but by seeking to make every act of his life harmonize with the Divine will.

When we consider the fearful responsibility which the taking of the official oath imposes, that of performing the duties of the office to the best of one's ability, we wonder how any man can seek any political office, for that oath cannot be performed without personal, and in many cases great personal, sacrifice. When, then, we see a Governor devoting the time due to that office to party or selfish interests, it, as you truly say, offends the people.

VOX POPULI.

LIBERTY STATUE NEGLECTED.

Surroundings Dilapidated, and Soldier on Duty Sells Souvenirs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Who is responsible for the dilapidated condition of the walls, walks, and about everything else that has to do with the surroundings of the Statue of Liberty? Certainly visitors should not be encouraged to see it in its present condition. It is a shame that this magnificent gift of appreciation by a sister nation should be permitted to go uncared for. The inclosure walls are being allowed to tumble, the grounds are unkempt, the wooden approaches rickety, the bronze tablets in the entrance hall disfigured. One soldier was on duty last Saturday, and as a side issue he sold souvenirs. Now, in whose care is the statue? Surely it is time somebody looked after it. It is to be hoped that no Frenchmen will see it in its present condition.

RED TAPE HELPS GERMS.

Washington Officials Wrangle Over Efficacy of Anti-Typhoid Copper Solution.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—An interminable length of red tape seems to invest the question of whether to use a copper sulphate solution to rid the water reservoirs of Washington of typhoid germs. To-day the returns of new cases of typhoid jumped from ten to twenty-two. The situation is becoming critical. When the outbreak of fever was apparently coming, Dr. Woodward, the health officer, was away on vacation. He was recalled at once and has been making a thorough study of the causes of infection.

The health officer had a long conference to-day with Dr. George T. Moore of the Department of Agriculture, the discoverer of the copper remedy for typhoid infection of water. Dr. Woodward, in common with many physicians, cherishes a conservative view of the efficacy of the solution. He had not given much attention to the matter, and found that there were many phases of which he was entirely ignorant. It is known the District Commissioners are confident that Dr. Moore is not mistaken in his deductions, and they desire to have the reservoirs treated as soon as practicable. The delay while the officials of the Health Office are being converted to the new theory is being criticised in all quarters as a needless exposure of life to the danger of an epidemic.

Dr. Moore is in favor of treating the reservoirs, although it is recognized that the source of danger is not there, but far up stream in the Potomac. Nevertheless the danger to consumers of water, he says, could be minimized by treating the reservoirs.

VENEZUELA PAYING DEBTS.

Settling the Judgments of the Mixed Commission.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Venezuela is doing better than was expected in the settlement of the judgments rendered against her by the mixed commission. Instead of taking ten years to dispose of the claims of the allied powers—Great Britain, Germany, and Italy—it appears that these will now be settled in full in about two years, and if the same amount of revenue continues to be received at La Guayra and Puerto Cabello as at present, even the claims of the non-allied powers will be discharged within four and a half years after the allies are paid.

Minister Bowen has made this matter the subject of a special report to the State Department from Caracas. Up to June 30 last there had been paid to the allied powers 6,880,450 bolivars. They are still to receive 10,398,688, and the non-allied powers, after that is paid, will receive 21,149,441 bolivars.

NOT TO ASSESS CLERKS.

Civil Service Commission's Notice About Campaign Collections.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Acting Secretary of the Treasury H. A. Taylor has sent out a letter to all officials of the Treasury Department throughout the country inclosing a circular order by Gen. John C. Black, President of the Board of Civil Service Commissioners, calling attention to the inhibition against making political assessments on Government clerks and employes. Mr. Taylor directs every Government official in charge of any office in the Treasury service and of any public building to post the order where it can be read, and commands absolute obedience to it.

It does not follow that there is apathy among Government clerks in political matters. Hundreds of them are saving their annual leave to go home in November to vote. From many there will be no doubt voluntary contributions.

CONSUL GENERAL BRANCHI OUT.

Italian King Accepts Resignation of His Representative in New York.

ROME, Sept. 2.—King Victor Emmanuel has signed a decree relieving Signor Giovanni Branchi, at his request, from the post of Consul General at New York. Signor Branchi, however, will remain in the United States as Italian Commissioner to the St. Louis Exposition. His successor as Consul General has not been appointed.

Signor Corte, the Italian Consul at New Orleans, has been appointed Consul General at Denver.

Mormonism in Germany.

From The London Telegraph.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Despite the fact that Mormon emissaries are not allowed to carry on their propaganda in Prussia and Mecklenburg, endeavors are still being made to induce the inhabitants of the other German States to emigrate to Utah. Pastor Zimmer, the clergyman of the Evangelical Church in Salt Lake City, has now addressed a letter to a German college, in which he most earnestly warns his countrymen against listening to these agitators, whom he describes as a curse to Germany and her people. One of the reasons attributed by the pastor for the desire of the Mormons to obtain German recruits is that on arriving at Salt Lake City their capacity for work is exploited in the most barefaced manner, without any opportunity of refusing.

DEFENDS BISHOP POTTER.

Gov. Chamberlain Indorses "Subway Tavern" Scheme.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to put myself on public record in THE TIMES as an approver, defender, and advocate of Bishop Potter's whole course in relation to the "Subway Tavern," so called, as well as an indorser of the scheme or enterprise. I believe I have read about all that has been said on the subject in THE TIMES and other leading New York papers, and also in particular Dr. J. H. Crooker's address or sermon in denunciation.

To say that religion forbids trying this experiment, or any other plan—high license, low license, local option, dispensary, or what not—is stark folly and bigotry. Religion has nothing to do with it, any more than with any other public, economic, legislative, or medico-physiological question. I am heartily tired of listening to clergymen on this topic. They are about the poorest qualified class I know to speak upon it, both from their ignorance and their bigotry. He is a very exceptional cleric, or prelate, one like Bishop Potter or Dr. Rainsford, to whom I would lend my ear for straight thinking on this subject. I would give more for Fulton Cutting's or Robert De Forest's judgment here than for all the preachers in New York City, excluding a few who can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

There are at least two kinds of intemperance known to me. It is hard to say which is the worse. I mean, first, physical; second, moral intemperance. The most intemperate persons, male or female, that I know are the Prohibitionists. Drunk night and day with conceit of exclusive wisdom, with self-righteousness, folly, and bigotry, they charge all who are not of their sect, or are not teetotalers or Prohibitionists, with being friends and aiders of physical intemperance, un-Christian, infidels to duty and to society. I will not be vague. I mean your Funks, your Woolleys, your Babbitts, et id omne genus.

Now Bishop Potter would aid in trying a new way; not a new way elsewhere, but new in New York City. He is forthwith denounced in pulpit and press as badly as if he were a political corruptionist or grafter. I think I know the Bishop well enough, certainly know of him well enough, as a large public figure, to know that none of these things will move him. Let him be patient and of good cheer. The mad dog cry of Prohibitionists and their kind will wear itself out. The passion of the clergy and other sentimental, professional, drunken advocates of the stale old broken-down fad of prohibition will subside. Any mere hue or cry wears its voice out if simply let alone.

Bishop Potter has heretofore greatly offended me by what I call his eleventh-hour, shallow, and, I have feared, time-serving imperialism, or advocacy of our country entering on a career forbidden by every line of our political creed, every voice of our statesmen ancestors, every fact of our history, and every just conception of present National duty; but for all that he is a very noble man, one of the noblest of our day, and at times fearless to a degree. To try to cry him down for associating himself with the "Subway Tavern," or with any other novel or untried method of aiding in establishing physical temperance, is outrageous. Honor to him! Success to his enterprise! Power to his elbow! Say I, with my whole heart and soul. Let the prohibition dogs bark. They have no bite. They are harmless if one is not afraid of them.

It is precisely as moral and Christian to drink a glass or bottle of beer or wine, or even whisky, if done in moderation, as a beverage and not as medicine, as it is to drink water or eat bread. Out upon the insufferable cant of Prohibitionists, total abstainers, and all such fanatics who insist on measuring all others by their own little yardstick or thumb! The thing to do is to promote temperance, not total abstinence; that is, a temperate use, as beverages, of distilled or fermented liquors. To this end the "Subway Tavern" is a hopeful effort. It may not succeed, but it is right to try it, and I pity the narrowness of any clergyman—Dr. Crooker for example—who must hasten in his cocksureness to jump on it. It has succeeded elsewhere; it may succeed here. At any rate, the mess that Prohibitionists have made of their temperance schemes, falsely so called, is enough to make me back the Bishop and bid him godspeed.

Inadequate Rank.

From The Chicago News.

Visitor—Isn't it absurd, making that Russian baby a Colonel?

Mrs. Fetid—Yes, indeed! Why, if he knows the household anything like the way our little Percy does he ought to have been at least a Major General.

Sincere Declaration.

From The Washington Star.

"Mr. Dustin Star says he objects to the idea of dying rich."

"He isn't giving his money away?"

"No. But he is taking particularly good care of his health."

Presence of Mind.

From The Chicago Tribune.

"How did you escape from the burning wreck?"

"At the last moment I threw away my life preserver, and struck out boldly for the shore."

THE RIVER: A CHILD'S VIEW.

O where are you going, River,
And why are you so still?
Your silence frightens me a bit;
I think I'll climb the hill!
I'd rather look at you from there
Or from my window sill.

I like you better when the winds
Come down to play with you,
For then your waves begin to sing
And leap as children do.
They call me to come down to them—
Their games are always new.

But somehow, when I reach the shore,
I grow afraid and fain
Would hasten to the friendly hill
And watch from there again.

HARRIERS' RECORD RUN MINUS AIRY COSTUMES

Dover Athletes Set Out to Give Rockaway a Treat.

WERE WAYLAID BY JOKERS

Halted on Outskirts of Town on Return Trip and Pooled Costumes for Relief Party.

When West Rockaway, N. J., sought its bed last night it wore a smile that was fastened tight. It began in the morning, when the freckled features of the youth of the town cracked into a grin, which stretched itself around on either side until the ends overlapped at the back of the neck and were fastened to the collar button. By noon it had fastened upon the elders of the town, and dusk found it spreading beyond Rockaway into the neighboring villages. When Rockaway's grin had traveled along the highway to Dover, six miles away, among Dover's youth there was much tearing of hair and shaking of fists in the direction of Rockaway.

Upon Rockaway's grin and Dover's gnashing of teeth there hangs a harrowing tale. In Dover is St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, the athletic young men of which have formed a gymnasium class. Some of these youth have taken to cross country running, and nightly canter over the fields and highways roundabout the town, clad in the conventional airy outfits of sleeveless jerseys, cambric knickerbockers, and spiked shoes. All went well with Dover's cross country runners until one of the team on Thursday proposed that they take a gallop that night over to Rockaway.

"Some of those jays over there never saw a real live cross-country runner," declared this youth. "Let's go over and show them what an athlete looks like."

In some way the boys of Rockaway heard of the plans of the Dover cross-country runners and prepared to welcome them to their town. That night the pick and pride of Dover's harriers started on the run to Rockaway. Reaching Wiggin's Bridge, a quarter of a mile from Rockaway, they pulled themselves together for a sprint into the town, to impress the natives with their speed. Suddenly there was a shrill whistle and a score of dark forms sprang out into the road.

With gleeful cries the forms pounced upon the Dover runners, and in less than seventeen seconds the dust of the road was being stirred up by the best scrimmage either Dover or Rockaway had ever seen or heard of.

When it was all over most of the Dover cross-country runners looked unfit for publication. The Rockaway boys had devoted themselves chiefly to separating the Dover youths from what little clothing they had on. That they made a complete job of it there are lots of Dover folks who were out at the hour can testify.

One Dover youth started back for his town protected from the night and the gaze of the public only by his spiked shoes. Another was left with only one leg of his knickerbockers, while a third was wearing merely a look of intense anger. All left most of their clothes behind.

Smashing all the cross-country records Jersey ever owned, the Dover harriers sped along the road to Dickerson's Bridge, a mile outside Dover. There they met the trolley company's tracks and electric lights. All dodged under the bridge, where a shivering council was held. Realizing that the town would be plunged into an uproar were they to enter it as they were, they hit upon a desperate expedient.

One youth contributed the remaining leg of a garment he had started out with, another his spiked shoes, and another a portion of a jersey, until patchwork uniforms were made for two members of the team. These then sprinted into town by way of side lanes and back streets and collected clothes for the others. Then they returned to their comrades, shivering and shaking under Nickerson's Bridge.

Yesterday the angry youths of Dover were talking of getting warrants for the arrest of the festive youths of Rockaway, but when the boys of Rockaway heard about it their grin relaxed just long enough for them to wink their port eye.

"I guess they ain't none of 'em will give it away that he got sent home like a soap advertisement," they declared.

DIED A YEAR AFTERWARD.

Automobile Accident Claimed Two Victims After the Event.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 2.—John Jackson, son of the late Col. Wilbur F. Jackson, died suddenly to-day from heart disease, superinduced by injuries received about a year ago in an automobile accident. He was twenty-three years old and a member of the Baltimore County Club and Athletic Clubs.

In the wreck of his auto in Druid Hill Park he was nearly killed. The shock and anxiety over his condition caused his father's death from heart disease a short time after the accident. Mr. Jackson was a nephew of ex-Gov. Elihu Jackson and Congressman William H. Jackson.

FATAL ELEVATOR ACCIDENT.

Two Persons Killed by Its Fall in Chicago Store.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Two people were killed and six seriously injured by the falling of an elevator in the store of Sears, Roebuck & Co. this afternoon.

The passenger elevator ordinarily used in the building was out of repair, and the freight elevator was used during the day by the customers and employes. While a load of passengers was being carried up this afternoon the cable parted, allowing the elevator with ten persons to fall three stories.

The conductor, Philip Caldwell, was instantly killed, and Mrs. Kate Hayes was so badly hurt that she died this evening in the hospital. Six others who were in the elevator at the time of the accident were injured, but not fatally.

IDAHO TOWN FIRE-SWEPT.

Loss of $150,000 in Business and Residence Section of Gem.

WALLACE, Idaho, Sept. 2.—Fire has swept the entire business portion of Gem and a large part of the residence district, entailing a loss of $150,000, destroying nearly 100 houses and rendering scores of people homeless.

The houses were occupied for the most part by miners, many of whom moved to Gem after the Black Bear conflagration, three months ago.

WANTS CRETE ANNEXED.

Prince George of Greece Advocates Immediate Union.

ROME, Sept. 2.—Prince George of Greece, Commissioner General of the powers in Crete, visited the Foreign Office to-day and lengthily discussed the situation in Crete, expressing the opinion that it was impossible to further delay the union of Crete to Greece, for racial, religious, economic, and political reasons.

TO WED SON-IN-LAW'S SISTER.

Mr. Abrams Is Busy Figuring Out Relationships Now.

Special to The New York Times.

LAWRENCE, L. I., Sept. 2.—Lewis Zernico, a young builder of Cedarhurst, last night made eighteen-year-old Alice Abrams his wife. The bride was given away by her father, Alexander Abrams of Inwood, and the wedding ceremony was performed by her grandfather, the Rev. H. S. Hull, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church in Bloomingdale, N. J.

On Sunday night Mr. Abrams, who is manager of a lumber and brick concern in this place, expects to marry Miss Clara Zernico, his son-in-law's sister. The father-in-law of the prospective bridegroom may tie the marital knot.

It was laughingly said in Lawrence today that Mr. Abrams had swapped his daughter for his son-in-law's sister, and many were the guesses which were made as to the complicated relationships which would ensue. Mr. Abrams, smiling happily at the picture of prospective bliss before him, admitted that he had not figured out just what relationship he would bear his son-in-law Monday morning.

"He is my son-in-law," he admitted, "and after I marry his sister he will be my brother-in-law. My own daughter, so I am told, will then become the sister-in-law of my wife, who will also be her stepmother."

He indignantly denied that there had been any bartering before the two matches had been agreed upon. "Lewis had been courting my daughter for two months before I met his sister," he declared, "and Clara and I have been engaged for more than three months now. I am a very contented man. Lewis is a fine young fellow, and I am proud to have him both as a son-in-law and a brother-in-law. There has never been any opposition on my part to his marriage with my daughter, nor has my courtship of his sister been opposed by him or any of his people."

Last night the villagers were wondering what kin Mrs. Zernico would be to her father's children by his coming marriage. Pigs-in-clover and the 15 puzzle were not in the same class.

ORDERED SPAHR FROM STERN.

Sailor Found Him There Thrice Just Before His Disappearance.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Regarding the disappearance of C. B. Spahr of King's Bridge, N. Y., N. W. Ordway of Brooklyn, his traveling companion, made the following statement to-day:

"Accompanied by Mrs. Ordway and myself, Mr. Spahr left New York July 7 for Trieste. From Trieste we went through Austria and Germany to the Rhine, and thence to Brussels, which we left on the morning of Aug. 30 for Ostend. During our journey Mr. Spahr suffered from fits of nervous depression, but they gradually became less frequent.

"At Ostend, where we remained three hours, he evinced considerable interest in the sights. We eventually took the steamer Prince Albert for Dover. We had obtained some New York papers, and while crossing the Channel Mr. Spahr discussed in a natural manner the news contained in them.

"Occasionally he would leave us for a minute or two, and then return. We missed him soon after we passed the Lightship, not far from Dover, and immediately instituted a search. We informed the Captain when we arrived at Dover, and he began a thorough search for Mr. Spahr, but found no trace of him.

"A sailor reported that he had seen Mr. Spahr standing at the stern at just about the time we came to the Lightship, but subsequently he rejoined Mrs. Ordway and myself. The sailor said he ordered Mr. Spahr from the stern three different times. No person saw him after he left us the last time. Mrs. Ordway and myself saw nothing unusual in his demeanor."

Mr. and Mrs. Ordway sail for New York on the Cunard Line steamer Aurania Sept. 6.

EMINENT MAN STOLE COPE.

Such Is the Dying Message of the Suicide Rocchiggiani.

ROME, Sept. 2.—Beside the body of Rocchiggiani, the photographer who was arrested Aug. 17 in connection with the theft from the Cathedral of Ascoli of a priceless cope, now in the possession of J. Pierpont Morgan, and who afterward committed suicide by hanging, was found a paper on which was written with a burned match:

"I am innocent. Search for the guilty, but when he is found he will be too powerful to be touched."

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The Italian Embassy here said this afternoon that no instructions had been received from Rome respecting the recovery of the ancient cope, stolen in 1892 from the Cathedral of Ascoli, Italy, purchased by J. Pierpont Morgan and now on exhibition in the Kensington Museum.

The Embassy nevertheless is making inquiries here, but it says the question of demanding the return of the cope is complicated by the fact of Mr. Morgan's American citizenship and the presence of the cope in England. What compensation should be offered to Mr. Morgan is another feature of the case which is also embarrassing the Italian Government.

The Embassy suggests if it is Mr. Morgan's purpose to exhibit the cope he could have done so as well in Italy as in England or America.

RUSSIA STILL TO BAR JEWS.

The Proposal of the United States Will Not Result in Negotiations.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 2.—It can be stated on high authority that Russia will decline to enter into the negotiations proposed by the United States on Aug. 21 in regard to the unrestricted recognition of American passports.

In accordance with the law of the Russian Empire only foreign Jews of specified classes, including merchants having business connections in the country, are allowed to enter Russia, but quite a liberal policy has been pursued in making exceptions to the rule where legitimate reasons were given. The exceptions, however, are seldom made in the cases of Russian Jews who have been naturalized abroad. The inhibition is not against the United States alone, but extends to the Jews of every country. The basis of the recent proposition was the joint resolution of Congress on April 23.

Count Matassich-Keglevitch.

BOY BANDITS FORGOT AND STOPPED TO PLAY

"Buttsy" Betrays Comrades to Jersey City Police.

COSTUME TRUNK HIS UNDOING

Ran Into Arms of Police When He Came Back to Actor's Apartment for More Fun.

Three boy bandits were arrested in Jersey City yesterday after a series of adventures well worthy of the dime novel heroes whose deeds they strove to emulate.

Their leader, "Wallgy Bill," is fourteen years old. His real name is John McGovern, and in the neighborhood of his home, 253 Newark Avenue, he enjoys the reputation of having been born with four teeth. His trusted lieutenant, Herman Angert, is but nine years old. Herman's parents live at 424 Monmouth Street. His two ears, which stick out straight from his head like horns, have earned him the sobriquet among his fellows of "Buttsy." The third member of the trio, Jerry Shapiro, is eleven years old and lives, when he feels like it, at 33 First Avenue.

Early in the Summer, the police say, the three boys met nightly in a vacant house near McGovern's home and mapped out a campaign of house robberies. They went about the work intelligently and systematically, first getting a list of persons who were out of town in Jersey City in a neighborhood in which the game was apt to be worth the powder, and then shrewdly inquiring concerning the time when they were apt to return home.

The trio did not get down to business till early in July. They selected for their maiden effort the home of M. T. Connelly, a wealthy contractor, at 251 Eighth Street. Things did not work very well in this case because "Buttsy," according to the revelations since made to the police, insisted that he had not been treated "on the square."

In this instance entrance was effected through a grating before the house. This grating was held down by a rope on the inside. The three youngsters were able unitedly to lift this grating, so that "Buttsy," who is very slight in build, could crawl down into the cellar between the grating and the sidewalk. This he did successfully, but he had given indications of weakening, and so when he was once down in the coal hole his two companions cut the rope. "Buttsy" was thereby compelled to enter the house itself whether he wished to or not. He did so, but during the argument which ensued after he had managed to let his two pals in, a policeman hove into view, and the three were satisfied to escape without plunder.

The next effort they made was at the residence of Mrs. Ellen Stone, 271 Fourth Street. In this instance marks on the doors, one of which was finally pried open, tell plainly that the youngsters used chisels and jimmies to advantage. They turned this house topsy-turvy, and came away with a considerable quantity of silverware and clothing as booty.

Their stellar appearance which they now speak of as having afforded them most pleasure, was at 273 First Street. According to "Buttsy," who first squealed, entrance was gained into this house by throwing a brick, carefully wrapped up in a Turkish towel, through a window in the cellar. The doors leading to the various rooms were all locked when the youngsters got in, and they began to look about the house for tools.

On the lower floor lives Edgar Arrington and his family, and on the top floor Mr. and Mrs. John Mayon. Mr. Mayon is a comedian in "The Wizard of Oz" company, at present in Denver. The boys found tools in the apartments of the Arrington family. With them they broke open everything in the house which promised plunder, roaming from cellar to garret. They found a large quantity of silverware and costly dresses which they packed up, ready for removal. They also broke open and packed a trunk on the top floor when the eye of "Wallgy Bill" lighted upon it. When the lid had been forced open, wigs, false mustaches, make-up powder, grease, and paint galore, and costumes of the most entrancing splendor were uncovered.

For several hours, according to the confession of "Buttsy," the main purpose of the visit to the house was forgotten, while tragedies of "Dead-eyed Dick" and kindred heroes were enacted in costume. For hours the boys gave themselves up to enjoyment of the "make-believe," and only when the dawn broke did they remember that they had entered the house to rob it. They got out, too, safely, but in their exit some one of the trio dropped a blue silk skirt, which led to their undoing for the following morning a neighbor saw it lying there and notified the police. Although the burglars had been heard of before, there were evidences about the house's interior that the job had been committed by boys, the first intimation the police got that the burglars whom they were looking for were not adults.

It was evident to the detectives that the boys had had such a good time in the house that they might want to return again, particularly as some costumes and wigs still remained in the trunk, and a detective was placed on guard in the house. The detectives assigned to the case were Detectives Gallagher and Prescott, and the latter was rewarded on the second day of his watch by seeing "Buttsy" approach the house alone and attempt entrance again. As "Buttsy" quickly confessed when made a prisoner, the arrest of his partners was a comparatively easy matter.

The boys were arraigned yesterday before Judge Higgins in the First Criminal Court of Jersey City, and charged with four different robberies. Each was held in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Among the articles alleged to have been stolen by them which have been recovered is an American flag and a punching bag.

BRADY WANTS SONGS PROTECTED.

Believes Producers Should Share in the Publishing Rights.

William A. Brady is up in arms against the music publishers and the composers who seek to sell off songs which he thinks should properly belong to the producers. A song called "Sally," which is being sung nightly at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, is the bone of contention. N. Harris Ware wrote the music and now is about to sell the publishing rights without consulting Mr. Brady. Mr. Brady said:

"When a man buys a musical piece and pays twenty or twenty-five thousand dollars for it and also pays the author and composer royalties every week he should share in the publishing rights. I wouldn't be surprised if certain managers got together in a few days and formed a co-operative society to protect themselves. I think Congress ought to be petitioned for a few corrections in the international copyright law."

NOTES OF THE THEATRES.

William G. Jones Drowned.

He was for years manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company in Philadelphia, and when The United Press was organized he became day manager of the head office in New York. He was with The Associated Press from 1887 to 1902. His home was in Brooklyn.

PLUCKY WIFE GOT A DIVORCE.

Cooked on an Oil Stove Until Her Husband Got Fortune, Which He Lost.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 2.—The divorce granted to Elene S. Clarke of Atlanta from her husband, Charles S. Clarke, in New York, has brought into prominence the fact that Mrs. Clarke stuck by her husband when he was ruined through a decree by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court about eight years ago.

His mother's wealth was estimated at $700,000. Through litigation she lost all. Her son had gone South not long before and had brought the pretty Atlanta girl home as his bride. When the crash came she cheered him up and said:

"Never mind, 'Chick'; we'll get a few rooms and I can cook on an oil stove."

This they did in Allegheny, and the couple occupied two rooms. Mrs. Clarke did much to help her husband during his poverty. When the big steel corporations began combining the Clarke mills in Pittsburg, which practically had been out of business, resumed operations, and the trust bought them. The plant sold for $800,000, and Clarke's share of this was about $400,000.

He purchased a newspaper plant and failed, bought another and lost more money, and made a third and fourth venture without success. Then he took a position on a local newspaper. After receiving his share from the sale of the Clarke steel plant he sold the oil stove his wife cooked on in Allegheny, and about the same time he lost his plucky wife.

GAVE UNCLE SAM MONEY AND GOT INTO TROUBLE

Col. Clem Innocently Returned $423,000 to Treasury.

REBUKED; MAY BE RECALLED

Red Tape Prevents Its Restoration to the Army, and Congress Will Have to Act.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—For virtuously turning into the United States Treasury $423,000 as the "unexpended balance" of an appropriation made to enable Gen. Wood to subdue the Moros, Col. John M. Clem, famous in the civil war as "The Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," and now Chief Quartermaster of the Philippine division, has gotten himself into so many kinds of trouble that he has lost count.

He has already been severely reprimanded by Quartermaster General Humphrey, but the matter is not stopping there. He is likely now to be relieved of his present duties and recalled to the United States. Gen. Humphrey has told him that his action is disapproved and would not have been taken if he had had a proper conception of his duties.

Meanwhile the War Department is in as many kinds of trouble as Col. Clem. It wants the money back and can't get it, because the Treasury officials will not return the windfall. The Treasury sympathizes with the War Department and would like to hand the money back, but dare not do so. Congress will have to appropriate the money all over again. The echoes of Clem's deed will not cease to resound until the beginning of the next fiscal year.

The appropriation amounted to $550,000 and was for the transportation of Gen. Wood's troops. The sum was appropriated in view of an expected general outbreak by the Moros. As the outbreak did not occur Col. Clem handed over the $423,000 left without asking Gen. Humphrey whether or not the money was needed.

It was needed—badly. When the Quartermaster General levied on his assistant for some of it he was shocked to learn that it had all gone into the coffers of the Treasury Department. The War Department asked the Treasury Department to return it, and the Treasury replied that if it did so its legal right to take such action might be questioned and somebody might have to account for it. The Treasury informed the War Department, in correct official language, that it did not purpose to get stuck.

Whereupon the War Department poured out the vials of its wrath on the head of the luckless Clem. With every new demand for money which it has not got, and which the Treasury Department does not want but will not give up, the wrath of the War Department rises. It has got to have that $423,000, but the only way to cut the red tape is for Congress to pass a new appropriation, and Congress will not meet until December, and the Army Appropriation bill it will pass will not take effect until July 1 next.

IN THE SHOPS.

All the Labor Day implements are in bonbon boxes. There are trowels, mallets, planes—these are the most realistic of all—and any number of things suitable for Monday.

***

One of the biggest bonbon boxes, which might be used for Labor Day, as it represents the work of the farmer, is a big oval green and white striped squash. It is as big as a watermelon, will hold four or five pounds of candy, and costs $1.50.

***

"The "Fast Mail" is in the shape of a locomotive, and is a foot power vehicle for the boy. It is very realistic in appearance, the round boiler in front, with a bell as big as a cow bell on top, and a pipe, which is a whistle and worked by a lever from the inside. There is a wheel for steering, and the driver sits in the tender and works the treadle. All this for $13.50. There is an "Irish Mail," which is less impressive.

***

Entire fleets of war vessels of different sizes, some with little soldiers on duty on deck, are to be seen. The vessels, all different in style, are seaworthy and work with a magnet. One of these fleets includes nine vessels.

***

A khaki suit for the small boy, one of the smartest of those for Summer wear, is made with bloused knickerbockers and a three-plait blouse. Worn with it are a white collar and black tie and black patent leather belt.

***

One of the dark-blue Summer service suits for girls is made with the skirt plaited in groups of three half-inch tucks. There are two broad plaits meeting in the centre of the front of the waist, and these help to form three side plaits on either side. There is a short opening in the front, perhaps five inches down from the stock, and this laces up with red cord, which ties at the top. The stock and cuffs are of red, trimmed with gold braid and buttons.

***

A pretty little suit for the young girl is made of pink flowered lawn, the design small and set in narrow stripes defined with hairlines in black. The frock is trimmed with square medallions of embroidery, one row set around the lower edge of the skirt cornerwise, forming points which are edged with narrow Val lace. Two rows of the lace-edged medallions trim the waist. A pretty feature of the gown is the belt and bands which finish the short sleeves. The bands are of the same material, and run under one thickness is pink ribbon, which shows through, and at the waist wide ends are brought out and tie in a bow at the back.

***

The use of veils for hats has brought out veils which are only draperies. They are pretty and in excellent colors. There are bright-colored flowered designs in black, with dots in the pattern raised a little, and with inch-wide plain black silk edges. Other pretty veils are black and white; white on black or black on white, and none is more than translucent.

***

One of the new hats has a tulle crown with a felt rim. This crown differs from those of the Summer hats, having the effect of being tufted in big tufts. The hat is dark brown, and on one side are crimson dahlias and buds.

***

An ermine-crowned turban has black velvet forming the rim on one side and on the other is a long white ostrich plume.

***

A new green Fall suit has a plaited skirt and a short cut-away jacket, with a short basque. A pretty effect is given by a narrow band of stitching, which outlines the figure inside the edge of the jacket, rounding down from the front to the back like the lines of an Eton. This coat is worn with a double-breasted waistcoat of one of the light-colored vestings. It has brass buttons in two rows.

***

A mass of green cannon balls finish a mode-colored hat, trimmed with green. These balls, which are beads half an inch in diameter, outline the edge of the hat, and are set in a big pyramid at one side looking like the patriotic decorations in some of the parks.

Miners' Lawyer Leaves Colorado Again.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Col., Sept. 2.—Frank J. Hangs, attorney for the Western Federation of Miners, who was deported from this district on Aug. 20 and who returned yesterday, went out again on the afternoon train to-day to avoid another deportation. He said that Sheriff Bell had notified him

SOME N. P. CORNER HISTORY.

Mr. Sternberger Testifies in the O'Leary Suit Against His Firm.

The absence of Samuel Sinn, member of the Stock Exchange firm of Sternberger, Furd & Sinn, who is now in Europe, will probably result in a postponement of the $55,000 suit brought against that firm by John J. O'Leary of Chicago. The latter alleges in his complaint that the firm closed him out without using proper judgment in the Northern Pacific corner on May 9, 1901. The case is on before Philip E. Reville as referee.

Mr. Sternberger, the first witness, testified that he thought Northern Pacific was worth $400 a share on May 9 because it sold at more than that on the floor. He said he was not surprised to see it sell so high. He would not be surprised at anything in Wall Street. He had owed Kuhn, Loeb & Co. 200 shares of stock, had tried to settle, and had been told to deliver the stock.

"I made the fight of my life to get the stock to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. on that day," he said. "It was impossible to borrow the stock and so it became necessary to buy it in." Mr. Sternberger said that he had no knowledge as to the disposition of the stock. He went both to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and to J. P. Morgan & Co. without getting the stock. When he got back to the Stock Exchange the price had gone up to $1,000 a share. When asked to explain how it happened that the stock went back to $400 after being quoted at $1,000, he said:

"When it became known the stock had advanced people who had stock in their possession took special trains to New York in order to sell. It brought the stock out of the strong boxes."

Mr. Sternberger further testified that he did not believe there was any conspiracy to force up the price of the stock, and that he had tried his best to protect his customer.

HARRIMAN GETS THE ALTON?

Purchase Would Give Union Pacific Direct Route to San Francisco.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—A local newspaper to-day says: The Chicago and Alton Railway has passed to the ownership of the Union Pacific. By the purchase of the Alton line by the Harriman interests, Chicago now has another line of railway in direct connection with San Francisco.

It is at Kansas City that the Union Pacific system connects with the Chicago and Alton, and, getting control of the latter company, Harriman and his associates are given their through route from Denver via Kansas City or completing the direct route from Chicago to the Golden Gate.

DEATH OF DR. HENRY TUCK.

Was for Years First Vice President of the New York Life.

Dr. Henry Tuck, who was First Vice President of the New York Life Insurance Company for nearly twenty years, died yesterday at his Summer home, Seabright, N. J., after a long illness, in which he was a great sufferer.

Dr. Tuck spent nearly his whole professional life in the service of life insurance, and his judgment in all matters to which he gave special attention was implicitly relied upon and seldom at fault.

Born in Barnstable, Mass., in 1848, he received a classical education at the Boston Latin School and at Harvard University, graduating in the Class of 1868. After studying medicine for three years, he was appointed Acting Assistant Surgeon in the army, and as such saw service during the closing months of the civil war. He completed the regular course of medical studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons of this city, and after spending a year in a general hospital in Vienna, Austria, he began practice in Boston in 1872. After ten years' general practice, during which time he became a member of the principal medical societies of Boston, one of the physicians of the Massachusetts General Hospital, and served as medical examiner and medical referee for three life insurance companies, he was elected Medical Director of the New York Life Insurance Company. He became a Trustee of the company in 1878, Senior Medical Director in 1883, Second Vice President in the same year, and Second Senior Vice President on the election of Mr. Beers to the Presidency in 1885. For twenty-seven years Dr. Tuck has been a directing force at the Home Office, and both in the Board of Trustees and as an executive officer, he has given to the company the best services of a trained mind, a large experience, and a whole-hearted devotion to its highest interests.

Personally Dr. Tuck endeared himself to his associates by his frankness of manner, sincerity of speech, and his friendliness to every one who served the company. Looking back upon such a life, upon its labors and its successes, we bid our friend and associate farewell with the feeling that he fully merits the encomium, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

He had been in poor health for some time and went to Scranton early in the Summer. Mr. McAllister was about thirty-five years old, and is survived by a widow.

GRAND CIRCUIT TROTTING

McKinley Establishes New Competition Record for the Mile.

DRIVER R. A. SMITH SUSPENDED

One Thousand Dollars Awarded to McDonald by Stewards as Result of Roger Williams Race.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 2.—The Grand Circuit meeting at Narragansett Park closed this afternoon with four well-contested races. The attendance was the largest of any meeting on the circuit this season, speculation was heavy, and the racing averaged with that at Readville and Buffalo in point of time made.

At the conclusion of the day's sport the judges announced their decision regarding the taking out of R. A. Smith from behind Sweet Marie in the Roger Williams race of last Wednesday and substituting Alta McDonald, who won the next three heats and the race, by suspending Smith for the balance of the season and awarding to McDonald the sum of $1,000, the same to be taken from the winnings of the mare.

The most important racing of the day was the 2:06 trotting class. Ferenc was an even choice to win, and took the first heat quite easily. Boone then relinquished his seat behind McKinley in favor of Alta McDonald, who, in hot finishes, captured the next two heats and the race, and in the second heat equaled the best trotting time in a race of the year—2:06¼—made by Sweet Marie. The time of the race established a new three-heat record for the season of 1904, formerly held by Oxanam.

Zambia was first picked to win the 2:19 trotting event, but at the post Horetta jumped into public favor, closing even against the field. The heats were distributed among the four horses entered until Kyrillis finally captured the seventh heat and the race.

Day Book was favorite in the 2:16 pacing class, and won with little trouble.

In the 2:10 pacing, Red Bird sold even up and won in straight heats, though hard driven at the finish of both heats.

The local meeting was brought to an end to-day, as the special races planned for to-morrow did not attract sufficient entries.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Strong; Call Money Easy, 7-8@1 1-4 Per Cent.

A Cheerful Closing Before the Holidays—Stocks Strong Upon Improving Expectations Regarding Grains and Cotton.

Yesterday's news was of a sort to inspire reluctance to stand short over the holidays, and converted many into the belief that the better plan was to go long in hopes of better rather than lower markets next week. The produce markets were weak, despite another influential estimate reducing the crop yield to about 500,000,000 bushels, with great particularity of detail. The Street in its present temper will simply have nothing to do with such ciphering, and the Granger stocks were conspicuously strong. The news regarding the cotton crop was so much better that the cotton market was thrown into something like a bull panic, the price yielding nearly 50 points upon the Government's report of condition at 84.1, or a deterioration during August of 7 points. Thus the Agricultural Department and The Journal of Commerce agree regarding the extent of the deterioration, which may therefore be taken as established. But the Government report leaves the condition, after deducting the deterioration, at the point where The Journal begins to do its subtracting. It is necessary to speak with uncommon respect of the Government estimate, since it is published on the same day with the final figures of last year's crop, justifying the Government's prediction of a short yield with admirable accuracy. It is therefore established with as much certainty as any future event admits that the cotton crop is above the decade's average over an unprecedented acreage, with fair promise of a record yield. The largest crops hitherto known were the result of applying lower conditions to smaller acreage. In this market also there was forthcoming a pessimistic forecast by an operator less influential than recently. With scarcely the passing tribute of a smile the price was marked down nearly $2.50 a bale, and the Stock Exchange felt the cheering influence.

A cut in steel tubes was announced, and other steel products beyond doubt will be cheaper next week. Pennsylvania's gross for July was reported $1,514,800 smaller, and expenses were reduced only by $1,028,100. Metropolitan reported that its deficit had increased fivefold. These are samples of facts which the market cared nothing for. Declines can be found along the list, but Pennsylvania and Metropolitan were not among them. The advances among the grain and cotton carriers were conspicuous, and can be spoken of more cordially for reasons already mentioned. General Electric was conspicuously strong among the specialties, and there were notable movements among high-class properties never dealt in except for investment purposes. The volume showed little gain, but the tone contrasted strongly with what had been expected of the market on the eve of a holiday in which developments might be unpleasant. The average expectation clearly is of a different sort.

The bond market was of a similar character. There was large but reduced activity in Consolidated Tobacco 4s, resulting in a much better distribution of business. Japanese 6s, Rock Island issues, Wabash, and Steel continued prominent. The currency movement indicates a smaller loss of reserve than last week, as the demand for cash from distant points was largely recouped by receipts of cash not wanted in near-by centres. With the surplus in its present swollen condition the proportions of the movement are insignificant.

GENERAL BUSINESS ITEMS.

Fifteen Boston local and suburban express companies conducting business within a ten-mile radius of that city have been united under the name of the Boston and Suburban Express and Parcels Company, with a capital of $500,000.

Imports of dry goods at the Port of New York increased $98,837, as compared with the previous week, and $43,455, as compared with the corresponding week last year.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Much Evening Up of Accounts Over the Holiday—Sharp Advance in Metropolitan.

Much evening-up on the part of traders in anticipation of the three-day holiday went on yesterday, but in so far as this involved the sale of long stock it had relatively little effect upon prices. In addition to transactions of this kind there was some shifting of speculative accounts from one stock to another. The heaviness of Rock Island and the decided strength of Reading was said to be at least in part due to such operations. Report had it that Jacob Field sold out about 15,000 shares of Rock Island and bought as much Reading, and on the day's showing he had all the best of the deal. Reading, after being apparently under pressure in the early trading, advanced sharply and closed with a net gain of 2½ points, while on the other hand Rock Island lost a small fraction.

No Profit in Selling Metropolitan.

Selling on bad news seemed as profitless an undertaking yesterday in the case of Metropolitan as it has been on any recent occasion. The sharp upward movement in that stock which followed the publication of the annual report showing a deficit for the year five times as large as the deficit of the previous year, was entitled to be considered bad news, even though the earnings for some time had been admitted to be bad, and the action of the stock seems to offer one additional incident in support of the rule to buy on bad news. The 2⅛-point net gain was explained on the ground that there had been too many sellers, and that their covering was responsible for the strength of the stock. Metropolitan Securities showed a net gain of 1⅞ points.

Baltimore and Ohio Growing in Favor.

Baltimore and Ohio is apparently becoming more of a favorite, and the Street is hearing predictions of higher prices for it. It was helped yesterday by the sharp advance in Reading, in which Baltimore and Ohio has such a large interest. Talk of a dividend on Reading common is becoming more confident as the stock advances, and the point is made that such a change for the better in the position of Reading common would be of much advantage to Baltimore and Ohio. Banking interests closely identified with the latter property are said to be confident of the stock advancing still further.

London Large Buyer of Steel.

New high records for the present movement were recorded in both issues of United States Steel, the common selling up to 13⅞, and the preferred to 63½. London was a large buyer of both stocks yesterday, taking probably 20,000 shares. These purchases were partly offset by sales of various railroad stocks, the amount bought on balance being probably 10,000 shares. Predictions of still higher prices for Steel preferred are made without regard to the present price situation in the steel trade, it being said that the stock has been selling too low, even admitting that at the moment the trade situation is not good.

More Currency Shipments.

A shipment of $500,000 gold to South America is to be made to-day by the National Bank of Commerce. Through the Sub-Treasury there was transferred yesterday to Chicago $250,000, to Cincinnati $200,000, and to New Orleans $100,000, a total of $550,000. There was a slight increase in the call money rate yesterday, explained by the fact that loans made yesterday carried over until Tuesday, but nevertheless the bulk of the day's loans were placed little if at all above the previously prevailing rate of 1 per cent. Within the past two days five months' money has loaned at 3½ per cent., showing that even for loans extending to the end of January there is very little tendency toward higher rates. In the monthly circular issued by the National City Bank attention is drawn to the possibility of another call on the National banks for a part of the public deposits held by them, although it is thought improbable that such a call will be issued before the coming election.

BETHLEHEM STOCK BOUGHT.

Ship Trust Reorganization Work Will All Be Done Soon.

Receiver James Smith, Jr., of the United States Shipbuilding Company sold at public auction in Newark yesterday the 300,000 shares of Bethlehem Steel stock held by the Shipbuilding Company. The only bidder was a representative of the Standard Trust Company. The upset price of $7,500,000 was bid. The sale was made pursuant to agreement between Chas. M. Schwab as chairman of the Reorganization Committee, by which Mr. Schwab will retain control of the Bethlehem Company.

William Nelson Cromwell of the Reorganization Committee said later that the sale of the other properties would all be made by the first week in October, in accordance with the reorganization plan. These properties will be turned over to the new corporation to be formed.

CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

Discussing the movement of currency this week The Wall Street Journal says:

The reported movements of currency this week indicate a loss of $2,127,100 in cash held by the banks.

They received from the interior $4,905,700 and sent to the interior $5,010,800, of which there was transferred through the Sub-Treasury $500,000 to Chicago and $100,000 to Cincinnati. The loss to the interior was $111,100.

Receipts of new gold were $4,071,900, namely: $872,600 on New York Assay Office checks, $2,347,300 on San Francisco Mint checks and telegraphic transfers, mostly for Japanese and Australian gold, and $852,000 on Seattle Assay Office checks for Klondike gold.

Gold exports were $900,000 in coin, $500,000 to Argentina, and $400,000 to Cuba.

There was also sent to Cuba $1,158,000 in currency, completing the payment of the first installment of the $35,000,000 Cuban loan.

Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $17,245,100, payments by banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption fund, &c., were $21,276,000; the loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $4,029,900.

The total loss, to the interior, $111,100; by gold exports, $900,000; currency to Cuba, $1,158,000; to the Sub-Treasury, $4,029,900, was $6,199,000. Deducting the gain of $4,071,900 new gold, the net loss was $2,127,100.

The loss to the interior is much smaller than was indicated by the transfers through the Sub-Treasury. Shipments of currency to the West and South were practically offset by receipts from near by and Eastern points. Compared with former years shipments to the interior for the week were $720,000 more than in the corresponding week of 1903, $740,000 less than in 1902, and $1,260,000 less than in 1901.

The large loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was chiefly due to transfers of Western internal revenue collections by draft upon New York correspondents. Customs collections were $3,359,700, a daily average of $559,900, comparing with a daily average in the preceding week of $491,000. Pension payments were $678,000, comparing with $1,671,000 in the preceding week.

The Sub-Treasury received from banks and sent to Washington for redemption $3,500,000 mutilated currency.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—Money was abundant in the market this afternoon, and the rates were easier, discount sympathising.

The tone on the Stock Exchange was fairly cheerful, but operators were undecided, partly in view of the narrowness of business. Consols hardened on monetary conditions and investment purchases.

Americans opened irregular, and the movements were slight. The market mainly was fairly firm. The position of Wall Street, however, handicapped operations. Prices closed firm.

Foreigners were variously affected by the war in the Far East. Japanese advanced. Imperial Japanese Government 6s of 1904 were quoted at 96⅝. Continentals receded.

Closing prices: Consols for money, 88 3-16; consols for account, 88⅝; Anaconda, 4; Atchison, 83; Atchison preferred, 100⅝; Baltimore and Ohio, 89⅜; Canadian Pacific, 127⅜; Chesapeake and Ohio, 39⅞; Chicago Great Western, 15⅜; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, 159½; De Beers, 19; Denver and Rio Grande, 25⅝; Denver and Rio Grande preferred, 78⅜; Erie, 29½; Erie first preferred, 66⅜; Erie second preferred, 42; Illinois Central, 132; Louisville and Nashville, 124; Missouri, Kansas and Texas, 22¼; New York Central, 125⅝; Norfolk and Western, 70⅛; Norfolk and Western preferred, 92½; Ontario and Western, 32; Pennsylvania, 64½; Rand Mines, 10⅝; Reading, 31½; Reading first preferred, 83; Reading second preferred, 87¾; Southern Railway, 29⅝; Southern Railway preferred, 97½; Southern Pacific, 68¼; Union Pacific, 101½; Union Pacific preferred, 96; United States Steel, 13⅞; United States Steel preferred, 64½; Wabash, 20; Wabash preferred, 40; Spanish 4s, 87½.

PARIS, Sept. 2.—Trading on the Bourse to-day was calm, and stocks were heavy, particularly Russians. At the close prices were firm. Russian imperial 4s were quoted at 93.40, and Russian bonds of 1904 at 507. The private rate of discount was 1¼ per cent.

Three per cent. rentes, 98 francs 35 centimes for the account. Exchange on London, 25 francs 25 centimes for checks.

BERLIN, Sept. 2.—Prices on the Boerse to-day improved in most departments. Russians fell half a point.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Concerning conditions of trade Dun's Review says:

Confidence increases each week as a larger proportion of the agricultural yield is placed beyond the reach of injury and industrial undertakings are less interrupted by labor controversies. It is not to be expected that the business world will suddenly abandon its conservative attitude, purchases being still restricted largely to such needs as are clearly discerned, but there is evidence of a growing disposition to provide for more remote requirements. In many lines, particularly dry goods, stocks have been reduced much below normal, and Fall shipments are expanding in a healthy manner. Distribution of merchandise is providing the railways with a large tonnage, preparations are being made to handle the enormous crops, and the gross earnings of all railways reporting for three weeks of August show a gain of 1.4 per cent. over the same time last year.

***

Failure returns for the month of August contain many gratifying features. Manufacturing liabilities of $3,030,570 were smaller than in any other month since June, 1903, and compare with $7,748,685 in the same month last year. Trading insolvencies involved $3,728,468, a slight increase over last year's figures, but less than in any month since September, 1903. Numerically, there was a large increase, chiefly among small grocers and butchers, and, excluding the few failures for over $100,000 each, the average trading loss was $4,533, which is less than in the corresponding month for any year since the ten preceding years. The month's total was swelled by a few real estate and brokerage failures, of which there were only 20, but the liabilities amounted to $3,-722,400. While these had little effect upon the general business situation and were in no way representative of conditions during August, they swelled the aggregate to $10,491,468, against $10,877,782 in the same month last year.

Bradstreet's comments on the situation as follows:

Further expansion in Fall trade is noted at leading centres, and the last week in August has seen the largest business done since the opening of the season. Crops have made fair progress. Collections have been nothing to boast of—backward, in fact. Money has remained easy and therefore very favorable to stock speculation, despite enlarged demand from the interior and shipments to leading Western and Southern points. Bank clearings comparisons are now with the low-water period a year ago, hence, while showing decreases from July, August returns mark a slight gain over that month last year. Failures were more numerous in August than in July in nearly all sections, and a few large suspensions of manufacturing concerns have swelled liabilities beyond those in August a year ago. Recently preceding conditions are maintained in railway earnings returns, which show slight gains over last year.

***

Bank clearings for the week ended with Sept. 1 aggregate $1,804,283,309, 3 per cent. larger than last week, and 8 per cent. over last year. Exchanges outside New York City total $715,907,416, a fraction of 1 per cent. over last week, but a loss of 8 per cent. as compared with last year.

Wheat, including flour, exports for the week ended Sept. 1 aggregate 1,830,511 bushels, against 1,084,333 bushels last week, 3,131,839 bushels this week last year, 6,278,299 bushels in 1902, and 4,406,064 bushels in 1901. From July 1 to date the exports aggregate 12,464,662 bushels, against 28,210,128 bushels last year, 43,063,596 bushels in 1902, and 59,167,570 bushels in 1901. Corn exports for the week aggregate 710,582 bushels, against 763,546 bushels last week, 968,741 bushels a year ago, 21,196 bushels in 1902, and 550,876 bushels in 1901. From July 1 to date the exports of corn aggregate 5,273,581 bushels, against 9,194,036 bushels in 1903, 775,765 bushels in 1902, and 9,249,897 bushels in 1901.

PHILADELPHIA TRANSACTIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2.—Reading and Philadelphia Company were the bright particular features of the local market. As a result of pool operations in the last named, the price advanced 1⅝ points. The buying of Reading was said to be of the same character as has been apparent in the stock for some time past, but the Street is not able to determine whether it is or is not for purpose other than mere speculation. Lehigh Valley advanced ⅛ in sympathy. Lit Brothers stock was up ½, Germantown, Morristown, and Chestnut Hill Railroad 1, and several other issues scored small fractional advances on very small trading. Total sales, 31,190 shares; $37,100 bonds:

RESCUERS AND RESCUED HURT AT UP-TOWN FIRE

Woman of 89 and Her Daughter of 60 Saved.

FIRE ESCAPES LADDERLESS

Man Who Rushed in from Street Badly Burned in Rescue Work—Tower Hits Wagon.

Fire escapes that were not real fire escapes made trouble yesterday afternoon in a blaze in the flat house at 167 East One Hundred and Eighth Street. Two tenants of the house, Mrs. Goldie Perria, who is eighty-nine years old, and her married daughter, Mrs. Jane Marrando, were painfully burned. Louis Seaman of 294 Alexander Avenue, and Policeman Ozab of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station were also badly burned while doing valiant rescue work.

The building, which is four stories high, and one of a row of the same height, has no fire escapes in front. In the rear there are fire escape balconies, but no connecting ladders.

Seaman was passing the house with Harry Nathan and Bernard Lanitsky, when he saw smoke coming out of the house from a fire that had started on the second floor. Women soon rushed to the windows and shouted for help. The three men ran into the house at 165 and up to the roof and over to the skylight of 167, which they smashed. The smoke and flame had already shot to that part of the building, and drove the men back. Then they heard people from the rear of the houses on One Hundred and Ninth Street shouting to them.

"They're on the fire escapes," was the shout. Seaman and his companions rushed to the rear of the roof and saw the ladderless fire escapes below crowded.

"Let me down," said Seaman to the others, and they lowered him as far as they could over the roof. Then he dropped to the fourth floor fire escape. All those who could had rushed to the rear and gained the fire escapes, which connected with the houses next them. There were still others inside. Seaman had swung on the ledge and then threw himself in toward the house, landing fifteen feet below on the fire escape. The crowd cheered him. Hurrying into the house, Seaman found Mrs. Perria, unconscious and her clothes afire, on the floor of her apartment. Mrs. Marrando, her daughter, was half choked by smoke.

Seaman lifted the aged woman, and dragged her to the fire escape. Her daughter, though sixty years old, followed. Seaman was cheered again as the crowds saw him with the two women, and he dragged Mrs. Perria over the fire escape to 165 and into the rooms there. Mrs. Marrando followed. The people in 165 had run out and Policeman Ozab had run in to see if any one needed aid. He found Seaman with his hands badly burned. Ozab seized Mrs. Perria and carried her out to the street and to the basement of 165, where she and her daughter were cared for. He and Seaman had their injuries dressed at the same time. Seaman was almost exhausted and he and Mrs. Marrando staggered out of the building almost blind. Friends took care of them all.

Policeman Baumbach ran into 167 to help, and found a young man who was on the same errand, locked in the bathroom on the first floor. The three doors leading to it from various apartments had spring locks, and in looking for persons to be helped he had locked himself in. He was shouting for help when Baumbach discovered him. The policeman had to smash a little window to get the young man out. They then jumped from the rear window.

Just as the fire was put out the granddaughter of Mrs. Perria, Mrs. Goldberg, and the latter's daughter, a baby, and great-granddaughter of Mrs. Perria, reached the scene, making four generations of the family to meet in the basement where the injured women were being cared for.

The firemen were free in their criticism of the ladderless fire escapes.

Water Tower 3, just after coming out of its quarters at One Hundred and Fourteenth Street and Madison Avenue to go to the fire, encountered a horse and buggy of the Lion Brewing Company in charge of Nicholas I. Hone of 324 East One Hundred and Fourteenth Street. It was said that a woman and baby were in the carriage, and that the woman, who was driving, became confused and drove the horse on the wrong side. The truck, it was said, hit the carriage, throwing the man, woman and baby out, but they were not hurt. The carriage was partly demolished and the horse's right hind leg was bruised. Hone denied later that there had been anyone in the carriage with him.

SEARCH LED TO POTTER'S FIELD.

Sister Found Body of Her Suicide Brother There.

After searching for three months for her brother Charles, who left his home at 263 Hamburg Avenue, Brooklyn, on May 31, declaring he would find work or never come back, Miss Mary Schmidt learned yesterday that he had been buried as a pauper suicide in the Potter's Field on Hart's Island.

Schmidt drank carbolic acid in Cooper Square Park on July 10. He was a tailor by trade, but was out of work for a long time.

EX-3009 GETTING RICH QUICK.

With Tearful Yarn He Goes Begging in Messenger Boy's Uniform.

Five months ago there was a vacancy in the ranks of the messengers of the Postal Telegraph Company, and the get-rich-quick financiers received a new recruit. There were no tears shed when No. 3,009 said good-bye to his companions, and his absence was forgotten until reports came in that a young man wearing the uniform of the company had been collecting various sums in the down-town office buildings on the strength of a tearful yarn about "Elmer Herring's mother." Then it was recalled that No. 3,009 didn't return his cap and uniform when he left.

The ex-messenger is Frederick Avery, twenty-one years old, of 266 Fortieth Street, Brooklyn. Policeman Gunshinan of the Old Slip Station caught him at 92 William Street yesterday afternoon just as he had finished canvassing the building. He had a subscription list a yard long with 300 entries, showing that he had made the cap and uniform pay pretty good dividends. Avery always told the same story—that Elmer Herring was dead and that the widowed mother did not have enough money to bury him.

Ex-No. 3,009 was not at all bashful about it after he had pleaded guilty and was held for trial in the Bronbs Police Court.

"Der graft was all to der good," he said. "It was a bum day when me didn't hang 'em up for more dan $40. It was a shame to take der coin from some of dem blokes."

Here are some of the names on the subscription list: Gordon Roberts & Co., Poel & Arnold, Export Corporation, (Limited,) T. G. Smith & Co., Stanley Electric Manufacturing Company, Great Northern Paper Company, Atlantic Fisheries Company, Aetna Life Insurance Company, and the New Haven Clock Company.

CLUE IN ACCUSING LETTER.

Attempt to Avert Suspicion Causes Brother's Arrest for Robbing Sister.

John Mendes, nineteen years old, was arraigned before Police Justice Manning in Jersey City yesterday, charged with breaking into the apartments of Mrs. Hannah Szminiski, his sister, at 322 Sixth Street, on Aug. 16, and stealing jewelry valued at $300. Mendes was not suspected at the time, but a week later his sister received an anonymous letter giving what purported to be the name and address of the robber. The name proved to be fictitious, and the address was a vacant lot. In looking for the writer of the letter the police secured specimens of Mendes's writing, and an expert decided that he had sent the letter. He was traced to Easton, Penn.

A detective who was sent after him arranged with the police of that city to get him across the river to Phillipsburg, N. J., by a ruse, so as to avoid the necessity of extradition proceedings. The plan succeeded, but the Easton police were chagrined to find in Mendes's possession several articles that they allege had been stolen in their own city.

Mendes refused to go back to Easton, preferring to be taken to Jersey City. He was held to await the action of the Grand Jury, and the Easton police were consoled with a promise that Mendes should be sent back to them when Jersey justice is through with him.

McCAULEY ARRESTED AGAIN.

Bostonian Has New Charge Against Mercantile Agency Man.

Thomas N. McCauley, the first President of the International Mercantile Agency, just after having been discharged, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, on a charge preferred by the Crown Prosecutor of Hamilton, Ontario, was arrested on a charge of forgery in the third degree, in an action instituted by Frank Wood of 352 Washington Avenue, Boston. In an affidavit Wood alleges that on July 15, 1902, he bought 5,000 shares of the stock of the International Mercantile Agency, giving his signed check to cover the purchase price.

Although Wood instructed in his letter for the purchase of the company's stock, he alleges that he got McCauley's personal stock, and the check, drawn on the Phoenix National Bank of this city, was indorsed and cashed by McCauley.

McCauley was bailed in $5,000 on the new charge. Assistant District Attorney Garvan said that there was ample precedent for retaining McCauley, despite the extradition proceedings.

BANKER'S SON KILLED.

Henry McMahon Found with Skull Fractured in Areaway.

Henry E. McMahon, thirty-six years old, a son of James McMahon, who is President of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, in this borough, was found with his skull fractured yesterday morning in the front areaway of his home, 350 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, and died while being taken to a hospital. McMahon was employed as solicitor by the Equitable Life Assurance Society. His father and other members of the family live at 87 McDonough Street. They, with Mrs. Henry E. McMahon, are stopping at Richfield Springs for the season.

The police learned that McMahon was out with some friends on Thursday night and returned to his home at a late hour. Apparently he lighted a cigarette upon reaching his floor and sat upon the stoop railing to smoke. It is supposed that he lost his balance and fell backward into the areaway, a distance of ten feet.

BROOKLYN PREACHER WAYLAID.

Dr. Hageman Accuses Bedford Gang Member of Attacking Him.

The Rev. Dr. S. Miller Hageman of 88 Madison Street, Brooklyn, got a warrant in the Myrtle Avenue Police Court yesterday for a young man who, he declared, had committed an unprovoked assault upon him. The accused young man is said to be a member of the notorious "Bedford Gang."

Dr. Hageman said he went to the corner of Bedford Avenue and Madison Street to mail a letter, and while returning to his home was attacked from behind by one of the gang, several of whom had been standing on the corner. The minister was almost knocked down by a blow on the ear. When Dr. Hageman turned to defend himself his assailant ran.

ACCUSED OF HOTEL THEFTS.

Employe of the Marie Antoinette and Gilsey House Arrested.

Lavina Hunter, a domestic employed in the Hotel Marie Antoinette, and Joseph Lemon were arrested last night, charged with the larceny of $40 worth of lace curtains and other household furnishings from the hotel. Manager A. M. Wooley of the hotel reported to the Tenderloin Station several days ago that the hotel had lost many articles, and the arrests followed. The woman lives at Huntington, L. I., and Lemon at 129 West Thirtieth Street.

Two bellboys employed in the Gilsey House, Twenty-ninth Street and Broadway, were also arrested by the Tenderloin police, charged with robbing guests. They said they were John Perry of 213 West Thirty-eighth Street and Joseph Madison of 240 East Twenty-eighth Street. Detective McIvor had been staying at the hotel for three days collecting evidence. In both cases the police recovered part of the alleged stolen goods.

"Why?" That's a relief. We don't get many like that," said the Controller. "We'll put it in the Conscience Fund."

CONDITION OF COTTON FAR ABOVE AVERAGE

Eleven Points Higher Than the Mean for Ten Years.

LOCAL RING IN AN UPROAR

Heavy Selling Follows the Publication of Government Report—Trade Expects Crop to Break Record.

The publication of the Government report on the condition of the cotton crop was made the occasion of great excitement in the cotton pit yesterday. The knowledge that things were likely to happen on the publication of the report had spread far and wide, attracting a large crowd of spectators, consisting to a large extent of women. They were treated to something of a spectacle, for immediately after the publication had been made the ring became a surging mass of arms and heads, while the yelling of the brokers trying to outdo one another in their efforts to unload went up in one great roar. This turmoil kept up for nearly half an hour when the noise slackened a bit, but toward the close the excitement became once more intense. For a while it seemed as if everybody wanted to sell at once and prices fell away, but at the lower level covering caused a reaction, so that the close was slightly above the lowest.

The break would probably have been more pronounced if expectations of a bearish report had not been discounted to some extent. As it is the condition reported by the Government was nearly 11 points above the ten-year average, the figures being 84.1 for this year and 73.2 for the average of the last ten years. As the acreage this year is larger than ever before, the trade figures that the crop will be a record breaker. The biggest bears on the floor of the Exchange had not dared to guess that the condition would be better than 83, while the bulls had expected not more than 78 or 79. The condition has deteriorated only 7.5 per cent. since the report for July, and if cotton survives the remainder of the critical season the result will be a bumper crop. Of course ther is still frost and damage by weevils to fear, but unless this is greater than in prevous years a big crop seems assured.

One of the remarkable features of the report is the condition of Oklahoma, which promises to be one of the great cotton producing States. There the percentage is 96, or one point better than it was on July 25. The complete report is appended below.

The range of prices yesterday was as follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.		Net Chgs.
September	10.73	10.37	10.51	10.52	—38
October	10.63	10.23	10.27	10.28	—48

The close was steady.

GYPSIES DETAINED AT ISLAND.

Twenty-five Cases of Measles Found in Band of 200.

A band of 200 gypsies, who say they are bound to Winnipeg, Canada, to start a colony, are being detained at Ellis Island. They arrived from Liverpool on the Carpathia Thursday night and were landed yesterday.

They are dressed in all the colors of the rainbow, and some of the women wear gold pieces as ornaments. All of them have money and twenty-five of the children have measles. José Michel is the leader.

"We are not gypsies, but just a band of rovers," he said.

The Carpathia brought 1,950 steerage passengers. This large number was due to the fact that the Umbria, arriving last week, had such an unusually large number of cabin passengers that the steerage quarters had to be taken up with baggage and freight and no steerage passengers were carried.

The vessel reported that she passed La Bretagne bound out yesterday. When off Fire Island La Bretagne lost a man overboard, but he was rescued after a two-hour search.

ALIMONY CLUB HAS TEST CASE.

Member Wentsch Tries to Leave the Ludlow Street Jail.

The Alimony Club, whose members are lodged in Ludlow Street Jail for failing to pay alimony to their wives, held a meeting yesterday morning in the jail and passed resolutions declaring that they would not attempt to fight for their liberty until the case of John B. Wentsch is disposed of by the Supreme Court. Sheriff Erlanger had employed counsel for the club to ascertain whether they were unjustly sent to jail. The first case taken was that of Wentsch, who was been confined in the jail since July 21 last. Wentsch's case was argued yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Clarke on a motion made by Wentsch's counsel for an order to show cause why he should not be permitted to purge himself of contempt.

The lawyer told Justice Clarke that there were many women who took great delight in keeping their husbands locked up in jail. He said that Wentsch had been a prosperous contractor and had two jobs on hand that would have netted him $20,000, when he was suddenly thrust into jail because he had been unable to pay up $114 alimony. After having been in jail a while Wentsch borrowed $114 from his brother-in-law and paid up the alimony claim. That very day his wife's counsel appeared with a new order which she had obtained for the payment of more alimony and Wentsch was sent back to jail. He had been in jail ever since, counsel said, but was willing and able to pay up the accrued alimony on the installment plan in case he was released.

Justice Clarke wanted to know why the "prosperous contractor" had not saved up some money. The lawyer said that the trouble was that Wentsch was practically driven out of business because he was not a union man; then, when he got into the union, the building strike began.

"Well, he had better stay in jail until I decide what to do in the case," said Justice Clarke, and Wentsch was taken back to Ludlow Street, where, as a Committee on Liberty and Pursuit of Happiness he reported progress.

BOY SHOT BY POLICEMAN DEAD.

McGowan Was Firing at Negro—Stray Bullet Struck Hallihan.

John Hallihan, the sixteen-year-old Brooklyn boy wounded by Policeman James McGowan of the Atlantic Avenue Station, who was shooting to stop a fleeing negro, died yesterday in St. Mary's Hospital.

The policeman attempted to arrest John Chester at Albany Avenue and Bergen Street, when the negro hurled a paving stone at him, striking the policeman in the chest. The negro ran, and the policeman followed. Finally McGowan began to shoot, but the negro got away. Returning from the chase, the policeman found young Hallihan lying unconscious on the sidewalk at Dean Street and Troy Avenue.

The boy was one of six children, and lived with his parents at 1,526 Dean Street.

HERO'S CHILDREN LOSE $500.

Lawyer and Real Estate Man Involved and District Attorney Will Investigate.

Mrs. Mary E. Hardy of 482 Eighth Avenue had summoned to the Tombs Court yesterday Joseph White, a real estate dealer of 536 West One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street and James A. Douglas, a lawyer connected with the firm of Isaac Fromme, to explain to Magistrate Pool a transaction involving $500 and the transfer of some Staten Island real estate. Mrs. Hardy said she was the aunt of the two orphan children of Timothy Callan, a fireman who was killed a few years ago with his horses in trying to avoid running down a crowd of school children.

Callan died penniless and a newspaper of this city raised by subscription the sum of $500 for the children, whose mother was dead. It was first given to the grandmother of the children and when she died a few months ago she gave the money in trust to Mrs. Hardy.

Mrs. Hardy said that before she got the money she had been adjudged bankrupt. She said she owed White $400 on a judgment and transferred to him some Staten Island property. In order to get the property back, she said, she gave him the $500. Instead of retransferring the property to her, she says, White transferred the property to Douglas. When she asked for the $500 back, she said, Douglas told her that it had been used up for services in the case.

Magistrate Pool called Assistant District Attorney Kresel and asked him to take charge of the case and see if a complaint could be drawn to cover the transaction, so far as recovering the $500 for the benefit of the children.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

TO celebrate, next January, in Paris and at the House of Molière, the three hundredth anniversary of the publication in Madrid of "Don Quixote," Jean Richepin has written a play having the hero of Cervantes for its principal personage. Presumably the supply of Cervantes and "Don Quixote" articles and essays in the December and January American and English magazines will be equal to the demand. Perhaps we may have a Cervantes celebration or two, with speeches. In London they are already arranging for a notable "Don Quixote" dinner with John Morley in the chair. Prominent students of Cervantes in England are Frederic Harrison, Cunninghame Graham, Martin Sharp Hume, Fitzmaurice Kelly, H. E. Watts, and Norman MacColl. Perhaps we might include Sir Henry Irving, whose portrayal on the dramatic stage of the Knight of La Mancha was so lifelike and quite in the Cervantes spirit. But if the play Richepin has written is no better than the scraps of the drama by W. G. Wills which Irving used it will not long survive to honor the memory of Cervantes.

We find an entertaining story about a once widely known book in The Cincinnati Enquirer. Two great-granddaughters of Dr. Horace H. Hayden, it seems, discovered in the Mercantile Library of St. Louis a copy of their great-grandfather's "Geological Essays," for which they offered to pay $500. The offer was declined, as the books in the library are not for sale. We fancy that by judiciously using the weekly Book Exchange column of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW Dr. Hayden's granddaughters might be able to secure a copy for a much smaller price. "Geological Essays; An Inquiry Into Geological Phenomena to be Found in Various Parts of America," was published in Baltimore in 1820. There may be many copies still [illegible] and died in Baltimore in 1844. He was a school teacher and an architect before he took up the study of dentistry after his twenty-first year. He became a successful and famous dentist. He studied medicine, too, and served as an army surgeon in the war of 1812. His favorite avocation throughout his life was the study of geology. Though he wrote books on dentistry and other subjects, his fame as an author is chiefly associated with his "Geological Essays," which Benjamin Silliman said "should be used as a textbook in all our schools."

The latest monthly number of Mr. Mosher's dainty Bibelot contains a selection of the poems of the late Richard Hovey, who died early in 1900, aged thirty-five years. Hovey was a poet, and it may be true, as some one of his friends once prophesied, that his name may be counted "as one of the three chief names in American poetry," the others being not Bryant or Longfellow or Lowell or Whittier, of course, but Poe and Whitman. We fancy that Hovey's poetry is good enough to stand the test of even that kind of enthusiastic praise. He may not be accounted by posterity one of the three or even one of the ten "great American poets." He may never rank as a poet with Prof. Woodberry and Mr. William Vaughan Moody, whom The Chicago Dial calls the greatest of living American poets. But these few lyrics now happily reprinted by Mr. Mosher have the charm, the melody, and the dignity of true poetry. Mr. Laurens Maynard, who contributes an introduction to these verses, says that, if his life had been spared, "it is an open question whether he could ever have achieved more perfect poetry than some of the verse which he had already written."

The September number of The Cosmopolitan is unique among magazines. Its pictures, which are many and excellent, and its articles, twenty-five in number, deal with a single subject, the Louisiana Purchase Exhibition at St. Louis. There is but one writer, Mr. John Brisben Walker, the owner, editor, and publisher of the magazine. Mr. Walker explains that in the numbers of his magazine devoted to the Chicago and Buffalo fairs the articles were written by various writers, with the result that they did not give any idea of these fairs as a whole. This time he has had the whole exposition described from a single point of view. Mr. Walker went to St. Louis late in June with two stenographers and a photographer, and devoted eleven days and nights to the work. The result is 128 richly illustrated pages of graphic description.

Some of our readers profess themselves unable to comprehend Mr. Kipling's charming short story "They," published in the August Scribner's. We can scarcely undertake to interpret Kipling in his moods of fantasy. Generally people who fail to understand, or complain of not understanding such things, are so devoid of poetical fancy and imagination that to argue with them is hopeless. The reader must interpret "They" for himself. The right reader will hit upon the right reading, and we should have inferred that nine out of every ten who read it would thoroughly comprehend it. Yet we find a student of literature and critic of poetry like Mr. Clement Shorter complaining in The London Sphere that he needs a guide to the mysteries of "They."

Mr. Israel Zangwill in The Reader compares Italian humor (professional and commercial) with the German, French, English, and American variety. He finds the humor of the Italian comic press less decorous than the British humor of London Punch, but nearer to that than to the downright and persistent indecency of the French. There is less fun made of drunkenness in Italy than in England, but the mother-in-law joke, the humor of mendicants, and the traditional stupidity of the rustic serve the same purpose the world over. JOHN MARSHALL'S LIFE.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW by

PROF. WILLIAM E. DODD.

THIS new edition of Flanders's Life of Chief Justice Marshall is a challenge to American historical scholarship. If one bears in mind the unprecedented revival in the study and writing of American history in recent years it will appear remarkable indeed that this work of the late fifties of the nineteenth century is equal to the best we have on Marshall. Yet such is the case and the publishers have probably not misjudged the public nor underestimated the value of other "lives" of the great Chief Justice in giving us again this fifty-year-old book.

It is rather remarkable that John Marshall, the man who, after Washington, did more perhaps than any other to make the United States Government what it is, should never have found an adequate biographer. It is a commonplace to say that he almost "made" the Supreme Court—a court admired the world over. The influence of his semi-political decisions during the first thirty years of the last century was probably of more importance than all the laws of Congress during the same time. Yet we have no complete and exhaustive "Life" of Marshall. Jefferson, his life-long opponent and enemy, has had some three hundred books and pamphlets written about him; Clay, the smooth politician of the time, has received much attention, and Calhoun and Webster and Jackson have all been well portrayed. Even second and third rate leaders have stood better with the biographers and publishers.

What is the cause? Marshall was a Virginian who for forty years opposed every thing the dominant party in the State favored. He was a pronounced Nationalist, who saw in the States rights views of his neighbors, under the spell of Jefferson's influence, ever-approaching disaster to the Union and to Virginia. This attitude naturally made him unpopular as a public officer in an era when Jefferson was the first leader in the country. And, again, Marshall, like one or two of his contemporaries, seems to have tried to cover up his tracks in history. His papers were not carefully preserved, and what few escaped the waste-basket were afterward burned along with the old Marshall home in Northern Virginia. So there arose no Virginian Boswell during the latter years of Marshall's life; and since his death the task of writing his life, however desirable such a work might be, has not been sufficiently attractive to engage the attention of able and well-equipped investigators, except in the line of short essays and addresses.

The real significance of Marshall's life to us and the world is to be found in his life-long struggle against "particularism," the creed of Virginia. Soon after Marshall entered the legal profession he settled in Richmond, and it was but a short while before he became so popular as to be able to "carry" his immediate section even when the majority of the electors were disposed to vote against his party. In the campaign for the election of delegates to the Virginia Convention, which was to accept or reject the National Constitution, no other Federalist could have won in Henrico County. And it was he who, next to Madison, did most when the convention assembled to win the majority which made the present American Nation possible. And again in 1799, when Washington thought the country was in imminent peril because of the prevalence of Jeffersonian ideas, it was Marshall who saved the Richmond Congressional district to the Federalists.

After his elevation in 1801 to the Supreme Court bench the fight was renewed; in every great decision Marshall and the Court held that the Union was a Nation and not a confederacy. Before the close of the war of 1812 the Chief Justice was made the object of bitter attack in Virginia, and these attacks did not cease until the close of his life, though personally Marshall was popular to the end, and Virginians to-day rank him among their great heroes.

The cause of some of the bitterest opposition in his own State was his decision in 1815 that the Virginia Supreme Court could not constitutionally construe a treaty of 1783, that it had no right whatever to interpret its clauses, even though the ownership of large tracts of Virginia lands was thus involved. Consequently of the State courts. The Supreme Court [illegible] the Virginia courts [illegible]

ANCIENT MUSIC.

Hermann Smith's Description of Little-Known Instruments and Less-Known Art.*

THOUGH Mr. Hermann Smith writes of Egypt and other ancient lands picturesquely, sometimes sentimentally and even jauntily, he is a wholly serious investigator. He combines a bent for archæology with the theoretical and practical knowledge of a musician, and he speaks whereof he knows. The subject is an extremely difficult one, and there are many barriers to our obtaining complete knowledge of its details. Not only the music of the ancient peoples can be restored only by more or less conjecture, but even the quality and use of the instruments that have survived in actual examples or in pictures are not, in most cases, to be certainly determined. As to the ancient music itself, little, comparatively speaking, is known, and of that little not much is really intelligible to modern ears. Yet the subject has a peculiar fascination of its own.

Mr. Smith's somewhat rambling and discursive chapters begin with a brief survey of the field of ancient music, from which he concludes that Greece was the junction where converged many pathways, from Chaldæa and Assyria, from India, from China, from Egypt, and from Etruria. He thinks that the Chinese influence upon the Greeks was direct by commerce overland. There will doubtless be some skepticism as to this, yet Mr. Smith's studies have convinced him of a great resemblance between the Chinese and the Greek systems of music. Man is a measuring animal, and all the primitive musical instruments are founded upon the rude measure of what suited the fingers to play. From this, thinks Mr. Smith, arose musical scales, and not from the "natural" mathematical relationship between our modern divisions of the octave, as Helmholtz affirms. Indeed, the student of primitive and Oriental music finds repeatedly that intervals prevail with no relationship to the mathematical divisions that have become essential to our ears. Says the historian:

> Western theorists prejudge questions of Asiatic music by being so wedded to one particular conception of what a scale ought to exhibit. Ideas of octaves and fifths, and of minor and major and tone and semitone rule at every corner. The fortuitous nature of men's devices in art is scarcely conceivable when rule and logic claim to divine how art developed.

The musical scales of various non-European peoples, then, are, as Mr. A. J. Ellis also pointed out, not "natural," nor even founded necessarily on the laws of the constitution of musical sound, but "very diverse, very artificial, very captious." Mr. Smith begins his discussion of the instruments with those of Egypt, describing the Lady Maket's pair of double flutes found recently with her mummy, perfect except for the reed tongues. It is an important exception, for their tone is largely dependent on the kind of reeds used, and in experiments made with these flutes some surprising different results were obtained. These are the true forerunners of the Greek double flutes—the "diauloi," and yet, dated as they are by Egyptologists as being about three thousand years old, they indicate a very considerable advance upon the most primitive pipe.

The curious "bulbed" flutes of Etruria, which are frequently represented in Etruscan pottery, and of which only a few fragments of the thing itself remain, are discussed, and Mr. Smith advances a theory that the bulbs, of which there are often two or three, were for the purpose of covering reeds at different lengths, and thus practically altering the length of the pipes. Of the Greek flutes, much detailed information has come down to us in classical writings and in graphic representation; yet there are still points about them little understood. They, of course, corresponded with the Greek scales, and there are ingenious cylindrical arrangements in certain of them for shutting off notes to yield the elaborate system of intervals that the Greeks used. Four beautifully made flutes of ivory found at Pompeii are the most important existing remains of Græco-Roman musicianship, and the results of careful study of them by M. Mahillon and M. Gevaert are given.

The development of the lyre, the harp, and the lute may be tried in Egypt, Assyria, and Greece, from the three-stringed lyre of the earliest times in Egypt to the elaborations of the many-stringed harp. With all that the poets and artists of Greece have told us about the Greek lyre, there is still much uncertainty as to how it was strung, tuned, and played. "Most things in Greece are subject to dispute," according to Pausanias, and the subject of Greek music still has much for modern students to dispute about. What few remains there are of Greek music are not entirely exempt from dispute. Mr. Smith, for instance, is certain that M. Reinach's harmonised version of the recently found Delphic Hymn to Apollo, though it may bring the music within the range of our own perceptions, is only a travesty upon Greek music as the Greeks knew it.

Among the most interesting portions of this entertaining volume are those devoted to the music of China and Japan. Chinese music enforces the contention that there is nothing natural or inevitable about our diatonic scale. That Chinese music is entirely foreign to our scale, and that its intervals have little in common with those to which our ears are accustomed, is maintained at length. Chinese melodies are never definitely major or minor; nor can they be noted in our system of notation. The Chinese have no care for harmony; unisons and concords of two notes satisfy them, and that this is not necessarily due to an arrested sense of harmony is shown by the fact that all over the world uncultivated races have for ages utilized the concord of two sounds and have never got any further. The Japanese use the neutatonic scale, the old Greek scales, and the equal semi-tonal divisions of the octave, the last named corresponding, for them, to our equal temperament. There is much information about these two remarkable Oriental developments of the art, as there is about all the other branches of the subject treated, and it is information from an investigator of knowledge and experience. It might be desired that he had more knowledge and experience in the clear and logical arrangement of his matter.

A Daughter's Revenge.

ROSABEL. By Esther Miller. 12mo. Philadelphia: The J. B. Lippincott Company.

When Mrs. Fairbourne of Great Cumberland Place, London, and member of one of the most exclusive circles was a girl of seventeen she ran away with William Carpenter, a handsome groom in her father's employ. After their marriage she discovered that William was "kindhearted, but he was a groom"; and so the marriage was not all that she had expected. Fortunately for all concerned, however, William succumbed to a mortal illness, and his young widow was permitted to return to her father's roof and resume her maiden name. Afterward Mr. Fairbourne met the lady, and whereas she had relied solely upon her own judgment and what she considered the guidance of love in her first matrimonial venture, in her second choice she wisely listened to the counsel of her father, who considered Mr. Fairbourne financially eligible.

Once more the beautiful Amy was destined to disappointment—Mr. Fairbourne was not fabulously, but only comfortably, rich, and it was not until after his death that Amy found herself free to really enjoy herself. Then she moved to Great Cumberland Place and became a member of the aforementioned exclusive circle and fixed her wandering fancy firmly upon Alec Aylmer, who was handsome, rich, and thirty-two.

Mrs. Fairbourne looked thirty-two also, but she was really thirty-seven, and there were moments when Alec, although naturally lazy at lovemaking, almost succumbed to the charms of the lovely Amy.

It was, therefore, an unfortunate manœuvre on Amy's part which prompted her, the day of the picnic, to choose for a lovers' walk the neighborhood of the Angler's Inn. For it was the proprietress of the Angler's Inn who had been the late William's sister, and to whom Amy had sent William's daughter Rosabel when she herself had returned to her father's house. Rosabel was just nineteen on the fatal day of the walk, and she was handsome, with the full, ripe beauty of William himself.

Mrs. Fairbourne never pretended an affection for her daughter, even after the circumstances of a rich aunt's death made it imperative that she should send for the girl if she wished to inherit a much-needed fortune. But if Mrs. Fairbourne cared little for Rosabel, the latter heartily hated her mother. And Alec Aylmer, as a friend of the mother, came in for his share of dislike for the daughter—that is, until a sympathetic word, slipping out unexpectedly, turned the tables for Alec and made him Rosabel's friend.

After that—well, there is a scene at a country house where an old acquaintance of the days of the Angler's Inn rises up to point a way for Rosabel to revenge herself on her mother and crush her with shame. It is a diabolical plan, and fortunately fails through in favor of another and better, which makes Amy mother-in-law of the man whose wife she had hoped to be.

At least the author has made her characters consistent. Rosabel and Amy hate each other honestly, and there is no feeble reconciliation—not even on the last page.

Horseless Tales.

DENNIS McGRATH—AUTOCRAT. And Other Horseless Tales Hanging Thereby. By Edward Porter. 12mo. Boston: Herbert B. Turner & Co. $1.

Amos Small, the asphalt king, a shrewd little man famed for his "horse sense," gave up his team of fast horses and bought himself an automobile. Amos, being despotic by taste and inclination, refused to permit himself to stoop to the indignity of allowing any youthful "chuffer" to teach him. It was unfortunate that he elected to run the thing on the very day that Dennie McGrath, the "Comity of 1" of the League of Asphalt Steam Roller Engineers, chose to call on him regarding a slight advance in the scale of wages. Amos foresaw no exhibition of revenge on Dennis's part when he summarily dismissed the petition, mounted his horseless devil, and majestically sailed over the well-made asphalt road. But Dennis was not to be turned thus easily aside. His own roller was "horseless," and he was not ashamed to race her against the new car of Mr. Small. It is a thrilling race, and Dennis issues from it with flying colors and Mr. Small, who, although he may be a despot, is nevertheless a just man, acknowledges his defeat and promotes Dennis to the position of chauffeur.

The other stories all concern themselves with interesting incidents or adventures in which Amos or Dennis figures—including, of course, the inevitable automobile—with occasional vistas dealing with Miss [illegible]

A New Edition of the Late Miss Manning's Imaginary Journal of Margaret Roper.*

FEW figures of the staider sort in all the procession of English history can compare for interest with that of Thomas More, and no legend is more appealing than that which tells how his daughter Margaret fetched away her father's bloody head from where it was stuck on a pole above Tower Gate, kept it until her death, and had it buried with her. It was (as all the world knows) William Roper, the husband of this Margaret who was Sir Thomas's biographer, and long afterward in the century just closed the late Miss Manning, assuming the character of the devoted daughter, wrote the book now before us, an imaginary journal of Margaret More, so sympathetically and charmingly done that one must forget that the writer was not really Margaret. Mr. Hutton in his introduction to the present reprint dwells upon the truthfulness of Miss Manning's picture of the sometime favorite of Henry VIII. and his household—homely Dame Alice, his wife; Margaret, Elizabeth, Cecily, his daughters; John, his son, with a step-daughter and wards, and the young men who grew up to be his daughters' husbands. Besides those, too, venerable Sir John More, the grandfather, eminent Justice of the King's Bench; learned Erasmus coming and going, and old Hans Holbein painting them all; even King Harry himself walking at times in the garden with his arm about his Chancellor's neck.

Messrs. Jellicoe and Railton have provided a most attractive set of pictures, beginning with a headpiece representing the front of Sir Thomas More's house at Chelsea, built by him, and after his execution the dwelling place of a brilliant succession of noblemen, including Elizabeth's Ministers, Lord Burleigh, and Sir Robert Cecil, as well as King James's favorite, George Villiers, first Duke of Buckingham. Later in the Stuart days were passed the Duke of Beaufort built a new place on the site of the old and called it Beaufort House. The Thames was no more than a hundred yards distant, and on its banks Sir Thomas walked with Meg and exchanged fire of wit with Erasmus or with Patteson, his fool. There the peacocks Juno and Argus strutted, and there Dame Alice sniffed contempt at the stupid jokes she could not understand, and Will Roper agonized over points of doctrine and in the intervals of anguish wooed Meg. Thence, too, by boat Sir Thomas went bravely to his trial and death.

Many editions of Miss Manning's book have been printed. It may be familiar to many readers, but of late it seems to have dropped out of sight, and it is fair to assume that many will be found who know nothing of it. For them—and because the little "Libellus a Margareta More Quindecim Annos Nata Chelseiae Inceptus" deserves so much—we have chosen the following extracts. First this:

> The King tooke us by Surprise this Morning; Mother had scarce time to slip on her Scarlett Gown and Colf, ere he was in the House. His Grace was mighty pleasant to all, and, at going, saluted all around, which Besey took humourously. Daisy immoveable. Mercy humblie, I distastefullie, and Mother delightedlie. She calls him a fine Man: he is indeed big enough, and like to become too big; with long slits of Eyes that gaze freelie on all as who should say, "Who dare let or hinder us?" His Brow betokens Sense and Frankneesse, his Eyebrows are supercilious and his Cheeks puffy. A rolling, straddling Gait, and abrupt Speech.
>
> And again, when there was question of the marriage of King Hal to Anne Boleyn, which Sir Thomas opposed and so won the ill-will of the lady and in the end lost his head thereby, we have more kneeling to the King and pleading with him, and Meg writing thus:
>
> But the King is heady in this matter; stubborn as a Mule or wild Ass's Colt, whose mouths must be held with Bit and Bridle if they he to be governed at alle; and the King hath taken the Bit between his Teeth, and there is none dare ride him. Alle for Love of a brown Girl, with a Wen on her Throat and an extra Finger.
>
> Then, her husband lying in the Tower waiting the "brown girl's" pleasure, Dame Alice goes to see him. Returning with very red eyes and still weeping, all the children crowd eagerly about her.
>
> "Come, give over weeping, dearest Mother, 'twill do neither him, you, nor us any Goode. What was your first Speech of him?"
>
> "Oh, my first Speech, Sweetheart, was, 'What my Goodness, Mr. More. I marvell how that you, who were always counted a wise Man, should now soe play the Fool as to lie here in this close, filthy Prison, shut up with Mice and Rats, when you might be abroade and at your Liberty, with the Favour of King and Council, and return to your righte fayr House, your Books and Gallery, and your Wife, Children, and Household, if soe be you onlie woulde do what the Bishops and best learned in the Realm have without scruple done alreadie.'"
>
> "And what said he, Mother, to that?"
>
> "Why, then, Sweetheart, he chucks me under the Chin and sayeth, 'I prithee, good Mistress Alice, to tell me one Thing.' Soe then I say 'What Thing?' Soe then he sayeth, 'Is not this House, Sweetheart, as nigh Heaven as mine own?' Soe then I jerk my head away and say, 'Tilly-valley! Tilly-valley!' Then he asks for this Book and Mother, but I've forgot their Names, and he sayeth he's kept mighty short of Meat, though 'tis little he eats, but his Man John a Wood is gay an' hungry, and 'tis worth a World to see him at a salt Herring. Then he gives me counsell of this and that, one and t'other, I kept a-counting of his gray Hairs [illegible] which when I've gotten all now I cherish more than I'd fetched away; and I say, 'When will you change your Mole, and set like a wise Man?' and he sayeth, 'When? when?' looking very profound: 'why when Gorse is out of Blossom and Kissing out of Fashion.' Soe puts me forthe by the Shoulders with a Laugh, calling after me, 'Remember me over and over eagyn to them alle, and let me see Meg.'"

And in lighter vein, though not with lighter touch, of happier days before ever Mr. More was Lord Chancellor, when Meg gave to her tutor Mr. Gunnel this very journal, by mistake for her exercise book.

> I never knew that he had my Journalle untill that he burst out laughing. "Soe this is the famous 'Libellus,' quoth he. I never waited for another Word, but snatch it out of his Hand; which he, for so strict a Man, bore well enow. I do not believe he could have read a Dosen Lines, and they were towards the Beginning; but I should iaugelike like to know which Dosen Lines they were. Hum! I have a mind never to write another Word. That will be punishing myselfe, though, instende of Gunnel. * * * I will never again, howbeit, write Anisthing savouring ever soe little of Lexitie or Absurditie. The Saints keep me to it! And to know it from my Exercise Book, I will henceforthe bind a blue Ribbon around it. Furthermore, I will knit the sayd Ribbon in soe close a knot Knot that it shall be worth no one else's Payns to pick it out.

The Philippines.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, 1493-1898. Translated from the originals by Emma Helen Blair and James Alexander Robinson, with historical and additional notes by Edward Gaylord Bourne. With maps, portraits, and illustrations. Vol. XV. 1609. Cloth. Pp. 321. Cleveland, Ohio: The Arthur H. Clark Company. $4 per vol.

What is of singular interest in Volume XV. of "The Philippine Islands" is Dr. Antonio de Morga's account of the first discoveries. The old historian tells in naive style how great portions of an unknown world were made over.

> When Pope Alexander the Sixth divided the conquests of the New World between the Kings of Castilla and of Portugal, the Kings agreed to make the division by means of a line drawn across the world by the cosmographers, so that they might continue their discoveries and conquests, one toward the west and the other toward the east, and pacify whatever regions each might gain within his own demarcations.

Nothing was said of such possible interferences as might arise from the indignificant English or Dutch. Morga follows faithfully the discovery of the Philippine Islands. All the many rebellions and troubles with China, Japan, Portugal, and Holland are given. There were Spanish Governors, who were under the sway of the religious orders, and, as often, others who were at variance with the Bishops. Conquest and conversion were carried out with varying success. For a time there was a constant drain on the resources of the mother country. The courage of the Spaniard is wonderful. The narrative ends in 1603.

At the conclusion (Appendix A) the expedition under the command of Thomas Candish (Cavendish) is described. He was a native of "Trimley in the county of Suffolke." The voyagers with three vessels, the largest being of 120, the smallest of 40 tons, left Plymouth in July, 1586, and reached the Strait of Magellan early in January of the next year. Innumerable were the prizes taken, some of great value. Appendix B contains accounts of the early years of the Dutch in the East Indies. The Dutch made their voyage down the coast of Africa, doubling the Cape of Good Hope. The first voyage of importance was in 1508, under the command of Oliver van Noordt. The Portuguese did their best to ridicule the Dutchmen, telling the natives that the Dutch "are but a rabble." The men of the Low Country, had, however, a sharp eye for business. Admiral C. Matelief thus describes the trade of the Indias:

> It consists chiefly (1) in pepper, which is loaded at Bantam, Jallor, Patane, Queda, and Achin; (2) in cloves, which are loaded at Amboina and the Moluces; (3) in nutmeg and mace, or the rind of the nutmeg, which are loaded at Banda; (4) in the commerce of Cambaie; 5, in the commerce of the Coromandel Coast; (6) in the commerce of both the Chinese and Japanese coasts. * * * In regard to pepper, it is impossible for us to get the commerce all to ourselves, for besides the Portuguese the English have also undertaken the navigation to Bantam. They have their trading posts and houses and are trading there peacefully, while we are at war against the Portuguese. We defend Bantam and the English together, while they enjoy there the profits that cost them neither defenses, blood, nor any annoyance.

College Commerce Course.

In "Lectures on Commerce" is collected the record of the University of Chicago's commercial course, edited by Henry Rand Hatfield, Dean of the College of Commerce and Administration of the University of Chicago, which issues this volume as the first of its publications. ($1.50.) They are of practical value to a larger circle than the college boys before whom they were originally delivered. The first of the sixteen lectures is an introductory one by Prof. J. Lawrence Laughlin, head of the department of political economy of the university; the others are divided into three series on railroads, trade, and industry, and banking and insurance.

Among the lecturers on railways were Vice Presidents of the Illinois Central and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé systems. Under trade and industry the speakers included the President of the Mahin Advertising Company, the credit man of Marshall Field & Co., and one of the heads of the Bethlehem Steel Company. James H. Eckels spoke on the Controller of the Currency and on methods of banking; the American Express Company's financial manager on foreign exchange, and the Vice President of the First National Bank of Chicago on investments. There is also a ten-column index.

The Late Frederick Law Olmsted's Letters About Them Republished.*

SOME of our readers may remember that in the obituary notices of that remarkable man who planned our Central Park it was stated that he had once been a contributor to THE NEW YORK TIMES. In 1850 Mr. Frederick Law Olmsted made a trip abroad and wrote an account of it in a volume entitled "Walks and Talks of an American in England." The merits of this book attracted at the time the attention of Mr. Raymond, then editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, and it was proposed to Mr. Olmsted that he should make a tour in the slave States and write an account of it for THE TIMES. He started on his first trip in 1852 and returned in 1853, having gone as far as New Orleans. It was these letters that furnished the material for his "Seaboard Slave States," published in 1856. Other trips were made by him, extending as far as the Mexican border. With an excellent knowledge of farming, "he was always keenly appreciative of the beauty of landscape and had taken much pleasure in the quiet contemplation and analysis of its qualities." It was almost an accident that gave Mr. Olmsted the opportunity of entering into the field of landscape planning, for which he afterward became so famous. We shall always be grateful to him for the efforts made by him for the preservation of the Yosemite Valley. As his biographer, Mr. Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., expresses it, "In all of his professional work he was characterized by breadth of view, by clear insight into conditions, and by a strong common sense in the selection of his aims, to which was added that delicacy of feeling in the choice of aesthetic ideals perfectly fitted to the conditions and aims of each problem which is the mark of the great constructive artist."

It would be of no possible advantage to discuss the slavery question to-day, but when Mr. Olmsted wrote these letters to THE NEW YORK TIMES the subject was a vital one, which before its final settlement brought about a deluge of human blood. Mr. Olmsted cannot be accused of the least exaggeration in the accounts of what he saw. His first visit was to Washington, and he described the market place there.

> The majority of the people were negroes, and, taken as a whole, they appeared inferior in the expression of their faces and less well clothed than any collection of negroes I had ever seen before. * * * In their dress, language, manners, motions, all were distinguishable almost as much as by their color from the white people who were distributed among them and engaged in the same occupations—chiefly selling poultry, vegetables, and small country produce. The white men were, generally, a mean looking people and but meanly dressed, but differently so from the negroes. Most of the produce was in small rickety carts, drawn by the smallest, ugliest, leanest lot of oxen and horses I ever saw. * * * As for the oxen, I do not believe New England and New York together could produce a single yoke so poor as the best of them.

Mr. Olmsted believed that it would not be long before a majority of the inhabitants of the district would vote against slavery. In April, 1853, there had been held a meeting of colored persons, one of the subjects proposed being the best way to raise some money for purchasing the liberty of a woman who was a slave. The colored people were all arrested. One man was flogged and the others present had to pay fines to the amount of $111.

Making his way toward Richmond, Mr. Olmsted describes some of the masters' houses on the road.

> Most of them are constructed of wood, of two stories, painted white, and have, perhaps, a dozen rude-looking little log cabins scattered around them for the slaves. Now and then there is one of more pretensions, with a large porch or gallery in front, like that of Mount Vernon. They are generally in a heavy, compact style, less often, perhaps, than similar establishments at the North, in markedly bad or vulgar taste, but seldom elegant or even neat, and almost always in sad need of repairs.

Trying to understand the agriculture of the State, the author comes to the conclusion that one white laborer will accomplish more in one hour than a negro slave in two. "Horses cannot bear the treatment that they always receive from negroes; they are always soon foundered or crippled by them, while mules will bear cudgeling, and lose a meal or two now and then, and not be materially injured, and they do not take cold or get sick." All the various slave States are visited and the conclusion arrived at is that human servitude not only lowers the negro, but also the whites. Jefferson's remarks concerning slavery should always be remembered. He is recalling the dishonesty of the slaves:

> That a change of the relations in which a man is placed should change his ideas of moral right and wrong is neither new nor peculiar to the color of the blacks. Homer tells us it was so 2,000 years ago.
>
> Jove fixed it certain that whatever day
> Makes man a slave, takes half his worth away.

We question, however, Mr. Olmsted's rather sweeping statement as to the want of morality of the women who were to be classed among the "white trash."

We still discuss the status of the man of color and his capabilities. If Mr. Olmsted ardently desired freedom for the negro, he was not too well satisfied as to his mental advance in the time yet to come. One trait, believed peculiar to the negro, was then designated as drapetomania—or "an

Miss Barton and the Red Cross.

A STORY OF THE RED CROSS. Glimpses of Field Work. By Clara Barton, Founder of the American National Red Cross and President 1881-1904. 12mo. Pp. 190. New York: D. Appleton & Co. $1.

Miss Clara Barton has given in this little book, in no connected fashion, but reminiscently, as it were, something of the history of the society for the distribution of relief in times of war, pestilence, and flood, which is officially named "The American National Red Cross." The society is affiliated with other Red Cross societies in the European countries, and has or had a sort of semi-official standing with the United States Government. Miss Barton's own experience with the sort of work concerned dates from the civil war. Later, it was she who brought to the attention of the Federal Government the treaty of Geneva dealing with regulations for the mitigation of the horrors of war and like calamities—regulations since grown into the force of international law. For five years Miss Barton pressed the matter of the treaty, which was finally accepted by President Arthur. In the Winter of 1880-81 the association of the Red Cross was formed and Miss Barton made President.

The Red Cross did not undertake the soliciting of contributions; the plan was to maintain a small fund in the treasury for the purpose of sending a force forthwith to fields where relief might be needed, and, once on the field, to serve as distributing agency for the contributions of the public which might be collected through numerous other agencies, public and private. In this capacity the Red Cross has been present at many disasters, has handled large sums of money, and relieved much distress. The first work of the society was in the flood on the Ohio in 1884. Miss Barton describes what was done then—how boats were chartered and went from point to point, feeding the people and providing them with temporary shelter. THen came the Texas famine of 1885—due to too eager emigration to the West; then the yellow fever in Florida about the same time; then, in 1889, the Johnstown flood, in all of which the Red Cross was engaged as organized almoner. The Red Cross also had its part in the sending of grain to Russia at the time of the famine in 1890, as in the measures for the relief of the negroes driven from their homes by the hurricane of 1893, which swept the Port Royal Islands and covered them sixteen feet deep with water. Miss Barton tells about what was done then, and passes next to the measures taken to relieve the Armenians after the destruction of crops there and the driving off of the cattle by the Kurds in the following year. Miss Barton at that time went to Constantinople as the representative of the Red Cross, in order to secure from the Porte permission for the employment of her organization in the relief work. Still later chapters of the book are concerned with the work in Cuba during and after the Spanish-American war, and the work at the time of the Galveston flood. Though, as has already been said, the matter is not presented in any orderly fashion and certainly does not give any adequate idea either of the work done or the manner of doing it, the book serves in a general way the purpose intended.

Four Little Stories.

QUSAY JIM, AND OTHER STORIES. By Mary E. Stickney, author of "Brown of Lost River," &c. 16mo. Pp. 96. Longmont, Col.: The Ledger Publishing Company.

Reprinted from magazines, and bound into a thin volume, are four stories of the West, none of which are bad as magazine material. The title story is about a cowboy-miner, and what he did when he caught his old partner, who had robbed him of his wife, in the precarious state of being a horse thief. The second, "The Star Route Case," concerns a young man who was persuaded to rob the mails as an innocent and ingenious trick to get the route abolished and the contractors clear of their losing job. It is a tragedy with a woman in it, and a black-hearted hated rival. The third story, "An Arizona Speculation," is a study in the psychic states of boomers, not without interest and pathos, while the fourth and last, "The Jack Pot Mine," deals with matters of sentiment as they affect a member of the ancient and honorable order of gamblers.

MR. ALDEN'S VIEWS.

Shakespeare's Statue in Rome, George Gissing's Posthumous Book and Other Topics.

MAETERLINCK is about to publish here his new book, "Our Friend the Dog," and we may be very sure that in it he will fully recognize the existence of the canine soul. If a man really wants to be intimate enough with a dog or cat and to understand its mental point of view, he must recognize that the animal has a soul. In Maeterlinck's last book he showed an intimacy with animals of which very few men can boast. Mr. Haggard would do well to cultivate Maeterlinck's acquaintance and sit at his feet as a humble student of animal souls. He would very soon wonder how he could ever have had the least doubt as to the existence of a dog's soul. It may not be precisely like the human soul. Indeed, as a rule, it is a much better soul. But it certainly exists, and deserves to be treated with respect.

Considerable amusement has been afforded to Englishmen by the proposal that when the statue of Shakespeare is unveiled in Rome the name of the poet shall be translated into Italian, and the inscription on the pedestal of the statue shall inform the world that it is erected in honor of Guglielmo Brandilasta. But if we translate the names of Italian towns into English and call Firenze Florence and Livorno Leghorn, why should we find fault with the Italians if they translate the name of Shakespeare into Brandilasta? Do we not always speak of Victor Emmanuel instead of Vittorio Emmanuele? And have we not translated Cristoforo Colombo into Christopher Columbus? In all probability the Italians have no intention of turning Shakespeare into Brandilasta, but have merely thrown out the suggestion as a joke, designed to satirize the English habit of translating the names of Italians and Italian towns into English.

A discussion as to the origin of the word "bullgine" has been in progress in several of the London papers, and the most extraordinary theories concerning it have been put forward. Most of the letter writers seem to think that the word originated among sailors, and one writer has gone so far as to say that "bullgine" is the term used at sea for a hawser. It is needless to say that this is a mistake. There used to be an old "shanty" with the refrain, "Run with the bullgine, run," but that is the only possible connection that can be traced between the "bullgine" and the sea. In point of fact, the origin of the term dates back to more than fifty years ago. About that time a bull undertook to stop a train on an American railway by charging the engine, and some daring newspaper humorist thought it funny to mix up the bull and the locomotive by calling the former a "bullgine." Gradually the name became commonly applied to steam engines, and then it was passed on to fire engines. The New York fireman of the middle of the last century used to "run with the bullgine," as those who remember Mr. Chanfrau's play, "Mose and Liza," doubtless remember. This is the origin and mystery of the term "bullgine," and all efforts to show that it is a sea term are so much rubbish.

Two books on Rossetti, the most important of which is Mr. Arthur C. Benson's "Rossetti," have lately been published. To some of us it seems as if a good deal of nonsense has been written about Dante Gabriel Rossetti. He was undoubtedly a clever, though possibly a somewhat overrated, painter. He wrote a few poems that were striking, and may have proved that he possessed poetic genius, though that is somewhat of an assumption. Certainly there was a suggestion of trickery about his verse. His "Blessed Damozel" owed a very great deal of its popularity to its title. If he had called it "The Happy Girl" it would probably never have become famous. His "House of Life" contained not a little that was good, but will any one deny that it was read partly because it treated of subjects that at the time were thought to bring a blush to the cheek of the young person? Rossetti was the centre of a clique of clever men, who thought a great deal of one another, or at all events frequently told the world that they so thought. How much of Rossetti's fame is due to the persistent advertising given to him by his associates, both while he was living and after his death? I may be very wrong, but to me Rossetti seems to have been a good deal of a poseur and not a little of a humbug, consciously or unconsciously. Certainly his life was not the sort of life that should be either an inspiration or an example to young writers, and it is just possible that the world has heard a little too much of him.

There is a very pretty quarrel about the posthumous novel of the late George Gissing, "Veranilda." Mr. H. G. Wells was to write a preface to the book, but the executors of Mr. Gissing—Mr. Algernon Gissing and Miss Collett—have refused to permit the book to be published with Mr. Wells's preface. Accordingly, Mr. Wells has published his preface in one of the monthly reviews, and Mr. Frederic Harrison will take his place and write an introduction to "Veranilda." Why the executors should have objected to what Mr. Wells had written, or, if they did not find fault with it, why they should have objected to Mr. Wells, is not clear. Surely, Mr. Wells said nothing in his article, as it was published in the review, which ought to have offended the relatives of Mr. Gissing. The article was a very laudatory estimate of Mr. Gissing's work, and if it gave the public a glimpse of the hardships which fell to Mr. Gissing's lot that was in no way derogatory to the man. Why Mr. Wells was treated so cavalierly by the executors is a mystery. There is, of course, some explanation of the incident, but in all probability it is one with which the general public has no proper concern.

Opinions as to "The O'Ruddy," which was written partly by the late Stephen Crane and partly by Mr. Robert Barr, differ somewhat. The Saturday Review slates it, and The Athenæum praises it. The majority of the criticisms that I have so far seen are, however, warmly in favor of the book. People who think that criticism of novels is an exact science are wrong. The element of personal taste enters largely and necessarily into every criticism of a work of imagination, and when criticism of novels is reduced to its lowest terms it generally means that one critic likes a book and another doesn't like it. There may be room for only one opinion as to a scientific book, but there is always room for critics to differ concerning any novels except those that are either very good or very bad.

The second volume of Lamb's letters is, if anything, more interesting than the first. The strong common sense of the man appears clearly in his estimate of his contemporaries. He had a profound admiration for Wordsworth, but he thought very little of Shelley, and even less of Byron. He put his finger firmly on the thin and unsubstantial nature of much of Shelley's verse, and he saw where Byron was lacking in true inspiration. At the same time he was not a bigoted contemner of either poet, and could find matter to praise in both Shelley and Byron. The impression that the letters give is not so much that they were written by a humorist as that they were the frank expression of the opinions of a clear-headed thinker and a careful observer. This may not be the popular conception of Lamb, but then it is not always wise to judge a man by the books that he has printed.

"Recent Discoveries and Excavations in the Forum" is the title of a book written by Mr. St. Clair Baddeley, which is nearly ready for publication. It ought to fill a manifest want. The work that has been done in the Roman Forum in the last six years has been chronicled only in the newspapers, and we need very much a full and systematic account of the excavations and their results. Mr. Baddeley was on the ground during the greater part of the time when the excavations were in progress, and he ought to be able to give us a good account of them.

"Quaint Talks About Long Walks" sounds like poetry, but it is merely the name of a book by the Rev. Mr. A. N. Cooper, in which he describes his walking tours. He has walked over a large part of Europe and found the undertaking a pleasant one. Why a man should walk from London to Venice when he could go by train, or even by bicycle, is not very clear, but then there is fortunately a diversity of tastes among men. Mr. Cooper's book is good reading, even if we do not altogether sympathize with the man who walked in knickerbockers, and had to buy casual pairs of trousers before he was allowed to enter certain places. Mr. Cooper likes to walk, and so long as he does not compel us to walk with him, there is no reason why we should not take pleasure in reading his account of his adventures.

The Lion's Cub.

WITH RICHARD THE FEARLESS. A Tale of the Red Crusade. By Paul Creswick, author of "Hasting the Pirate," "Under the Black Raven," &c. Illustrated by H. Crockett. 12mo. Pp., 304. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $1.50.

Once more the Lion Heart lends his great name and golden beard to adorn a tale, but the tale this time is less concerned with Richard of England than with a young man discovered in the humble estate of a weaver's apprentice in Lincoln, but said to be Richard's son by a vanished wife of his youth. They call him Peter, and he looks so wonderfully like the King that Earl Warren, in whose company Peter goes to the wars, smiles to himself. For Peter is to the end an unacknowledged Prince. He sets forth on his first adventures with Blondel, who has been rudely thrust out of Prince John's Court and is doing his minstrelsy from town to town, singing to the harp strummed by his pretty sister Ninon, or Nan. All three enlist as men at arms in order to follow Richard, and a very proper man Nan shows herself. All three go upon the crusade, all three get meshed in the plots—plots piled on plots and still plots—of Prince John and his perfidious emissary, who appears under sundry names and aliases. Peter does great things—even to taking prisoner the mighty Saladin—and it is Nan and Peter and Blondel who are the means of finding Richard in his Austrian dungeon, not Blondel alone. Love and adventures, mad moods of madder maids, thwartings of villains, deeds of high emprise, rescues from sword and rope and flames—all are plentifully provided, and the story cannot fail to furnish thrills and pass the time pleasantly as an old romance should. In short, it is very good indeed of its kind.

The author presents self-culture as a part of the education necessary to make a man's contribution to the world worthy.

ENGLISH HISTORY.

Marcus R. P. Dorman's History of the British Empire in the Nineteenth Century.*

MR. MARCUS R. P. DORMAN'S first volume of "A History of the British Empire in the Nineteenth Century" embraced the period beginning in 1793 and ending in 1805. The second volume includes the nineteen years from 1806 to 1825, a most eventful period. "Kingdoms were broken up and rebuilt, monarchs were raised from the people, crowned, and dethroned, and new systems of government were invented, tried, and discarded." All Europe was in arms, and "everywhere force reigned triumphant." Political conditions in England are fully presented, and comparisons are made between the past and the present. There is an able defense made by the author, regarding the policy of Lord Castlereagh. The two central figures in the history of the period are Napoleon and Wellington, "and around them were grouped the monarchs, statesmen, and Generals of Europe." In the writing of the history Mr. Dorman expresses his thanks for help given him by the Lenox Library.

The title of the new administration of 1806, "all the talents," has gone down to posterity. The author declares it to have been a strange mixture. Lord Grenville was First Lord of the Treasury; Fox, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs; Windham, War and Colonies; Lord Henry Petty, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Lord Erskine, Lord Chancellor; Lord Moira, Master General of Ordnance, in an administration that sounds like a return to a mediaeval age. Fox always had his hands full, since his opponent was the clever Talleyrand. There always were discussions over the terms of the Treaty of Amiens. It seems certain that Fox was anxious for peace. Talleyrand at that time pretended that he felt no confidence in Russia, then one of the guarantee powers. It seems to be unfortunate, but the precedent of not believing Russia began at an early period. What Napoleon and Talleyrand wished above all things was to bring about a quarrel between England and Russia. But this Fox declared he would do his best to prevent. While negotiations were going on, the Germanic Empire received its death blow at Austerlitz. Fox was disheartened. If he had, in a certain way, shown rather a kindly feeling toward France, the later acts of Napoleon caused him to distrust his motives. Fox died in September, 1806. The author writes:

* * * and England lost another of her greatest men. As a learned classic, as a keen and pungent debater, as a master of rhetoric, and as a leader of men he had always been pre-eminent; now in his last months he had also proved to be an honest negotiator, a firm upholder of treaties, and above all a just and great patriot. In common with Pitt and all other eminent statesmen, he was always in favor of abolishing the slave trade at the earliest possible moment. He labored to remove the Catholic disabilities and to institute a measure to reform the representation, yet he was by no means a democrat in the modern sense. He was opposed to warfare on principle, and this, combined with the fact that he was mostly in the Opposition, no doubt caused him to express himself in terms more antagonistic to the Government and more friendly to the foes of England than his feelings warranted.

After Austerlitz came Jena. Prussia was prostrate, and her King timorous. Napoleon knew that England was his enemy, and now he devised what seemed to him a simple plan—the breaking down of English commerce. England was to be denuded of her gold.

In this action Napoleon was at first supported by the French people, who were firmly wedded to prohibition, but even the arbitrary interference with trading in the necessities of life and the seizure and destruction of British and colonial merchandise began to bear heavily on the peaceful tradesmen of France and Germany.

After the Berlin Decrees the English Government concluded at once a treaty of peace and an alliance with Frederick William. England insisted that no new negotiations should be entered into with France without the full knowledge and consent of the British Government. But the English administration was slow and Napoleon alert. As to the Russians, it was uncertain what they intended doing. French ports were, however, blockaded and their fleet badly worsted. The United States now complained that "Great Britain had violated their neutral rights by seizing and condemning their merchantmen, although engaged in lawful commerce, and by impressing native seamen upon the high seas on the pretext that they were Englishmen." The answer of the English Government was:

That no State could exclude a belligerent from the right of searching neutral ships for contraband of war or for the persons and property of enemies, or could a neutral refuse to give up the subjects of the belligerent who had withdrawn from their lawful allegiance.

Monroe and Pinkney went to England and met Lords Holland and Auckland. A final settlement was made, and the laws regarding trade with neutrals were placed on a sound working basis. As to the commerce of the world, Napoleon cared nothing for laws or customs. Fortunately he had no supremacy on the sea. England's reply to the Berlin decree was to declare a blockade of all the French or other ports between Brest and the Elbe; more than that, neutrals were forbidden to carry on trade with each other in articles which obeyed the French decrees. Then there arose in England a class of "smuggling" which the customs officials were powerless to deal with. Negotiations with Prussia on the part of England were fairly successful, and finally by the treaty of Bartenstein, Russia, England, and Sweden agreed to furnish armies to continue the war with France. But Napoleon was not idle. His ways were peculiar.

Napoleon's methods of diplomacy were always simple, but, being original, frequently succeeded in baffling statesmen who practiced in the ordinary manner. They usually took one of two forms. He either attempted to pit nations against each other or peoples against the Governments, and then, if successful, stepped in as arbitrator. The latter method had proved so successful in Italy that he decided to adopt it in Poland, which was once more destined to be the shuttlecock of the powers. He exhorted the Poles to strike for independence, hoping that they would enlist under his banner, and thus give him an unhampered theatre of warfare for his armies.

It was in 1807 that the war of the Peninsula had its origin, and Napoleon's want of success in Portugal and Spain helped to bring about his collapse as much as did his inroad into Russia. The Regent of Portugal was required by Napoleon to confiscate British property in his dominions and to close his ports to British commerce, but the Regent informed England of the fact, and refused to obey the French orders. Then Junot was sent with a French army across the frontier, and promises of new territory were made the King of Spain if he would offer no obstructions to the French advance.

To realize the vastness of the issues, the complexity of the questions to be settled, and the magnitude of the opposing forces taxes our imagination to the utmost. Fortunately nothing during the lives of any of us can compare with the events of this period. Now in our greatest campaigns we perhaps lose as many men in a year as Napoleon sacrificed in a week. Now statesmen wrangle over the manner of appointing schoolteachers; they were then engaged in crowning monarchs and arranging the succession of dynasties. Now the whole country is agitated at the prospects of a small revision of customs duties; then nations endeavored to ruin each other by actual blockade. Now our Foreign Office is chiefly concerned with the designs of Russia in the deserts of Asia; then it was engaged in settling the boundaries of the States of Europe. Now many are perturbed if a clergyman attempts some small innovation in the ritual of his service; then the Pope was violently removed from his throne by force of arms, and restored by the combined action of the powers.

Matters in Spain were at their worst. There were all kinds of intrigues. The situation at the time is thus explained:

Whether George III.'s dispatches were written by Grenville, Mulgrave, or Canning, the same master mind evidently inspires them, all show the same blunt, honest firmness. With all his faults, George III. can never be accused of inconsistency. The influence wielded by the King over foreign policy was very great, for, although he yielded when Pitt insisted upon negotiating for peace in 1797, as a rule it is clear his Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs were affected by his wishes. His policy may not always have been wise, but throughout it was governed by those principles of statesmanship—firmness, constancy, honesty, and dogged determination—which have created the British Empire. The policy of Napoleon was the exact converse of this. His aims were continually changing as the need of the moment demanded; he allied himself first with one country, then with another, until each of the principal powers, except England, had been both friend and enemy. The inevitable result was that in time all distrusted him, and all combined against him.

Some short time before this Napoleon had made certain peaceful advances to George, but there was no confidence placed in the Frenchman. With the advance of Junot, at once England did her best to check Napoleon. He never foresaw what trouble was brewing for him. In Prussia, where he thought his power was supreme, there were outbursts of Germanic patriotism. That statement of the author concerning Prussia will be novel to many readers.

Napoleon did not know that a strong national feeling was steadily growing among the Prussian people. As early as July, 1808, a secret society at Königsberg, called the Tugendbund, had been formed. * * * In Berlin another society was established by Count Chassot, which was even more secret, for the members assumed fictitious names. Their object was to revolt and save the country from France, but they were opposed to any action in concert with the Czar of Russia. * * * Our foreign records show that the British Government did aid the secret societies with funds.

Now commences the wonderful work accomplished by Wellington. Mr. Dorman is particularly interesting when he gives a history of the political changes in England. Conservative in politics, perhaps, the author tells of the construction of the House of Commons and the effect of new ideas:

Men all have votes now, and it is interesting to inquire how far their hopes have been realized. Commercial men and lawyers have to a great extent replaced the younger sons of the aristocracy and the country gentlemen in the House of Commons, while workingmen frequently return one of their own class to represent them. Politicians, therefore, instead of being drawn from a small section of society only, are derived from the whole population. The result, however, is disappointing. There are more speakers now, but fewer orators, and members seem to be ambitious to shine more as critics of each other's speeches than to learn to become constructive statesmen. In other words, the House of Commons is now more a debating society than a solemn legislative body.

The Napoleonic invasion was now near at hand. That Russia, single-handed, would oppose France and her allies was a surprise for the English administration. Certainly as Napoleon had his hands full in Spain, it must have been deemed adventurous on his part to risk a conflict with Russia. It seems that Lord Cathcart was among the first to become acquainted with the Czar's determination:

On Aug. 30, 1812, Lord Cathcart had a conference with Count Romanzoff, who frankly acknowledged that he considered a war with France to have been sooner or later inevitable. He, however, considered that it was in Russia where "the Napoleonic empire had received a fatal wound." The Peninsular war lasted nearly six years, and had not closed when the abdication of Napoleon took place. News had not reached Bayonne, where fighting was still going on. Now came the caging of the Corsican in Elba, and his breaking forth. There had been twenty years of blood-spilling, and more battling to be expected. England was to be again plunged in war. Mr. Dorman explains the causes for the war following the French Revolution and the one of 1815.

In the first case the ostensible cause of hostilities was not the real one, for the powers (with England) professed that they entered the war because France had violated the navigation laws of the Scheldt; in the second, they openly declared Napoleon an outlaw and pledged themselves to assist the King.

It is questionable whether England will ever again go to war for the support of any foreign King. Full space is given to the campaign ending with Waterloo. The carnage at that battle may be counted up as over 23,000 of the allied killed or wounded, and nearly 30,000 French.

The spread of English rule in India is succinctly given, with the military actions of Clive and Wellesley. At the conclusion the literary movement finds its place, and Byron, Shelley, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Southey are particularly noticed, with the work of Hallam, Ricardo, and James Mill. Then in art there are Constable, Turner, Hoppner, Copley, and Lawrence. Lastly, the industrial movements, beginning with the invention of George Stephenson, are presented. In every way Mr. Dorman's work is excellent and comprehensive.

*"A HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY." By Marcus R. P. Dorman. Vol. II. Cloth. Illustrated. Pp. 374. Philadelphia: The J. B. Lippincott Company.

A STROLLER'S SONS.

THE SEEKER. By Harry Leon Wilson, author of "The Spenders," "The Lions of the Lord," &c. Illustrated by Rose Cecil O'Neill. 12mo. Pp. 341. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.50.

Out of the mingled bloods of a mountebank and a parson of the old school, the author of "The Spenders" has made a study and a story. The study is ingenious, sometimes powerful; the story is alive always, the persons singularly real. As in "The Spenders," and in a riper form than in the earlier book, Mr. Wilson is extraordinarily felicitous and dextrous in expression. He is a good phrase-maker whose phrases he snug in the context. He has an eye for dramatic effect. Of "The Spenders" it was remarked by many who should know something of such matters, that it came near giving a reflection of the real New York, not the New York of the traditional and almost extinct old New Yorker, but the New York of the average actual New Yorker, swept in as he is from the four corners of the earth and flung recklessly into the ant heap. It may be said of the present book that it gives like reflections of New York of quite different phases of the city from those with which "The Spenders" was concerned, but especially that it exhibits, in speaking, moving, thinking, and likeness, two very modern men and an utterly modern woman—not meaning by the last anything reproachful.

The idea back of the story (which need not bother such as like their stories unanalyzed) is a parallel of heredities. There is the daughter of a very literal, upright Presbyterian minister in a small town, one of the surviving giants of the old stern faith. The daughter marries a strolling fellow who mostly peddles patent medicines with street-corner eloquence, and occasionally does his turn on the itinerant theatrical stage. Of this union come two boys, who, the mother dying, are brought up by the grandfather on Scripture and the Shorter Catechism, yet not without kindness, for the old man is not hard within. The elder is a handsome and capable lad, but in the beginning the author is concerned rather with the younger; how he dreamed and thought; how the idols of his childhood faded out one by one; how the hired man ceased to be the most admirable of created beings; how the close-guarded front room childishly figured as the abode of God Himself, became a room merely; how the splendid spectacle of a father, appearing from time to time, came at last to seem no more than he was—"a loud-voiced street-mannered creature, grotesquely self-satisfied, flaunting those things he should not have flaunted." There was, besides, the little girl next door, the little girl baptized Nancy, who had yet chosen for herself the more desirable name of Lillian May.

Then was college, and the younger boy, who had been puzzling his head over many things, coming out of a siege of typhoid with "theological astigmatism," lying on his couch, smiling weakly, blandly chattering horrid blasphemies to his grandfather, while that excellent old gentleman, trembling at the words he heard, pretended not to mind, tried to soothe, thinking the boy was out of his wits. For he had meant to make of him a preacher like himself. This whole business is wonderfully well done, the boy's cheerful air of perfect reasonableness, his sense of comradeship with the old man, his obliviousness, the old man's shuddering horror, the expedient of the brain sickness serving to soften the hard clash of the irreconcilable old and new. Then the girl Nancy again, grown up, and the boy grown up, and the handsome, capable elder brother arriving at the conclusion that the Episcopal ministry would better suit his talents. The grandfather, who has grieved bitterly over the younger's backsliding, rather grimly bids the elder "follow his call," and a worldly lady of uncertain age, aunt to Nancy, approves of the change. She declares Episcopalianism "immense," she says, "makes allowances for the best of us, and yet keeps us unbelted," and says in her fashion "one may broaden into almost anything now and still be orthodox."

The rest is the working out of the fates of the three, the two boys and the girl, scenes from fashionable clerical life in New York, glimpses of a wanderer in waste places, of a man who thinks it is "more important to be unafraid of life than unafraid of death," who seeks eagerly, yet smiles at many things, some preaching, but always a fine humor to the rescue. We may omit here the detail of plot. Nancy is charming, the brothers are such as men are after their several kinds, and if the story seems to teach that a certain sort of ambrosial clergyman is as purely a mountebank as any long-haired peddler of nostrums, the satire goes for the most part lightly enough, and the story is a good story, far out of the rut, in spots nearly great. Mr. Wilson has indeed done himself such credit that he can hardly fail some day to do himself still more.

GILBERT PARKER'S STORY

A LADDER OF SWORDS. A Tale of Love and Tears. By Gilbert Parker. Illustrated by the Kinneys. 12mo. Pp., 290. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.50.

Perhaps the chief defect to be found in Sir Gilbert Parker's "Ladder of Swords" is that its two most human and vital characters are of minor importance in the development of the plot—a big, vain, kindly island lordling and a chivalrous goggle-eyed pirate.

The story, which was originally published as a short serial in Harper's Magazine of October and November, 1900, under the title of "Angèle and Michel," has had several chapters added since then, but the plot remains materially unchanged. Angèle was beautiful and good, and Michel was brave and faithful. They were Huguenots, and Michel saved Angèle and her old father in the massacre of St. Bartholomew. Angèle went to the Isle of Jersey and Michel followed. He was conveyed to Elizabeth's Court a prisoner, and Angèle followed him thither. Now he was a personable man and excited the admiration of the Queen and the jealousy of Leicester. He met Elizabeth's knights in tourney. By the Queen's command he preached a sermon in the Chapel Royal, sword in one hand, book in the other; by the Queen's favor he was married to Angèle and dwelt with her on the Isle of Jersey seven years till the plague came and slew her with her child. Alone he buried them and went out to seek his death in the wars of Huguenots and Catholics in France. That is the story.

But for the book most of it is spent upon Elizabeth's Court; upon analyses of the Earl of Leicester and of the Queen—analyses not especially striking or convincing—or upon elaborations of certain of the scenes offered by the story—scenes, which for the most part fail of effectiveness. A scene between Leicester and the girl Leicester cast as Mephistopheles, whereof the taste is preachy; a scene in the tilt yard, where somehow the cloth of gold does not glitter and the knights and ladies are shadows; a scene of rescue in the Channel, where the waves refuse to thunder in your ears, the salt spray to taste in your mouth, or the fear of death to grip your heart. The story is most moving, indeed, where it sums up swiftly, as at the last; the tragic ending—the lone man burying his dead and kissing the earth beneath which he has laid them, then losing himself in the tumult and the shouting.

In the pirate Buonespoir and the simple-hearted hulk of the Seigneur Lemprière of Rozel, who having grandly offered his name and honors to Angèle and having been sweetly rejected, devotes himself to her in the way of friendship, Sir Gilbert has achieved two figures somewhat Falstaffian in flavor; the conception is excellent, but even here the execution limps at times. Pirate and Seigneur are allies, and come together to court in the ship Honeyflower, manned by Buonespoir's cutthroat crew, one halt, one maimed, one blind of one eye, and called by their commander Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, a black guard to the white Angèle. At court he of Rozel officiates as royal butler, (bearing that title of hereditary right,) and fights a duel with Leicester, in which he gets pinked. Pirate and Seigneur, too, are much affected by the Queen's Fool, and jests ensue—jests of better or worse flavor as may happen. Humor is hardly Sir Gilbert Parker's strong point. On the whole, there is a feeling of a good story almost spoiled in the making.

Mr. Brudno's "The Fugitive."

By arrangement with The London Times.

The merit is in the rendering of the Ghetto life, and of the état d'âme of the Jew in countries in which the Christian is his natural enemy. The nearest thing to it is to be found in some of Mr. Zangwill's earlier work—in "Ghetto Tragedies," for example. But, though Mr. Zangwill excels Mr. Brudno in literary skill, it is to Mr. Brudno's work that we should feel more inclined to apply the epithet vécu. He writes as if he had actually lived the life of which the other writer has only heard. Except for a little melodramatic machinery brought into use toward the end, we could easily believe that it is not fiction at all, but autobiography only thinly veiled. One can recommend it not only to the general reader of intelligence, but also to all those who interest themselves in movements for the conversion of the Jews. It will not only reveal to them some of the frauds which converts practice at their expense, but will also show them for what reasons many converts consider them fair game. Christianity appears to them as a persecuting religion, and to enroll themselves under the banner of the Cross seems an act of treachery to the highest ideals they know. No doubt it could hardly be otherwise with the Jews who come from the dominions of the Czar.

BOSTON NOTES.

The Consolidation of Lothrop Company and Lee & Shepard—Some New Books—Juveniles.

THE consolidation of the houses of Lee & Shepard and the Lothrop Company has been expected ever since the company chose Mr. W. F. Gregory, the manager of the firm, as it assignee, but the announcement that the two are to be incorporated as the Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company causes mild surprise in the trade. For a time at least both of the present imprints will be retained, and, as far as outsiders are concerned, the two houses will be distinct until January, 1905, but in November the new company will establish itself in large offices in Federal Street, half way between the present offices of its constituent parts. Mr. Hoyt, who was one of Mr. Lothrop's most efficient assistants, and has been manager, but not President, of the Lothrop Company, will remain in charge of its publications; Mr. Gregory will be Treasurer and General Manager of the new corporation. No unnecessary changes will be made anywhere. United, the two lists are very strong in children's books, and if the number of its novels be small, its proportion of uniformly successful names is large, and might be much larger if the company had chosen to accept a small fraction of the manuscripts offered to it after the success of "Eben Holden."

Messrs. Lee & Shepard are bringing out Mr. Edward Stratemeyer's "Boy's Life of Theodore Roosevelt" this week, and a most enthusiastic little book it is, with a preface as glowing as the text. Like the author's "Boy's Life of William McKinley," it is much better than his stories.

With this book comes "The Boy Courier of Napoleon," by Mr. W. C. Sprague, the editor of "The American Boy." It is chiefly valuable for its glimpse of the negro in authority as seen in San Domingo, and for its plain account of the early history of Louisiana. The author's premature bestowal of the style and titles of the Emperor upon the First Consul must confuse young readers, and his account of Hohenlinden is more picturesque than accurate, although he is to be commended for introducing boys to Richepanse, forgotten in the school histories.

Somewhere in her incomparably discreet autobiography Mrs. Herbert D. Ward says that she does not look at what is written in regard to her books, unless it is recommended to her attention by some one whom she can trust, and it is probable, therefore, that she has only a very general knowledge of the persistency with which journalists and booksellers misjudged "Loveliness," classifying it as a child's book, and then condemning it as unfit for the reading of the immature. Still, if she had known of this misunderstanding, she could not have been more sagacious in so constructing her coming novel, "Trixy," that not even the Christmas saleswoman can mistake it for nursery literature.

"Yours with All My Heart," by Mrs. Esther M. Baxendale, issued by Messrs. L. C. Page & Co., although its pictures and binding make it a suitable gift for any dog lover, suffers from its author's entire lack of humor. Even a human being's autobiography cannot very safely be carried to the point of his last sigh, and to make a dead dog write "I folded my meek little forepaws over my snow-white breast" is to blur the impression left by the pleasant story of "Fairy's" thirteen loving years.

Mrs. Ward was so very young when she began writing of "Gypsy Breynton" and "Gypsy's Cousin Joyce" that one thinks of "Faith Gartney's Girlhood," published forty-one years ago, as the work of one of her juniors, but in reality Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney is her senior by a score of years, and completes her own fourth score this month. She has twenty-seven books on the list of Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., chiefly novels, but she has also published five volumes of poetry; "Just How," a cook book, and at the same time, a key to cook books; an interesting little volume of Scriptural exegesis, and a book on Christian Science, covering the whole question. The heroine of her new book, "Biddy's Episodes," is neither Bedelia nor Bridget, but Belinda, and the eccentricities of which she is guilty before she settles into the right groove are of the "Belinda" order, those of a girl whose efforts to break away from established tradition indicate superfluous strength, not viciousness.

"Bits of Gossip," by Rebecca Harding Davis, is announced by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Wife of a journalist, mother of a novelist, and herself a novelist, journalist, and magazine writer, Mrs. Davis has nearly all her life been in touch with the literary and political life of more than one large city, and is almost equally well acquainted with Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and Washington, and her gossip touches abolitionist and actor, poet, philosopher, soldier, sorrowly entitles a name in all the long roll. Like Mrs. Whitney, she did not attain to success until she was of mature years, for she was born in 1831.

"Where Does the Sky Begin?" the volume of discourses by the Rev. Washington Gladden, to be published by this house this month, is entirely religious in its scope, although, in accordance with the doubt suggested by its title, any of his ethical essays might almost be classed as religious, but in these papers the aim is to bring religion into the daily living, thinking, and wishing.

Dean Briggs's "Routine and Ideals," to come next month, will be composed of seven essays, the most important among those written since 1901. The Phi Beta Kappa poem of 1903, a tribute to Harvard, "Mater Fortissima," will accompany the essays. The Emerson address, delivered at Concord for the school children; the Wellesley "Commencement Address," a paper on "The Mistakes of College Life," first read at the Belmont School, and an article on "Routine and Ideals," as related in college life, are chief among the articles in the book.

This year Dr. William Everett's "Thine, Not Mine," Miss Edith Robinson's "The Captain of the School," Miss A. G. Plympton's "Wanolasset," Mrs. Lucy M. Thruston's "Jack and His Island," and Miss Evelyn Raymond's "The Mushroom Cave" are chosen by Messrs. Little & Brown for places in their low-priced series, "The Boys' and Girls' Bookshelf," and it is noteworthy that all five are more serious than the average book written for children, and yet they have been more successful than those meant merely to please. This ought to console those rendered despondent by the frivolity of the schools, and so should the new illustrated editions of Dr. Edward Everett Hale's "Stories of Discovery Told by Discoverers" and "Stories of Adventure Told by Adventurers."

Illustrated editions of Miss Alcott's stories "Eight Cousins" and "Rose in Bloom" will appear this Winter, and each is to have eight full-page pictures by Miss Harriet Roosevelt Richards.

Mrs. Eliot, otherwise Maud Howe, has collected her magazine sketches of Rome and other places in Italy, and they are to be published in a volume entitled "Roma Beata," and illustrated by photographs. Many of the papers are taken with but slight alteration from diaries and journals, and, although undeniably superficial, are so frank and spontaneous as to convey a much stronger impression than is derived from many a work more carefully prepared.

Mr. Arthur Morrison's "The Green Diamond," published this week by Messrs. L. C. Page & Co., is a complete story, and yet it leaves any clear-sighted reader as uncertain as any of the classical unsolved enigmas, for the lost diamond is not found and the chances for finding it are almost as good at the end as in the beginning, and yet one has had some excellent adventures, grave and humorous.

A new series agreeable to all readers of criticism is announced by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., but as yet has no distinctive name. It will be edited by Prof. W. A. Neilson of Columbia, and will be composed of monographs, dealing with the growth of one species of literature. Prof. F. B. Gummere of Haverford College, Penn., author of the "Handbook of Poetics," will discuss "The Ballad." "The Novel" will be written by Dr. Bliss Perry, who has been forestalled by Mr. Crawford; "The Lyric," by Prof. F. E. Schelling of the University of Pennsylvania; "Tragedy;" by Prof. Thorndakes of the Northwestern University; "The Essay," by Mr. Ferris Greenslet of The Atlantic staff; "The Pastoral," by Prof. J. B. Fletcher of Columbia; "Character Writing," by Mr. G. N. Greenough of Harvard; "Legends," by Dr. G. H. Gerould of Bryn Mawr; "Literary Criticism," by Prof. Irving Babbitt, who will come after not only Matthew Arnold, but many minor lights of the art; "The Short Story," by Prof. W. M. Hart of the University of California, and "Allegory," by the general editor of the series. As instructors of youth at the age addicted to literary production, all of the authors but one have had opportunities to study their subject in the individual, and are qualified to make some original deductions as to its development in the race, in addition to formulating the results of their general studies, but all the books will be provided with a bibliography, so that each will be a complete guide to the study of its subject and convenient for reference.

The Tragic Story of Alicia Blake.

ALICIA. By Albert A. Hertzell. Illustrated. 12mo. Buffalo: The Revere Publishing Company. $1.25.

Readers of Mr. Albert A. Hertzell's "Alicia" will have little difficulty in tracing the origin of his story to the triple tragedy that agitated Buffalo not so very long ago. Mr. Hertzell has not undertaken to throw any new light on the tragedy—the mystery of the murder is still a mystery so far as he is concerned. If one cares to, however, he gives the beginnings of a theory that might work out into something, and which (more likely) might work out into nothing.

Beginning, quite properly, at the very beginning, we are first introduced to the parents of the future actors in the tragedy; the childhood of the principals is thoroughly brushed over. We meet Arthur Preston, a spoilt and grandson of wealth at college. Afterward, as the husband of Lorna, he removes to the City of the Lakes and meets the beautiful Alicia Blake and her husband Edmund. Alicia and Arthur "converse" upon many general topics, the while love rages at the doors of their hearts and will not be denied. And the plot thickens when Edmund turns his attentions to lovely Vivian Belair, for whom, in her turn, Jack Landon, of columbia, more than a passing interest.

Arthur and Alicia are entirely too quiet and proper to be interesting, and Edmund is each other voicing their unquenchable longings, therefore Edmund Blake's brutal treatment of his wife is all the more contemptible. He turns his wife from his house, and she, in well-chosen English, pleads to be permitted to remain for "her children's sake." "See, I beseech you on my knees!" she cries, but Edmund is obdurate.

And Luthie, with unusual magnanimity, undertakes to plead with the unjust Edmund for the sake of Alicia and her own husband. And so, as Mr. Hertzell explains it all, the steps leading to the murder and the suspicion that settled against Arthur are very easily reached, and, also as Mr. Hertzell further explains, it is just as easy to see how innocent and blameless was Arthur, how noble he was, and how far from intending to take his own and his wife's life he was when his unmanageable automobile dashed into the gulf. Did not Jack have greater grounds for murder?

In spite of its plot, however, Mr. Hertzell's book lacks all the attributes of an interesting story, even though, at the same time, one must commend it as being written in a most painstaking style.

WOOLETT REVISITED.

The coming of Mr. Henry James is, for the present at least, a matter of graver interest to him than to us. During his absence, prolonged through twenty years, he has been at pains to keep us rather fully informed about himself. His art, assiduously practiced, has disclosed him to us in all his moods and manners and in all his stages of development. Him we could hardly have known more familiarly had he spent his days in Woolett; his personal coming involves no surprises to us. But we shall be disappointed if Woolett does not surprise him. Woolett is not Paris, of course—a good many of us hope it never will be very much like Paris—but we hope that Mr. James's trained and sensitive perception will confirm our belief that the old town is not quite so provincially prim, not altogether so hard and narrow as when Strether left it to look up the prodigal Chad.

We have got well past the stage of caring what born foreigners say about us, but we shall quite seriously attend to what Mr. James says. The judgment which this consummately finished man of the world passes upon the civilisation of Woolett will be eagerly studied as the most recent and authoritative measure of American progress in certain fields of which census and trade statistics take no cognizance, fields, nevertheless, in which even the triflers strive. For, of course, Woolett is only the lay figure which the author of "The Ambassadors" draped and disposed in his studio that its visual image might give form and proportion to the image he inwardly evoked of the civilization, the manners, and customs of his countrymen as a whole. If in the finished picture we now and again regret the angularity of an elbow or a sharpness of chin that unpleasantly suggests the graceless modeling of the mannikin, we may be comforted by recalling the Woolett "type" of twenty years ago, and perhaps quite reassured by the confident hope that it will be upon more rounded and pleasing outlines that the returning Strether will now direct an approving eye.

Strether would never be able to reconcile himself to Woolett after Paris—everybody saw that. Let us not rashly count upon a full conciliation between Mr. Henry James and the civilization of the country from which he has been content to absent himself so long, sending back to us "The Ambassadors" as his apologia for staying away. Mr. James likes Europe better than America, just as Strether found Paris irresistible after a lifetime of Woolett and the imminent Mrs. Newsome. He will go back—why shouldn't he? The most we can ask of him is that he shall neither flatter nor disfavor us when he puts on paper those revised appreciations which will advise us where, in his judgment, we now stand.

If Mr. James tell us that society in the United States is even now less interesting than society in Europe—and we shall probably spare ourselves a painful shock if we look for no more commendatory judgment from him—it will be our privilege to impress him with a conscious sense of his own continuing interest in cis-Atlantic social types, as evinced by his pretty constant use of them as the material of his stories. We wouldn't for the world lug in even an implied homily on the dignity of work by pointing out that Chad—whom Mr. James "puts in as an exhibit" to illustrate how Parisian domicile confers finish and polish—was a young gentleman leading a life of elegant but not altogether blameless indolence in the French capital when he might have been managing a highly profitable factory business in Woolett. Mass. However, to make sure that point we hold in reserve for the evidence in rebuttal, we make bold to say that if Mr. Henry James had been bidden to Giorlani's garden party that Sunday afternoon he would very likely have gone away early, much bored. The most interesting people there were the Woolett crowd—the very sort Mr. James limas so faithfully to make us understand why he stays in Europe. To a man of Mr. James's high intellectual quality we suppose royal personages would be about the deadliest bores in the world. We think of but one exception—the Kaiser, of course—in all Europe. Any society that enjoyed royalty's privilege of not concerning itself seriously with work and duty would inevitably and intolerably weary a person having a mind and using it. Think of Goethe or of Mr. Gladstone or of Henry James in a Summer society where mayhem by automobile afforded the chief excitement by day and monkey dinners served to while away the evenings!

The quality of being agreeable ought to be and is the essence of good society. It is not conferred by idleness any more than it is conferred by toil. It no more consists in easy tolerance of moral dereliction than it consists in austere castigation of strayers from the narrow path. A society in which Mme. de Vionnet was perfectly at home might be as sterile as a company that found Sarah Pocock charming. No doubt a somewhat more ample leisure than this work-a-day people permitted itself to enjoy a generation ago favors the acquisition of the quality of agreeableness. But after all the possession of opinions and ideas and of a point of view is a large constituent of that quality, and a reasonable devotion to the serious business of life in some field of honorable human endeavor offers, we imagine, a condition and environment more favorable to the acquirement of them than—well, than the atmosphere of Chad's pleasant apartment in Paris.

ROBERT ESTIENNE.

We noted last week an interesting thesis submitted by an American Master of Arts to the Faculty of Letters of the University of Paris, the subject of which was Milton and French literature. Curiously enough, this week our attention is challenged by another publication of the same character, but of even greater interest, considering its purpose and its origin. Its subject is "Robert Estienne et le Dictionnaire Français au XVIe Siècle," (Baltimore: J. H. Furst & Co.,) and its author is Edgar Ewing Brandon, professor in Miami University. The dedication of the thesis is not without a touch of almost pathetic significance: "To my parents and my sister, who by their sacrifices have enabled me to pursue my favorite studies, and to my wife, whose wise counsel and encouragement have sustained me in the difficulties of this task." Taken with the evidence afforded by the little volume itself, this dedication gives a glimpse of a laborious and trying work accomplished with courage, fidelity, and zeal, such as the patient and resolute Estienne would have prized. And it is an inspiriting thing in this country, whose chief characteristic in the eyes of the world is hardly the eager pursuit of unremunerative intellectual toil, that there should be a class, neither small nor unconsidered, the members of which are seeking in foreign universities the recognition of industry of this sort.

Prof. Brandon's monograph is far from being merely a result of persistent garnering in an obscure field. It is critical in spirit and in fact, and it leaves the reader, the general reader at least, in possession of a clear and vivid impression of the character of the great French lexicographer and printer and publisher. In the first part of the sixteenth century the work in either rôle was still novel and surrounded with difficulties not easily surmounted. Estienne vigorously contended with the obstacle to each and all and had to face besides those which the theologians of the day strove incessantly to throw in the path of a supporter of the Reformed Religion. At the age of about fifty, in the full ripening of his remarkable intellectual and moral energies, he felt it needful to take refuge in Geneva, near to and possibly under the [illegible] of Calvin, [illegible] years later he died. The extraordinary amount and variety of labor he accomplished under these conditions bears evidence of his native gifts and of his extreme devotion in the employment of them.

Our author pays cordial tribute to the energy which sustained Estienne in his long labors, to his dignity in polemics, his modesty in his erudition, and his honesty as a printer, qualities not common in the sixteenth century. This is not the place to examine the critical value of Prof. Brandon's work, but we desire to call attention to the careful and candid spirit in which it is done and to commend his monograph to those interested in the study of the beginnings of the dictionary now carried to such an elaborate stage.

A BACONIAN IDEA.

One would not expect a person who believes, in spite of all internal and external evidence to the contrary, that the plays and poems signed by William Shakespeare were written by Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam, to respect the command to posterity in the epitaph on Shakespeare's tomb or to heed the curse uttered therein on him that "moves my bones." Indeed, we fancy that few Shakespeareans nowadays believe that the poet himself wrote or even dictated the doggerel epitaph. We should not, perhaps, dwell too reverently on the epitaph. But only a rabid Baconian would ever father the suggestion, which is now going the rounds of the English press, that the tomb in Stratford Church be opened and searched for "evidence." Yet what can a Baconian possibly expect to find in the tomb of the Stratford burgher who, Baconians insist, did not write the plays or care a fig for a poet's laurels?

It seems that the Rev. Walter Begley, who rediscovered "Nova Zolyma," translated it, and introduced it to English readers as a work of Milton, is a stanch Baconian. He has recently uttered a protest against the public ignorance of "recent Baconian research" and the hindrance to the development of the Baconian idea caused by "Mrs. Gallup and her credulous maintainers." But if it were not for Baconians like Mrs. Gallup, Ignatius Donnelly, and this person who wants to dig up poor Shakespeare's bones, the public would take no notice at all of Baconism. These folks are amusing.

BENEDICK.

Hubert Bland, who contributes to The Daily Chronicle of London an article on "Women as Novelists," seems to us either very much behind the times or afflicted with a sort of intellectual strabismus. He admits that it is not so easy as it used to be to detect the sex of the author of an anonymous novel, but in that part of his argument we do not follow him at all. It seems to us that the detection of sex in an anonymous novel must be precisely as easy now as it was when George Eliot wrote "Scenes in Clerical Life" or Charlotte Brontë "Jane Eyre," and precisely as difficult. But Mr. Bland finds certain "obvious notes of femininity," in the work of all women novelists. One of these is the writing of the name of Shakespeare's Benedick as Benedict. But this is not peculiar to women novelists. Nearly all men who write call the hero of "Much Ado About Nothing" Benedict, and so dub a married man; and the practice has become so common now that it seems impossible to correct it. We are afraid that future editors of Shakespeare will have to change the "k" to a "t" and let it go at that. The other charges made by Mr. Bland against the women who write novels are too unimportant to excite discussion.

"ONE OF THE TWO."

One J. Masefield, writing in The Daily News of London of Herman Melville's sea stories, remarks:

> Herman Melville, one of the two excellent writers that America has produced, was born in New York City on the 1st of August, 1819. The same year gave birth to Walt Whitman, the second of the aforementioned two, and to James Russell Lowell, author of the "Biglow Papers."

This is a notable example of effrontery quite apart from its intentional slight to the memory of Lowell. Even English journalists are generally ready to admit the "excellence" of Hawthorne and Poe, though they may sneer at Bryant, Longfellow, Whittier, Emerson, and Thoreau.

A New Poet.

Richard G. Badger of Boston intends to introduce shortly a new poet to the reading world. Ethel Louise Cox, whose "Childhood Scenes" appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES, will publish a volume of lyric and dramatic poetry under his imprint.

FOR SPINSTERS.

We have received from Milwaukee, Wis., a small but important pamphlet prepared by Miss Stearns of 119 Prairie Street, that city, whose sponsors in baptism stood gravely by, presumably, while the minister named her Lutie. The title of Miss Stearns's pamphlet is "Books of Interest and Consolation to Spinsters," and it contains only fourteen pages, but it is worth having, and the compiler wishes to sell it, at 25 cents a copy, for the benefit of the Children's Free Hospital of Milwaukee.

Miss Stearns dedicates her pamphlet to "Miss Myrtle Reed, Spinster Pro Tem.," and uses for a motto a quite unanswerable question, to wit: "What is man that we should be mindful of him?" Her first list of books relates to spinsters, old maids, "bachelor maids," and spinsterhood. Her second list relates to bachelors, incorrigible and masculine bachelors? Why?

Miss Stearns has another motto on the next to the last page of her pamphlet. It is this: "I'd rather not be married and be sorry I wasn't, than be married and be sorry I was." And on the very last page is Punch's famous negative advice to persons about to marry. Why, then, the list of books about bachelors? But here it is, with eight titles. "Friendship" is a more understandable department, and under the title of "Love" Miss Stearns has grouped for the spinsters Emerson's essay on love, Mr. H. T. Finck's two extraordinary and quite harmless books, and one of Miss Singleton's compilations, "Love in Literature and Art."

Then follows a list of books dealing with love letters, or containing real love letters. There are twenty-two titles, and this seems to us dangerous ground for the spinsters. Balzac, the Brownings, Bulwer, Hugo, Laurence Houseman, Merimee, Dean Swift, all figure here. Equally hazardous reading for spinsters who desire peace of mind is recommended in some of the other departments, such as "Love Poems," with twenty-eight titles, including verses by Byron and Byrns, Mrs. Browning's undying sonnets, Herrick and Suckling, and various small anthologies. "Famous Love Affairs in Fact and Fiction" is yet another department, in which one notes "Aucassin and Nicolette," "Faust," Richard Hovey's "Launcelot and Guenevere," and "Romeo and Juliet," along with Longfellow's "Courtship of Miles Standish."

***

There are also a baker's dozen of titles under the head of "Marriage," and fifteen books are classified as "Love Stories of Many Lands." There are more solid works, however, in the department dubbed "Miscellaneous," wherein we find Baxter's "Saints' Everlasting Rest," Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy," and Fox's "Book of Martyrs," along with Mrs. Rorer's "How to Use the Chafing Dish" and Helen M. Winslow's "Concerning Cats."

***

Presumably the spinsters read everything. Nowadays they are the chief mainstay of authors and publishers. Their tastes and demands control the book market. Miss Stearns has compiled her pamphlet with a view to interesting them as well as to consoling them. Few spinsters we know of, however, are seeking consolation and few, in their choice of reading, are willing to be guided by lists even as catholic as this of Miss Stearns. But this is a good list, and we fancy many men may find in it both interest and a reasonable measure of consolation.

A New Novelist.

Thomas Buchanan is a brand-new author, whose "The Castle Comedy" will come from the Harper press Sept. 8. Mr. Buchanan is a young Kentuckian, and his story is one of love and adventure. The scene is in England, the time that of the great Napoleon; the hero, appropriately, is half French, half English. Disguised as a dancing master, he comes to the home of his English kinsfolk and finds there a beautiful girl cousin, and all sorts of lively escapades and proper romantic adventures. The publishers speak with enthusiasm of the sprightliness of the story.

October Century Short Stories.

There will be six short stories in the October number of The Century Magazine. They are "A Ready Letter Writer," by Miriam Michelson; "Jathrop Lathrop's Cow," by Anne Warner, in the Susan Clegg group; "The Thorn That Pricked," a studio story, by Grace Ellery Channing; "Love at Long Distance," by James Raymond Perry; "Concerning My Aunt Ellen," by Gouverneur Morris, a story of life in France, and "Richard's Practicing," a monologue by Ruth Kimball Gardiner. These stories are to be illustrated respectively by Orson Lowell, Mrs. Shinn, Sterner, Cassel, Guipon, and Miss Cory.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1904.]

LONDON, Sept. 2.—William Flavelle Monypenny has undertaken to write the life and edit the letters of Lord Beaconsfield, in accordance with the plans of Beaconsfield's literary executors. He is a journalist of high standing, and has been a contributor to The Spectator and assistant editor of The Times. Mr. Monypenny is an Irishman, and was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and Balliol, Oxford. He was editor of The Johannesburg Star at the outbreak of the Boer war, and obtained a commission in the Imperial Light Horse. He served the Government in various capacities throughout the war. He is a young man (only thirty-eight) and has no literary fame. But the choice is thought to be the best that could be made, in the circumstances, to carry out the work which was delayed throughout the life of the late Lord Rowton, who, as Montagu Corry, was Disraeli's private secretary and was always expected to write his biography.

***

Fisher Unwin will publish next Monday a book by Mrs. Catherine Bearne entitled "A Leader of Society at Napoleon's Court." It is the story of Laura Permon, who married Marshal Junot, after the Duc d'Abrantes. The Permons and the Bonapartes were friends, and Mrs. Bearne's book contains many pictures of Napoleon, especially as a young man.

New Set of Thackeray.

George D. Sproul is preparing a new edition, to be called the Bedford Edition, of the complete works of William Makepeace Thackeray. It will be in thirty-two volumes and limited to 1,000 sets. The books will be printed from a new font of type, and will be registered and numbered. The composition, electrotyping, and printing are being done by the University Press, Cambridge, Mass. The paper will be all-rag and deckle edged. The books will be issued in two styles of binding—in English silk cloth with paper labels, and in three-quarter Turkey morocco with Morris paper sides.

Special introductions have been written for each of the important novels and many of the shorter ones. The selection of writers was made by M. H. Spielmann, author of "The Hitherto Unidentified Contributions to Punch," and F. G. Kitton. Each volume will also have as frontispiece—in photogravure—a drawing by some well-known artist made especially for this edition. In addition to this, the designs made by Thackeray himself will be included. These will be on full-page plates printed on Japanese paper, and tipped in the book. In all, there will be about 1,500 illustrations.

Among those who are writing introductions are Walter Herries Pollock, Sir Wemyss Reid, William Archer, George E. B. Saintsbury, Edmund Gosse, A. T. Quiller-Couch, Andrew Lang, Austin Dobson, Dr. Richard Garnett, M. H. Spielmann, Justin McCarthy, Arthur Waugh, Harold Begbie, Laurence Housman, and W. M. Rossetti. The artists who are making the frontispiece include H. M. Brock, Wal. Paget, G. F. Jacomb-Hood, L. Raven-Hill, Gertrude Demain-Hammond, W. Hatherell, S. Parkes, Fred Pegram, F. H. Townsend, John H. Bacon, Harold Copping, Balliol Salmon, R. H. Steer, Gunning King, and Claude A. Shepperson. The first three volumes, containing "Pendennis" and "Lovel the Widower," are about to be issued. From next month on the sections will appear at the rate of one every two months.

Influences of the Weather.

Prof. Edward Grant Dexter of the University of Illinois calls his book on "Weather Influences," which the Macmillan Company is publishing, an "essay." He explains in his sub-title that it is "an empirical study of the mental and physiological effects of definite meterological conditions." He discusses the sources and nature of weather proverbs, the weather lore of the "skyey influences," animal weather lore, "The Empirical Problem," "The Child and the Weather," crime, insanity, health, suicide, drunkenness, and attention and the weather, the weather and literature, closing the book with a summary of weather effects. The introduction is written by Cleveland Abbe, LL. D., who, after speaking of the relation of climate to diseases, the effect of the weather on persons, &c., writes:

> When speaking of climatic influences we must not forget that clothing, food, National customs, or other features of our environment, may very largely counteract the climatic influence proper. The migrations of the various races of men, the processes of acclimatization, the evolution of races and racial characteristics have been going on for a much longer period than is ordinarily supposed. The development of the present characteristic races of the globe has required not the 5,000 years of Ussher's chronology, nor yet the 50,000 years by which we may estimate the antiquity of many archaeological remains, but rather 500,000, or some such great period as that which has elapsed since the beginning of what geologists know as the Quaternary epoch, when Pleistocene man evolved from his Pliocene ancestors.

Prof. Dexter has provided tables, diagrams, a bibliography, and a full index. In the chapter on the relation of literature to the weather examples are given from the writings of different authors showing the influences of the variable atmosphere on them and their productions.

United States History at Large.

"The American Nation" is the title of a monster history of the United States in twenty-six volumes which Messrs. Harper & Brothers have in hand, and expect to have completed within the next few years. The editor is Albert Bushnell Hart, Professor of History of Harvard University, and the separate volumes are assigned to separate historical specialists, chiefly professors in American Universities. Dr. Hart, as editor, is to be assisted by advisory committees appointed by the historical societies of Virginia, Massachusetts, Texas, and Wisconsin. The first five volumes will be ready this Autumn and the titles and authors are as follows: Vol. I., "The European Background of American History," by E. P. Cheyney, A. M., Professor of European History, University of Pennsylvania; Vol. II., "American Conditions of American History," by Livingston Farrand, A. M., Adjunct Professor of Anthropology, Columbia University; Vol. III., "Spain in America," by E. G. Bourne, Ph. D., Professor of History, Yale University; Vol. IV., "English in America," by Lyon G. Tyler, President of William and Mary College, Virginia; Vol. V., "Colonial Self-Government," by Charles M. Andrews, A. M., Ph. D., Professor of History, Bryn Mawr College. To the twenty-six volumes of text will be added a volume of indexes and an atlas, while the other volumes also will be illustrated with pictures and maps. The publishers expect to complete from five to ten volumes each year till the vast work is accomplished.

R. Macauley.

Some Good Sellers.

The late Dr. Osgood Mason's "Telepathy and the Subliminal Self" is reported by Henry Holt & Co. to have gone into a sixth edition, and the twenty-fourth edition of Mrs. Voynich's "Gadfly" is also announced.

The third edition is announced by Little, Brown & Co. of Miss Waller's "Wood Carver of 'Lympus," and the fourth of E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "Anna the Adventuress."

McClure, Phillips & Co. are sending to press a second edition of Ferris Greenslet's biography of Walter Pater; fourth edition of Mrs. Keays's "He that Eateth Bread With Me," and Charles A. Eastman's "Indian Boyhood;" a second edition of Mme. Albanesi's "Susannah and One Other;" a fourth edition of John Burroughs's anthology, "Songs of Nature;" sixth edition of Clarence L. Brownell's "Heart of Japan." The same house announces that Stewart Edward White's new book of tales of lumbering life in the Northwest forests, "Blazed Trail Stories," has gone into a second edition two weeks before its publication, Sept. 15.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. report that the advance orders on "The Affair at the Inn," by Kate Douglas Wiggin and others, have already made it necessary to enlarge the size of the first edition, although the book will not appear until Sept. 17. They also report the eighth printing of "The Book of Saints and Friendly Beasts," by Abbie Farwell Brown, and a third of John W. Foster's "American Diplomacy in the Orient."

A fifth edition of the first series of "Home Thought," by "C.," (Mrs. James Farley Cox,) will be issued at once by A. S. Barnes & Co. These two volumes have been recommended by Western States for public school libraries.

Holland and its People.

The book on "Holland," painted by Nico Jungman and described by Beatrix Jungman, will very shortly be sent out by the Macmillan Company. It is included in the series of imported books illustrated in color in which are Menpes's "Japan," "The Durbar," and "World's Children"; "Egypt," by Talbot Kelly, "The Holy Land," by the Rev. John Kelman and John Fulleylove, Thomas Okey's "Venice," and W. Martin Conway's "The Alps," painted by A. D. McCormick.

"Holland" contains 75 colored illustrations engraved and printed at the Menpes Press. Mr. Jungman has portrayed men, women, and children, scenes, and views of the different parts of Holland which he visited. Pictures are given of Zeeland, North Brabant, South Holland, Utrecht, Gelderland, Overysel, Drenthe, Gronigen, Friesland, and North Holland. Among the towns and villages described are Volendam, Axel, Goes, Veere, Delft, Hague, Zaandam, Amsterdam, Marken, Zandvoort, Elspeet, Hulst, &c.

While Mr. Jungman painted Mrs. Jungman studied the customs, costumes, and prospects of the people in whose homes both artists were frequent guests. In the first chapter the author describes "the best-looking old Dutchman you can imagine:"

> He was dressed in weather-stained velvet with a short round coat, and the peculiar round-brimmed hat which is worn all over Zeeland. It suits the Dutch style of coiffure. I can picture to myself how the barber works. The hair is allowed to grow pretty long before it is cut at all; then, I think, it is brushed smoothly and evenly from a given point on the cranium; a bowl is clapped on the head, and the hair cut exactly by the brim; and there you have the Zeeland fashion! That, or something like it, must be the method of procedure. The old man, thus attired and barbered, was smoking a very long pipe, liberally draped with silver chains. The buttons at his throat were of finely wrought gold, and everything pointed to his being a gentleman of means.

"Up Through Childhood."

"Up Through Childhood," by George Allen Hubbell, Ph. D., Vice President of Berea College, which G. P. Putnam's Sons will publish Sept. 6, is a "study of some principles of education in relation to faith and conduct." It is the result of lectures before various classes and institutions. It "rests," the author writes in his closing chapter, "upon two fundamental considerations. The first is that the long period of infancy gives opportunity to train the young child for the duties and responsibilities of life, and the second, that this training is worth giving because of the strong religious instinct which is native to the character of every well-born child."

The volume is divided into four parts. Part I. deals with "The School of Life," and discusses life as opportunity, that aim of education which will make it possible to use this opportunity aright, and the institutions of education which contribute to the unfolding and instruction of the child. Part II. deals with the teacher in relation to his work, and passes on to the teacher's preparation, his relation to the Bible, and his relation to the child. Part III. deals with the child in all stages of his growth from birth to adult life. Part IV., entitled "The Graduate," contains a summary of the "rounded life," in which are included a discussion of the conditions and results in the individual life and a study of the conditions of society. The author writes, in the part devoted to "The Learner," concerning the forming of good habits:

> For the formation of a new habit it is desirable: (1) To put all the energy possible into the action which you wish to make habitual. * * * (2) You will keep away from those surroundings which will act against the establishment of the desired habit. In short, avoid temptation. * * * (3) Every time there is an opportunity, repeat the action until it becomes a habit. (4) Allow no exception to occur while the habit is in the critical stage of formation. * * * (5) etc. * * A complete surrender to the ideas which you wish to establish means victory.

Dr. Frank Morton McMurry of Teachers' College, New York, has written the introduction.

FROM READERS.

"To Carry" for "To Lead," and Dean Ramsay's "Reminiscences."

I.

New York Times Book Review:

THE "Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character," by Dean Ramsay, states in an anecdote that the word "carry," used, for instance, in an order to a servant, "Carry any ladies that call up stairs," is a Scotticism. A correspondent of yours would lead one to infer if used in this sense it is an Americanism. But the anecdote in itself from which the above is taken is more "worth while" than a discussion of the origin of this use of the word. The anecdote is from two of one person, and as it is difficult to separate them, I give them both:

There have been some very amusing instances given of the matter-of-fact obedience paid to orders by Highland retainers when made to perform the ordinary duties of domestic servants, as when Mr. Campbell, a Highland gentleman, visiting a country house, and telling Donald to bring everything out of the bedroom, [meaning doubtless his personal belongings, his luggage,] found all its movable articles—fender, fire-irons, &c.—piled up in the lobby, so literal was the poor man's sense of obedience to orders! And of this he gave a still more extraordinary proof during his sojourn in Edinburgh, by a very ludicrous exploit. When the family moved into a house there, Mrs. Campbell gave him very particular instructions regarding visitors, explaining they were to be shown into the drawing room, and on no account used the Scotticism, "Carry any ladies that call up stairs." On the arrival of the first visitors Donald was eager to show his strict attention to the mistress's orders. Two ladies came together, and Donald, seizing one in his arms, said to the other, "Bide ye there till I coma for ye," and in spite of her struggles and remonstrances, ushered the terrified visitor into Mrs. Campbell's presence in this unwonted fashion.

By the way, it is surprising how few reading Americans are familiar with these "Reminiscences," but I suppose one must be a Scot fully to appreciate their pawkiness; and probably because my ancestry is only remotely and partially Scotch, (though I bear the surname—with many others—of "Scotland's typical scholar,") I do not get their full flavor. It is hard to have a favorite anecdote in these reminiscences, but here is a bright one to me:

On the first introduction of Tractarianism into Scotland, the full choir service had been established in an Episcopal church, where a noble family had adopted those views, and carried them out regardless of expense. The lady who had been instrumental in getting up these musical services was very anxious that a favorite female servant of the family—a Presbyterian of the old school—should have an opportunity of hearing them. Accordingly she very kindly took her down to church in the carriage, and on returning asked her what she thought of the music, &c. "Ou, it's verra bonny; but, oh, my lady, it's an awfu' way of spending the Sabbath!" The good woman could only look upon the whole thing as a musical performance.

Here is an incident sent me which is worthy of a place in the reverend Dean's work:

A Mr. Baird, who was one of the instances of the great fortunes made in the iron industry in Scotland, having risen from a laborer to be worth about two million pounds, was once dining with the Duke of Hamilton, and his Grace said that he had not had the pleasure of meeting any of his brothers. He replied, "And nae great loss, my lord; they're all brutes but me."

The following is a reminiscence of my own: A Scot of my surname called on me because some of our business letters had been confounded. After stating his errand he startled me by saying in strong accent, the words being run together, but "disagreeable" and "quarrelsome" prolonged and with great emphasis: "You belong to a quarrelsome and disagreeable race; the last man in Scotland hung for stealing was of our name—he stole the Duke of Hamilton's watch; and won't you come up to dinner at my house next Sunday?" He was an elderly man, and Carlyle-like, but entirely self-educated. He died a power in his trade, though he came to this country with only $79 in his pocket, a wife and twelve children.

The Scot has humor, which is more lastingly refreshing than wit. Wit is denied him by Sydney Smith, who said—or something like it, I can't quote accurately without the text before me: "It is easier for a Campbell to enter the kingdom of heaven than to get a joke through his head."

The Publisher Lloyd.

New York Times Book Review:

The great popular publisher referred to on your Page 566 of Aug. 20th is probably my old friend Edward Lloyd, with whom I was associated in his first publishing enterprise, viz., "The String of Pearls" and "Sweeney Todd, the Fleet Street Barber," two bloodcurdling romances which, with "Varney the Vampire," provided the funds to launch out into deeper waters. It was a masterstroke of enterprise to give away Nos. 2, 3, and 4 with No. 1, No. 4 (to be continued) breaking off in each case very artistically, at a tantalizing moment. With the money earned by these kitchen tales Lloyd started The Clerkenwell News, at first a mere advertising sheet of "Want Places" and "Servants Wanted," canvassing for which was pretty hard work. It was indeed a curiosity of advertising, but it paid so well at a shilling an advertisement that in a few months The Chronicle was started, and almost from the first became a recognized London oracle. The imperative need of an uninterrupted supply of paper led to the establishment of the paper mills at Ham and Faversham, which business was greatly assisted by his clever, unscrupulous, but always quick-witted manager, Edmund Routledge, who had a long connection with the firm, and grew rich and respected as the head of the marshes of Acton.

"Alonzo and Melissa."

New York Times Book Review:

My attention has been called to a communication in THE BOOK REVIEW of June 4 by J. Willoughby of Brooklyn, in which he says: "In my boyhood days, some seventy years ago, there fell into my hands a story entitled 'Alonzo and Melissa,' and even now I can hardly repress a shudder over its terrible horrors. The scene was partly on Long Island and partly in Charleston, S. C., but it was, I have been told, an adaptation from the German. Can any of your readers recall it?"

The story was written from real fact, and the scenes were laid in Connecticut and South Carolina, and not Long Island, as Mr. Willoughby seems to remember. The author of the story was Daniel Jackson, Jr., my grandfather. Two small editions were printed, one with the old-fashioned "s," and the other in the regular type. The edition of which I have a copy was printed in 1811. The book contained about 275 pages—only a very few of which are in existence—was well bound in sheep covers, and its pages are now yellow with their fourscore years of service.

Probably there has been no fiction in this valley that has created more interest in its time than this story. Many still remember, or have heard their mothers speak of it. It belonged to the limited family libraries of three-quarters of a century ago, if parents were not too strict Puritans to tolerate a fictitious tale among the few severe works that made up their literary treasures. The extent of the fiction of that day was "Robinson Crusoe," "Gulliver's Travels," "Charlotte Temple," "Alonzo and Melissa," and a few others of this sort.

"Alonzo and Melissa" is a love story told in quaint style, with many exciting situations in it to harrow up the feelings and provoke sympathy. It is not free from faults of grammar and diction, but is sufficiently distressing to have made the tears of our grandmothers flow over the persecutions of the devoted pair.

From the private papers of my father, Dr. A. H. W. Jackson of Grand Isle, Vt., I glean the following, which may perhaps be found interesting at this time, and especially to the older readers of "Alonso and Melissa":

"My father's ancestors were farmers or gardeners, and came from Long Island. Father (Daniel Jackson, Jr.) was born in Fern, N. Y., May 31, 1790. He was a frail child, but early showed a fondness for books beyond his years. He was given all the advantages of the times. He taught school when very young. I have heard him say his first school teaching was the Winter before he was eighteen. He made that his principal business till 1822. While he was teaching in the Plattsburg Academy, in about 1808-10, he became acquainted with two officers stationed at Plattsburg who were from Connecticut. They told him about Alonzo and Melissa, gave him the points of the story, and wished him to write it out and have it published in a book. The eldest officer of the two said he was a cousin of Melissa and knew the facts he gave, and this was the way he came to write the story. The mechanical work of the book was done at The Republican office in Plattsburg, N. Y., which was owned at that time by Asariah C. Flagg."

It has been the intention of the writer for some time to have this story republished. Previous to the death of my father, in 1889, he told me he had the original manuscript somewhere among his papers, but it has never been found, although in the attic there are several old chests which have never been disturbed since his death.

Squeers of Dotheboys Hall.

New York Times Book Review:

Referring to your reply to "A. K." concerning the original of Squeers in "Nicholas Nickleby," perhaps I may be permitted to say that in the course of the rambles afterward described in the book, "A Literary Pilgrimage," I visited the place of Dotheboys Hall and carefully examined the matter of the identity of Shaw with Squeers, the "measther" of the school. The aspect of Bowes, "the delightful village of Dotheboys," as described in Squeers's advertisement, is dreary in the extreme. A single steep street extends along a hill which is crowned by the church and ancient castle; moors decline sharply on every side, leaving the village bare and often exposed to a wind "fit to knock a man off his legs," as Squeers remarked to Nicholas. A rather cosy inn in the midst of the village was Dickens's lodging when he visited the place. At that time half the houses in the vicinity were "academies." In one of them Cobden was some time a pupil. The large house at the summit of the hill Dickens depicted as Dotheboys Hall—a name by which it was long locally called after the appearance of the tale. It is a long, heavy, two-storied structure, with many windows along its front, and, despite now bowering vines and foliage, presents an aspect so cheerless that one can scarcely conceive of a worse domicile for the neglected children. Through an archway could be seen the pump which was frozen the first morning of Nicholas's stay, and beyond it the garden which, by a surprising mistake, Dickens has a pupil weed on the same freezing Winter day. The master of this school was Shaw, who is still remembered by a few in the place; in person he was not unlike Squeers. His family corresponded in number to Squears's; a quondam pupil of his told me Johnny Shaw was fairly drawn as Wackford Squeers; but Miss Shaw was a lady of some refinement, and was in no sense like the spiteful Fanny of the tale. Shaw's was the largest of the schools, and he hired barns in which to lodge the overflow of scholars. A farm attached to his house was cultivated by the pupils, whose chief diet was oatmeal, scanty diet and liberal work, and flogging was the rule.

Dickens averred that Squeers was only the representative of a class, but the general identification of Shaw's school as the typical Dotheboys and the odium consequent thereupon wrought its ruin and the death of its master and mistress. From the testimony of Shaw's neighbors, I judged that this odium was not wholly deserved; some children, it seems, enjoyed their life there, and were fond of their master. Others, on the contrary, were evidently unhappy. Of the 45, so far as the owners of this school were concerned.

Relatives of Shaw lately occupied Dotheboys Hall, which had become a farmhouse, and other relatives and descendants are respectable and respected denizens of the vicinity.

Another Sue Book.

New York Times Book Review:

While the argument in regard to Sue's works is on, I would be pleased to have some reader of THE BOOK REVIEW give me the title of one of his novels, a portion of the title page of which in the copy I possess is torn away. The remaining part is: "John the Alchemist, by Eugene Sue, author of 'Wandering Jew,' 'Mysteries of Paris,' &c."

There are forty-five chapters, a few as follows: I. "The Peasant Girl and the Cavaliers." II. "The Constable and the Lover." XI. "The Captain of the Three Companions and the Lady with the Veil." XIV. "The Count de Lerin and His Page." XVII. "The Hut of the Jewess." XXIV. "The Queen and Her Favorite." XLV. "Vengeance." The beginning of the first chapter:

The Autumn of 1461 was fast hastening into the withered arms of Winter, when a comely and elegant peasant maiden made her appearance at the door of a cottage in the skirts of a small town of Mendaria, in Navarre, where began the extraordinary events we are about to relate.

The beginning of the last chapter:

Leonora came in great anxiety to receive the remedy for her ailments. "Have you that?" she said on entering, while she fixed her eyes with disquietude on Ximeno's sombre countenance. He slightly raised his eyelids, and after regarding her with look of melancholy indifference, answered with simplicity: "That! and what is that?" "The remedy, the antidote," answered Leonora, alarmed at such a cold reception.

Some of the characters are Don Luis de Beaumont, Count de Lerin, Don Jann II., Don Quigo de Stuniga, Fortunia Garceas, Carlos, Sancho, Moses Pierris, Dona Leonora de Fax, Dona Blanca de Navarre, Princess of Viana, Ximeno.

Needed Law Book.

I.

New York Times Book Review:

Referring to the editorial in THE BOOK REVIEW dated Aug. 20, 1904, entitled "A Needed Law Book," you may be interested in learning that this company now has in course of preparation just such a work as you describe. It will constitute the concluding part of our "Federal Statutes, Annotated," which is now going through the press and four volumes of which have already been published. The Constitution will be taken up article by article and section by section, and under each article and section will be placed concise statements of the exact holdings of the courts relative to the various constitutional provisions.

New York Times Book Review:

Your editorial suggesting the need of a book that shall tell the layman precisely what the Constitution means according to legal interpretation was perhaps written in forgetfulness of the late Judge Cooley's "Principles of Constitutional Law." This little book will not be confounded with his greater work on "Constitutional Limitations." The "Principles" is an elementary treatise that has gone through several editions. It covers briefly, but at sufficient length to serve the purposes of the ordinary lay student, the entire field of constitutional law; that is, the judicial interpretation of the Constitution of the United States.

New York Times Book Review:

I read your editorial in last Saturday's edition entitled "A Needed Law Book," and while I agree with the writer that a book on constitutional law giving the judicial interpretation of the various phases of the Constitution should be in the hands of every public writer on current events, I desire to call your attention to the "Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States," by the Hon. Roger Foster of the New York bar. In his invaluable treatise Mr. Foster has adopted the plan suggested in your editorial, and while he has conceived a three-volume work, so far only one volume has been realized. If Mr. Foster fails to complete his work it will be to the lasting regret of his profession, and of a large circle of readers. Let us not hope that.

Tapp's "Anglo-Saxon Institutions."

New York Times Book Review:

I have just completed reading the "Story of Anglo-Saxon Institutions," published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, and of which Sidney C. Tapp, the Georgia lawyer, is the author. It is the clearest presentation of the origin and growth of the Anglo-Saxon conception of government that I have ever read. The author's presentation of the conflict between Normanism and Anglo-Saxonism is a great historical argument for popular rights and republican government against plutocracy and monarchy.

Any citizen of ordinary intelligence can read this work and obtain a clear conception of the struggles that popular rights and republican government have had to undergo for centuries before developing into the American Republic.

The book should be read by every American youth, for in it is the essence of the principles of the American Union. It will be clear to any one who may read the work that the author is a great believer in popular rights and self-government, and throughout this work he was inspired by a patriotic motive. The book should have an audience, not only with the American people, but in all parts of the civilized world, for it is a masterpiece. It will live as a classic work in Anglo-Saxon literature.

Esperanto.

New York Times Book Review:

I note that Mr. W. L. Alden speaks slightingly of Esperanto, and seriously doubt if he has given the subject any serious examination. The value of an international language will be conceded by all, and its dissemination will be in direct ratio with its ease of accomplishment and the philosophical basis on which it is founded.

At present there are probably more than 50,000 persons more or less familiar with the language. There are more than a dozen periodicals published in Esperanto, including one devoted to pure science, the Internacia Scienca Revuo. It also possesses a growing literature, partly original and partly translations. Of these I may mention Shakespeare's "Hamlet," Homer's "Iliad," the opening lines of which are readily comparable with the original Greek.

While the word roots are mainly traceable to Latin, a few are taken from English and German, and one, the conjunction "and," ("kaj,") is apparently from the Greek.

The grammar is simplicity itself, as the parts of speech are recognised by the terminal letters, "o" for a noun, "a" for an adjective, "e" for an adverb. There is no grammatical gender as in French or German, and the feminine (sexual) gender is indicated by the letters "in" preceding the terminal letter, as "patro," father; "patrino," mother; "frato," brother; "fratino," sister. In French there are more than 2,000 verbal terminations. In Esperanto there are but twelve: "As," (present,) "is," (past,) "os," (future,) "us," (conditional,) "I," (infinitive,) and "u," (imperative,) "Auta, into, and outa" are the terminations of the participles of the active voice, and "ata, ita, and ota" of the passive.

Any one with a liberal education can acquire a good working knowledge of Esperanto in a few weeks. Should any of your readers desire further information concerning Esperanto you are at liberty to place my name and address at their service.

Mandan Territory.

I.

New York Times Book Review:

Several communications have appeared in THE BOOK REVIEW concerning the subject of "Mandan Territory," the query being: "Was there such a territory in the United States?" I may say that the confusion on this point appears to come from the limitation given to the word "territory" by your correspondents. As a political division of the United States there was never a Mandan Territory, but there was such a territory in the sense of the country of the Mandans, as we might say the Iroquois territory, or the territory of any other tribe that ever had a home in the region we now hold. That of the Mandans was on the Missouri, in what is now North Dakota.

All that part of the country bounded on the North by British America; on the east by the Missouri River and Iowa; on the south by the Platte River and Indian Territory; on the west by the Rocky Mountains. If the inquirer will read Lewis and Clark's Expedition, by Hosmer, she will learn of the Indian conditions of Mandan District, and all about the condition and habits of the Siouxs, Mandan, Minnetaree, and Shoshone Indians, who then inhabited this happy hunting ground.

Titles Repeated.

New York Times Book Review:

How long a time may a book retain title to a title? WINSTON CHURCHILL.

John L. Lane Returns to the Attack in the Matter of the Picture of Lincoln in "The Crisis."

New York Times Book Review:

IN your issue of Aug. 13 "J." of Pittston, Penn., objects to my objections to Churchill's pictures of Lincoln, and says I doubtless "was not a reader of books and newspapers during the campaign when the country lawyer [Lincoln] contested the Senatorship with the Democratic idol, Stephen A. Douglas." He then quotes from Grant's "Memoirs" a story that Gen. Grant told as to what Lincoln said about Alexander H. Stephens and an overcoat he wore.

He indorses Churchill's estimate of Lincoln by saying, "Mr. Churchill has set down the man [Lincoln] as he undoubtedly was."

I protested in your issue of July 28, against Churchill's delineation of Lincoln, and said his "Crisis" made "fools, knaves, and buffoons of Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, and all the [war] heroes of the Nation."

This charge is true, as can be seen by any person who will have patience to read the book. Now, to prove that the facts "lie within my competency," I will say:

First—I made the acquaintance of Mr. Lincoln in 1858 and knew him well and intimately from that time until the Spring of 1861.

Second—I not only was "a reader of books and newspapers during the campaign when the country lawyer [Lincoln] contested the Senatorship * * * with Stephen A. Douglas," but I also made, or helped to make, newspapers; not only at that time, [1858,] but before and afterward; and I also was a listener and note-taker at three of the joint discussions that took place at that time.

Third—I spent many days in Mr. Lincoln's company before, during, and after those campaign speeches, and up to the time he left Illinois for Washington, in the Spring of 1861, and during all that time I never heard a word from his lips nor saw an action of his that showed him to be fool, knave, or buffoon. I have heard him tell hundreds of his stories, and he had an infinite store of them, and I never heard a foolish, "smutty," or obscene one told by him in all that time. His stories always were apt and telling, but never filthy or foolish.

Mr. Lincoln may have been "provincial," (whatever that may mean,) as "J." says, but even if that be true, it does not follow that he was the knave, fool, or buffoon "The Crisis" makes him out to have been. As to Grant's story, I would say it was true, as I had it soon after Lincoln's remark was made to Grant, by one who was present and heard it.

To prevent your readers from thinking there was something very dreadful in the story, or that it proved Mr. Lincoln to be a fool, knave, or buffoon, I trust you will publish it as Grant told it. He said that after the visit of the Peace Commission in Hampton Roads (?) to Lincoln, and when Grant was present after the commission left, Alexander H. Stephens being one of the Commissioners, Lincoln asked Grant if he had seen the overcoat Stephens wore and if he [Grant] had seen Stephens take it off. On replying that he had, Lincoln said, "Well, didn't you think it was the biggest shuck and the littlest ear that you ever did see?" Grant fully understood, as would anybody that knew anything of corn growing in the Mississippi Valley, that Lincoln was likening the overcoat to the great husks our Indian corn often has when the ear inside is very small. As Stephens was a very small and almost dried up old man, and the overcoat an enormously large one, Lincoln's remark was very pertinent and humorous.

Grant did not know Mr. Lincoln before 1864, for he says, on Page 121 of Volume II. of his "Memoirs," he never saw Lincoln before he went to Washington to get his commission as Lieutenant General on March 9, 1864; hence it is plain that Grant really never knew the man Abraham Lincoln; but merely knew President Lincoln, his superior officer.

It is clear to my mind that "J." labors under the same delusions in regard to Mr. Lincoln that Mr. Churchill does; and both absorbed them from the same sources, viz., "Copperhead" newspapers and "Copperheads" and rebel men and women.

There are still living in Illinois hundreds of men and women who knew Lincoln as well or better than I, from whom Mr. Churchill could have got the facts about Mr. Lincoln, if he had wanted to give facts; while, in place of applying to them, he ranged around St. Louis and absorbed all of the lies and virulence that that city while he lived there, was full of.

Mr. Churchill's pictures of Grant, Sherman, Oglesby, and others are quite as untrue as were his representations of Lincoln.

One View of Mrs. Atherton.

New York Times Book Review:

After a careful reading of Gertrude Atherton's latest novel, "Rulers of Kings," I begin to see light as to why she is recently so scathing in her criticism of our best American magazines. Of course, sour grapes would be a grave accusation to suggest for so popular a novelist and one who seems at the present time so much in the public eye; but I dare to hope that if she had been willing to have "Rulers of Kings" appear serially in one of our leading magazines, it would have been barred out as too "lurid" for the general consumption, too highly seasoned for the accessible tables of our daughters and our sons. Except in the books of Zola I have rarely found such a preference for treading on thin ice, such a nice avoidance of what by another step would be degeneracy. Tolstoy, it is true, calls a spade a spade in all instances, and handles moral problems without gloves, but he does not strive for the subtle language which by its very insidiousness makes the imagination run riot. There are a number of poisons that, carefully labeled, do no harm; nay, are even beneficial, when prescribed by a competent physician for certain ailments, but we do not sprinkle them over the after-dinner bonbons, nor yet on the children's bread and butter.

The book is a composite of Marie Corelli, George Moore, Jules Verne, Emile Zola, and Ouida. I do not remember to have seen any of these authors in our best magazines, for which we should be duly thankful. Our American literature has been stigmatized as bourgeois and effeminate. The best bone and sinew in our National make-up, as well as the only red blood, is and must continue bourgeois. And as for the feminine element of our literature, it is to women we must look to keep it in existence at all, as our men are too busy or too bored to make or keep any literature alive. As women do occasionally stamp their idiosyncrasies on their sons, let us hope that the leaven, effeminate as it is, may in time raise man, with his great dormant capacity for scholarship, to a rank worthy of his mettle and befitting our great civilization.

I would suggest to Mrs. Atherton that her great admiration—Henry James—never offends the most fastidious taste, even when he handles such delicate problems as in "What Maisie Knew."

Poe's "Raven."

New York Times Book Review:

I read in your last issue the statement of Susan Archer Weiss, quoted from The Independent, arguing that the raven in Edgar Allan Poe's poem of that name might have originally been an owl, and basing the contention on her remembrance of a conversation she had with Poe and certain lines in the poem.

Would it not be well to recall what Poe himself said on the question? He wrote an "Essay on Poetry"—that is the title of the article, if memory serves—in which he described the genesis of "The Raven." Poe says that he first thought of making the bird a parrot, but abandoned the idea when he remembered that the parrot was the butt of many jokes, and the fact would naturally detract from the dignity of the poem. He then cast about for some other living thing, other than a human being, which could talk. The raven, he adds, is the only other bird or beast of the sort. Common sense would suggest that this is the plausible explanation of the presence of the raven. Owls cannot talk. Any one who has seen a raven knows that it, as well as the owl, has "the grave and stern decorum" to which Mrs. Weiss refers, as well as eyes with "all the seeming of a demon that is dreaming." For my own part, "The Raven" gains in strength by having the raven, a senseless messenger of fate, reiterating its message from a bust of Pallas, symbol of earthly knowledge, rather than having the messenger an owl, thus combining two symbols meaning the same thing. In other words, did not the poet contrast the decree of fate with the serenity and futility of learning? A LOVER OF POE.

Shall "the" Be Omitted?

New York Times Book Review:

Some time ago there was a discussion in one of the daily papers as to the propriety of omitting the article when speaking of boats in general and sailing yachts in particular. I think it awkward and inappropriate when applied to such a seemingly living thing as a sailing yacht. I would like to know if good usage permits one to drop it. I was reminded of this in reading Kipling's story in the September Metropolitan. He writes: "I chose to visit the H. M. S. Peridot." This is quite as bad as "the la grippe," which I overheard in conversation.

New York Times Book Review:

I have noticed with much interest the correspondence in THE BOOK REVIEW in relation to Sue's "Mysteries of the People." I have in my library at New York a complete set of the work in the original French, in twelve volumes, published at Brussels. The circulation of the work in France was not permitted during the empire of Napoleon III., and its translation into English was hampered by the English censor on the ground of its immorality, a charge wholly without foundation. Miss Booth many years ago began its translation, and I have a copy of the brief part she completed. I have also a few of the steel plates of the original issue, now more than fifty-four years since.

New York Times Book Review:

In Stanley J. Weyman's book "The Castle Inn" no explanation is made of the foundation of Julia's suspicion that her lover, Sir George Soane, is responsible for her abduction, because one of her captors had been seen by her speaking to her lover, and apparently about her. Why a man of Sir George Soane's rank should receive a note from the hand of a man who afterward hires himself out to assist in an abduction is left unexplained, and this lack seems to me a deficiency in an otherwise charming story, beautifully worked out.

Has this missing link in the chain of a most delightful plot been noted by others, or inserted in a subsequent edition? Mine is 1899, Longmans, Green & Co.

The Irish Dialect.

New York Times Book Review:

I have been reading of late some of O. Henry's short stories. I am surprised that such a close observer of dialect is not more careful in recording the conversation of the natives of the "Ould Dart." Did he ever hear an Irishman say "swate" for "sweet" or "wake" for "weak"? Did an Irishman ever say "fale like a quane" for "feel like a Queen"?

Why is it that a word in "se" keeps its sound in an Irishman's mouth, while a word such as "seat" or "speat" becomes "sate" and "spate"? PART IRISH.

A MEDIAEVAL ABBEY.

FOUNTAINS ABBEY. The Story of a Mediaeval Monastery. By George Hodges, D. D., Dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. Illustrated, with plans. Pp. 130. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $3.

The legend goes that the first Fountains Abbey was under a forest tree. The brethren found a shady elm and said their prayers there. Fountains Abbey was founded in the twelfth century by the Cistercian Order. Stephen Harding, an Englishman, was the reputed founder of the order. Stephen advocated the strictest economy. There was to be but a single candle in the place of worship, and all vestments "were to be of common stuff."

The country around was pleased with the piety of the Cistercians, and soon came contributions from the poor and the well-to-do. A gift of land was made the brethren; "it was full of thorns and rocks, and seemed a better dwelling for wild beasts than for men." A thatched hut was erected, the trunk of the elm being used for a roof pole. There were springs in the vicinity, hence the founders named the little monastery De Fontibus. Soon there came accessions to the order, but the means of support were still limited. Bread was often wanting. The legend runs that one day the Lord Christ, in the guise of a starving man, asked for food and shelter; there were but two loaves left in the house, and one of them was given Him. "And behold, within half an hour two men appeared from Knaresborough Castle with a plentiful supply of bread, over which the monks recited: 'Inasmuch as ye have done it,' of the Gospel." By the middle of the twelfth century Fountains Abbey had become of marked importance. There were many noblemen who, having sinned, asked that the fraternity should establish monasteries in their neighborhood. In 1146 the Bishop of Bergen came to Fountains, wanting to establish a Cistercian house in Norway, and accordingly thirteen of the brethren crossed the sea and found a home in an unknown land. There were many other colonists of the Cistercians in England.

The building of the abbey was probably begun in 1123, and was finally completed some ten years later. But additions were being constantly made. The architect was Geoffrey of Clairvaux. You can never look at one of these ancient monuments without a feeling of amazement, so wonderfully impressive are they. Superb was the design of the old architect and the skill of the workmen. With King John there came danger to the abbey. He was a rapacious sovereign and wanted money, but while other religious orders were pillaged, Fountains Abbey managed to escape him. The Rev. George Hodges, who has carefully examined all the ancient documents relative to Fountains Abbey, is most interesting when he presents the domestic life of the monks.

It in the early days the fare was of the simplest kind, when the monasteries increased in wealth the tables were much better served. A peculiar code of manners is still preserved, showing what was the etiquette of the brethren:

No brother was permitted to leave until the meal was ended, nor walk about when his companions were eating. Neither was he allowed to wash his cup with his fingers, though he might wipe it with his hand. He was forbidden to wipe either his hands or his knife on the tablecloth until he had first cleansed them on his bread. When he helped himself to salt it must be with his knife; when he drank, he must hold the cup with both hands. "Eyes on your plate, hands on the table; ears to the reader, heart to God."

Prosperous was Fountains Abbey and the other communities. The daughter house of Kirkstead, besides numerous farms in Lincolnshire, owned forty thousand acres of pasture land, with property in Boston, Lincoln, and London. There were flocks of sheep, and the brethren sold the fleeces to the Flemish traders. They owned mills and iron works. The worldly business of the monks must have taken much of their time. As late as the fourteenth century the Abbot held a seat in Parliament, where he wore his mitre.

Now came the Reformation, and it was the misfortune of the abbey to have had, just at this time, an incompetent head. In 1530 special charges were brought against the Abbot Thirsk. He was accused of pawning the jewels of the abbey. Fountains Abbey was doomed, for in 1539 Henry VIII. became its master. Confiscation followed; then robbery began, under the royal permission.

The gold and silver of the rich altars, with all things of value such as could be moved, were put in wagons and sent to the King. Distant though the abbey was from the town, the rumor of these proceedings would attract the crowd. And the crowd stole what they could. The servants of the Commissioners, who had a better chance, stole more according to their opportunity. They rode about in those days, from the wreck of one abbey to the ruin of another, with rich copes for traveling cloaks and chasubles for saddle cloths.

Pillage was general, and then fires were set going until the abbey was left in ruins. The after history of Fountains Abbey is, that the ground on which it stood was sold to Richard Gresham of London, who paid £7,000 for it. In the middle of the last century it came into the possession of William Aislabie, from whose granddaughter it passed, by will, to the Earl de Grey, the uncle of the present owner, the Marquess of Ripon.

R. W. Chambers's New Book.

It is announced that the third novel by Robert W. Chambers, in his series devoted to the American Revolution, with New York State for their scene, is entitled "The New Yorker," the two other stories in the series having been "Cardigan" and "The Maid at Arms." "The New Yorker" will be published [illegible] the future are to bring out Mr. Chambers's new books.

"The New Yorker" deals mainly with life in this city during the closing years of the Revolution, when the Tories were in full control and the horrors of the prison ships were enacted. The later chapters take readers to the Mohawk Valley and the final steps taken by Col. Marinus Willett in expelling the Tories and Indians from that part of the country. In one of these chapters Mr. Chambers describes the death of a character already famous in his stories, Capt. Walter Butler. "The New Yorker," before publication in book form, will be issued as a serial.

In writing these stories, Mr. Chambers has dealt with a region with which he has been familiar all his life, his country home having been at Broadalbin, which lies not far from Johnstown, the famous seat of the Johnsons, who figure so conspicuously in the Colonial and Revolutionary history of Central New York.

Beginning of Hebrew Stories.

The latest volume in the Crown Theological Library is Dr. John P. Peters's "Early Hebrew Story, Its Historical Background," which will be brought out next Tuesday by G. P. Putnam's Sons. The book consists of lectures delivered before the Bangor Theological Seminary in November, 1903. The lectures deal with the origin of the stories of Creation, Eden, the Flood, the Tower of Babel, and the literary and religious dependence of the Hebrew versions of these stories on foreign heathen, especially Babylonian, sources; the origin of the books in which the stories are contained, the nature of the material from which the writers drew the tales, what Hebrew material exists in the stories, and the religious value to the present day which these stories possess.

The first lecture deals with the date and origin of the literature in which the stories are contained and the historical setting which we are able to give to these early times, chiefly from discoveries in Babylonia and Egypt, and to a small extent to the discoveries in Palestine. The lectures following are entitled, "The Formation of Israel: The Origin of the Twelve Tribes," "The Patriarchs and the Shrines of Israel," "Survivals—Legendary and Mythical," "Cosmogony and Primeval History," and "The Moral Value of Early Hebrew Story." The last chapter closes with a consideration of the moral value of the book of Genesis. Dr. Peters says:

The child will find, I care not how pure and lofty the religious thought by which he is surrounded, uplift and help in these stories of Genesis. And the man who, in the development of his manhood, has kept, as he ought to keep, in touch with his childhood, and in touch as that childhood is or should have been with nature and with spirit, will find, even more possibly than the child himself, spiritual help and spiritual meaning in these tales. What he imbibed as a child will grow within him, and develop new meaning as he grows.

Warships.

Edward L. Attwood's "Warships: A Textbook on the Construction, Protection, Stability, Turning, &c., of War Vessels" is to be sent out at once by Longmans, Green & Co. The subject is treated of from the naval officer's point of view, some parts of it having been dealt with to meet these requirements. The text is illustrated with a large number of diagrams and a number of questions have been prepared as an appendix. These questions are designed to lead to inquiry and discussion. The work has been prepared in response to suggestions made to the author by a number of the senior naval officers taking the course in naval architecture at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich. It contains chapters on the strength of ships, framing of various types of ships, beams, pillars, decks, plating of the outer and inner bottoms, steering gears, coaling, ventilation, tonnage, buoyancy, displacement, stability at large angles of inclination, rules of mensuration for the calculation of areas and volumes, pumping, flooding, and drainage, corrosion and fouling, armor and deck protection, the rolling and turning of ships, the resistance and propulsion of ships, the design of warships, &c. The closing chapter contains "Notes on the Loss of H. M. S. Victoria."

The author will be recalled through his "A Textbook of Theoretical Naval Architecture." He is a member of the Royal Corps of Naval Constructors, and lecturer in naval architecture at the Royal Naval College. He has provided blank pages at the end of the present volume to note particulars and details peculiar to the ship on which an officer is serving and to note changes of practice which may occur. Although prepared for naval officers, the book will be of value as an introduction to the subject of naval architecture for students and apprentices.

"Shakespeare's Heroines."

A new edition of Mrs. Anna Jameson's "Shakespeare's Heroines—Characteristics of Women, Moral, Poetical, and Historical," is being published by E. P. Dutton & Co. This contains illustrations by W. Paget. Six of the pictures are in colors, and seventy in half-tone. The volume is printed on heavy calendered paper, with gilt edges. It is bound in gray cloth, with a design in two colors.

"My Lady of the North."

"My Lady of the North," the new novel published by A. C. McClurg & Co., is a war story with a novel development. Its strongest and most memorable chapter describes a fierce fight. A handful of Confederate and Union soldiers are fighting side by side in the defense of a beleaguered manor house surrounded by five times their number of murderous guerrillas, [illegible]

Views of Experts Here and Abroad on Matters of Interest in the World of Books.

FIELDING FOR GIRLS.—Fielding is thought broad, even coarse, but if he were merely broad and coarse we may be sure that Sir Walter Scott, whose mind was singularly fastidious and refined, would not have thought so highly of "Tom Jones" and "Amelia," as he did.

Speaking for myself, I consider Fielding may be regarded as a nerve tonic nowadays, an antidote to the morbid and neurotic twaddle which, under various disguises—romantic, sentimental, and historical—is consumed by girl and women readers.

If I had a daughter, I should certainly give her the works of Fielding. I should be sorry, of course, that she would have to make the acquaintance of many severe facts with which Fielding deals, but she would have to learn these things at one time or another, and I do not think she could learn them in a better way than by reading "Amelia." It is a true study of human nature on robust lines, and the moral Fielding draws is invariably sound and reasonable. Unreasonable novels do enormous harm.

The heroes drawn by Fielding are not models of good conduct, but he is always careful to give them excellent hearts, and if they are not capable of flights of poetic feeling, they are infinitely capable of steadfast affection.

In modern novels the tendency is to draw the men as meek, quiet, and lady-like, whereas the women indulge in extraordinary adventures and emotions. The women are rakes, and the heroes would seem to be timid spinsters. I prefer the old school.

What I most admire about Fielding is that, however self-indulgent his men may be, he always does splendid justice to the highest type of women. They are so strong, so sensible, and so pure, that they always emerge triumphant from all the perils, temptations, and influences which surround them.

And that is as it should be. It is as it always is in real life. The really good woman is always triumphant in the end.

But that is not the kind of good woman we get presented to us in a great deal of modern fiction. Thackeray's Amelia (of whom I am fond) was the beginning of the decadent type of stupid merit which has done so much to spread the tradition that a virtuous woman must be rather boring at best. And since little Amelia of "Vanity Fair" we have had a long procession of weak, silly, helpless beings in contrast with the longer train of brilliant, beautiful, unscrupulous sirens. There are sirens in Fielding, but they are not drawn from life, and, while he draws them with good humor, he takes no trouble to conceal their misery or their failures.—John Oliver Hobbes in The London Express.

POE AND MRS. SHELTON.—In regard to the engagement with Mrs. Shelton, it was broken by Mr. Poe himself in consequence, as we understood, of her refusing him a loan for the establishment of The Iris, [Stylus,] in the success of which she had no faith, and accusing him of wishing to marry her for her money. Poe himself, greatly disgusted, broke the engagement, and ceased his visits to her. He went for a stay of some days at the country home (Duncan's Lodge, on Broad Street, opposite the Lee Monument) of his friend, Mr. John Mackenzie, and I well remember that during his absence Mrs. Shelton one day came to see Mrs. Mackenzie, with whom she had no previous acquaintance, and had a private talk with her in the parlor, as was whispered in the family, about Mr. Poe's letters to her. I do not know what letters these were which she was so anxious to obtain and which he refused to give up unless she returned his own. There was certainly a bitter estrangement for a time, nor was there ever to us any evidence of a reconciliation—though a letter from Poe and one from Mrs. Shelton to Mrs. Clemm, now in evidence, would indicate that the engagement was renewed. And Mrs. Shelton, on Poe's death, donned "widow's weeds" of the deepest mourning. He himself always denied, even in public, that any engagement existed between himself and Mrs. Shelton, and spoke of the schoolboy love affair with her as a case of "measles." Observe also Mrs. S.'s own statement on Page 315 that she "was not engaged to him, but there was a partial understanding." With these contradictions the case is one difficult to be understood.

I did not know Mrs. Shelton, but saw her on two occasions—once when she called at Mrs. Mackenzie's, and again at Poe's lecture at the Exchange Hotel. She was a tall, rather masculine-looking woman, with good features, hollow cheeks, thin lips, and large blue eyes, with purplish shadows about them, which had once probably been handsome. She was richly dressed, but had not a particle of grace or style, and her countenance was wholly expressionless. She impressed me as being hard and cold—the type of a thoroughly respectable, sensible, matter-of-fact woman, with whom no one could associate an idea of romance or poetry. I heard her spoken of as "a rich widow," but she lived in a plain manner, in an ordinary, substantial brick house with a high square porch and not even a flower to ornament the front yard. Miss Van Lew once pointed out this house to me, a few doors above her own, saying: "I used to see Mr. Poe go in there when he first came to Richmond, but not during the last part of his stay here. Once or twice they walked out together, and we could not but notice the contrast between them even in size."—Susan Archer Weiss in The Independent.

WALPOLE AS A LETTER WRITER.—But if his atmosphere and outlook on life are changing and have changed, the letter writer remains the same incomparable social and political diarist. Gout, (and what a pitiable and increasing amount of it there is, general warrants, the settlers of the bigot royal, the sleepless self-seekings of Bute and the Grenville and Bedford groups, the mysterious eclipse of Chatham, cannot dull his pen; they only add the requisite touch of piquancy to his affected cynicism, to his sarcasms, to his unquenchable itching (despite all his avowals to the contrary) to know who has been entertaining whom and where, who is dead and what he or she has left and why, who is "decoding" or marrying, who is running off the rails and with whom. He is the same unique combination of the modern interviewer, (without his vulgarity, unless curiosity be vulgar) and the eighteenth century Grevville, the anticipator of the society journalist without his snobbery and falsehoods, the collector who posed as a dilettante but was angry when the profession was taken in earnest, the animal-loving egoist as profoundly interested in the weather and above all his own mental and physical symptoms as Laud was in the drops of blood that fell from his nose, and an egoist with a truly enviable power of touching in a vignette as pleasing to himself as it was to his correspondents and to us to-day. We open the volumes at random: Horace is at Bath and (of course) has been to hear Wesley preach. "There was a Scotch Countess of Buchan," he remarks, "who is carrying a pure rosy vulgar face to heaven, and who asked Miss Rich if that (i. e., Horace, mole qui vous parle) was the author of the poets." Assuredly we shall not forget my Lady Buchan. We open the volume again and our eye lights on this: "I love to contradict myself as fast as I can when I have told you a lie, lest you should take me for a chambermaid or Charles Townshend"; poor Charles! As if it was not enough to be damned to posterity as the author of a proposal which ended in the dismemberment of an empire.—London Saturday Review.

PRECOCIOUS POETS.—In no art save that of imaginative prose is maturity necessary to the highest flights. The painter, the composer, the poet, make a call upon faculties in which the intellect is not essentially involved; and consequently, despite the difficult technic of two at least of those arts, they may reach excellence very early. This is truer of the musician than of any other artist. He has no need of intellect; indeed, it may hamper him, as it hampered Wagner. A musician springs full-armed into life, as Athene from the head of Zeus.

Poets, too, very often come to their own precociously. If poets do not die young, as romance fables, they sing young. Poets are born, but prose writers are partly made. The proper poetical age is twenty or round about it. The long list of our songsters demonstrates this. Tennyson wrote perfect verses in his old age, and so may other poets if they live so long; but Tennyson also wrote in his extreme youth, and his verses were hardly less perfect. And Tennyson was a more intellectual poet than most.

It is probably true that every one with literary tastes is a poet in his or her teens. But as a rule we get over it, as we get over measles. Anyhow, as a rule people do not do us the disservice of placing our precocity on record. One cannot but regret that Miss Enid Welsford's tentative essays in verse, which have been lately published with a blare of trumpets, were not kept for the family circle. Many children write verses, and write them uncommonly well. It opens one's eyes to read the correspondence pages of such a magazine as St. Nicholas, in which the poetical effusions of little Americans are enshrined. It may be that the climate and the conditions of life force the pace with young America. To read the poems contributed is to come to the conclusion that in ten years the United States will be overflowing with poets. But they won't. Precocity signifies little or nothing. —H. B. Marriott Watson in The London Mail.

AETNA IN ANCIENT VERSE.—Descriptions of Aetna and Vesuvius have ever been a favorite theme for writers of both prose and poetry, the younger Seneca, in fact, complaining in one of his epistles that the topic had become trite and threadbare: "for this commonplace of poetry," as he calls it, "was fearlessly attempted again by Cornelius Severus even after it had been handled by Ovid, and more perfectly by Virgil."

Pindar's beautiful first Pythian ode, in honor of Hiero, has preserved for us not only the earliest, but at the same time one of the most graphic and altogether accurate accounts of Aetna in eruption, so that it is scarcely dubitable that the poet was an eye-witness of the outburst whereof he speaks. The latter is in that case to be identified with the second eruption mentioned by Thucydides, the date of which is referred to the year 475 B. C. The odist's few masterly lines depict very clearly the principal features of an active volcano, and it is to be noted that some of them, such as the emission of smoke by day and flames by night, were recognized as typical characteristics by later observers and copyists, of whom Aeschylus was the first.

Otherwise, however, was the case with Virgil, who, whether spectator or not of the disturbances which shook Aetna shortly before the Christian era, drew more upon his imagination than upon observed facts for the portrayal given by him in the Aeneid. Animated and suggestive as is the Latin singer's description of Aetna, it lacks the verisimilitude of Pindar's, and this defect has given rise to the criticism of which we are about to speak.

The first to point out the lesser accuracy of Virgil's verse, as compared with Pindar's, was a philosopher of Hadrian's time, named Favorinus or Phavorinus, all of whose writings are lost. This criticism of the Virgilian Aetna is preserved along with a host of interesting narrations in that curious scrapbook of Aulus Gellius, "Noctes Atticae."

Just as Pindar's verse was imitated by Aeschylus, so Virgil served as a model for the unknown author of "Aetna," a poetical description of more than 600 lines which abounds in scientific details. Although the authorship of this poem has been variously ascribed, the prevailing view of modern scholarship is that it is the work of Lucilius Junior, the philosophical friend and correspondent of the younger Seneca, with whose writings it shows an intimate agreement. Notwithstanding it has been twice [illegible] of Walter Savage Landor, [illegible] a list of ancient Aetna eruptions, refers to it casually as a "certain classical," Pindarus, however, in his classic as "Aetnaean," devotes considerable space to the scientific aspects of the poem, and traces a connection between the author's general theories of vulcanism and those of Posidonius.—Charles F. Brannan in The Popular Science Monthly.

PERILS OF IMMORTALITY.—There is no harder fate than to be immortalized as a fool; to have one's name—which merits nothing sterner than oblivion—handed down to generations as an example of silliness, or stupidity, or presumption; to be enshrined pitilessly in the amber of the "Dunciad," or in the delicate satire of Mme. du Deffand; to be laughed at forever because of Charles Lamb's impatient and inextinguishable raillery.

When an industrious young authoress named Elizabeth Ogilvy Benger—a model of painstaking insignificance—invited Charles and Mary Lamb to drink tea with her one cold December night, she little dreamed she was stiffening a deathless and unenviable fame, and that, when her half dozen books should have lapsed into comfortable obscurity, she herself should never be fortunate enough to be forgotten.

Miss Benger did more than hazard. She pursued the Immortals with malignant zeal. She bribed Mrs. Inchbald's servant maid into leading her cap and apron and tea tray, and so equipped, penetrated into the inmost sanctuary of that literary lady, who seems to have taken the intrusion in good part. She was equally adroit in seducing Mary Lamb—as the serpent seduced Eve—when Charles Lamb was the ultimate object of her designs. Coming home to dinner one day, "hungry as a hunter," he found to his dismay the two women closeted together, and trusted he was in time to prevent their exchanging vows of eternal friendship, though not—as he discovered later—in time to save himself from an engagement to drink tea with the stranger ("I had never seen her before, and could not tell who the devil it was that was so familiar") the following night. What happened is told in a letter to Coleridge. We sympathize hotly with Lamb when we read his letter; but there is something piteous in the thought of the poor little hostess going complacently to bed that night and never realizing that she had made her one unhappy flight for fame.—Agnes Repplier in Harper's Magazine.

NOVELS VERSUS OTHER BOOKS.—If, as booksellers believe, the demand for books other than fiction is growing more rapidly than is explained by a normal increase in the whole number of readers, the temptation will be strong to take every advantage, legitimate and otherwise, of the chance to achieve big circulations. And, in such event, we are likely to have a great serving up of books on history, biography, economics, sociology, and nature, all seasoned and garnished for the delectation of literary palates, which, being slow to distinguish between the imitation and the real, will rebel only when gorging enforces a diet. There are signs of something like this already in the eagerness with which all manner and kinds of books have recently been tumbled upon the market in response to the aroused interest in the literature of nature; and, while the protests against the outpouring which have come from a few devoted students of nature seem a little strained, the protests are not without reason. The very fact that an increased call for "serious" books is indicative of a more healthy mental digestion, and of a more profitable use of our robust literary capacities, should make us jealous of our administration. The abuse of an opportunity to educate people by widely circulating books which play with the great truths and with the facts of history would be even a greater misfortune than to give no encouragement to reading in this field. On the other hand, it should not be forgotten that, in every department of knowledge, there must be a primer as well as an advanced textbook, if it may be called that; and the volumes of history, biography, and the like which are to be put into the hands of thousands of beginners will accomplish little if they fail to bring their subjects within the grasp of the reader, and fall equally short of their aim if they do not present what they have to tell in a form to engage attention.—Churchill Williams in The World's Work

THE PETRARCH FESTIVAL.—For beauty and interest the "festa storica" easily carried off the prize of the week's doings. This represented the fête given in honor of Petrarch when, in 1330, he came in triumph to his native city. The real performance could scarcely have been more picturesque than its present revival.

It was held in the great "prato," or field, at the edge of the town, and began toward 7 o'clock, when the shadows were growing long and the moon shone clear in the fair evening sky.

Every costume had been carefully copied from old pictures, and the long procession as it wound around the field might have stepped from the frescoes of Benozzo Gozzoli. First came the heralds, followed by trumpeters and pipers, standard bearers and the Podesta. After him, his family, then other dignitaries in robes of office, pages, Judges, Captains, priests, and scholars in long, flowing mantles and scarlet caps like that of Dante in the Bargello portrait. Finally came Messer Francesco Petrarca himself, on a white horse led by pages, bowing and smiling, and looking extremely pleased with everything. Following him came "noble Romans," soldiers, and a crowd of the people, finished off by a mob of little boys, regular street urchins of the Middle Ages, who, in spite of their antique dress, ran and shouted as boys of all ages always do.

The whole company, having made a detour of the field, seated itself at one side, and the soldiers in armor came on at full gallop, to give an exhibition of their skill in an old game, very popular in mediæval times. This was the "Joust of the Saracen," and consisted in tilting with wooden lances at a huge figure of a Moor painted in the middle of the field. "A Moor," as an Italian writer says, "because the Moors

THE HABIT OF QUOTATION.—Since most of us find it easy to copy and difficult to invent, the habit of prolific quotation has grown with the growth of a certain hasty and idle spirit easily to be discerned in modern literature, and The London Saturday Review has recently stood for an honest and wholesome reaction in favor of writing neatly woven from the author's individual thought, and unbedecked with maxims from familiar sources. It offered some months ago a prize for the worst three "tags" in use at the present day, a tag being understood to mean a quotation that has grown stale with repetition. Hundreds flowed into the columns of The Review, and not until they were there did many a reader recognize how often their ages faces had been seen upon the pages of young books and magazines. Here are a few of them: "It is the unexpected that happens," "more honored in the breach than in the observance," "Homeric laughter," "the thin end of the wedge," "the right man in the right place," "there is much virtue in an if."

If the time has come, and apparently it is here, for these and similar phrases borrowed from the big grab-bag of the classics, frequently without any distinct knowledge of their origin, to be discarded from the product of the average writer, the naked dullness of the average style will be more than ever conspicuous, and inevitably there will be more or less striving to create verbal ornaments of a reasonable originality. Already the popular parodist has found a way out of the difficulty that is not without its appropriateness to a flippant age. Instead of illuminating his text with the wise sayings of his predecessors, he adopts them only after fortifying them with his mother wit, as the prudent physician fortifies his anæsthetic remedies. For "A word to the wise is sufficient" he gives "A word to the wise is superfluous," or for "Procrastination is the thief of time" he sagaciously substitutes "Punctuality is the thief of time," altering, with consummate impudence, dignified gray sentiments that have walked with Shakespeare and Milton.—Scribner's Magazine.

WHERE DIALECT IS NEEDED.—A literary critic was complaining the other day somewhat bitterly of the neglect of Miss Mitford and Mrs. Gaskell. The genre of literature represented by "Our Village" and "Cranford" is peculiarly English, and yet we are more disposed to acclaim it when coming from other nations. What may be known as "local" literature or the literature of locality, has been practiced here almost immemorially, and with remarkable success. It flourished in the mid-Victorian era, and received distinction at the hands of George Eliot.

But it is certain that this sort of intimate study of village life has not a fair chance without dialect. The vernacular Irish or Scotch or Welsh carries accomplishment with it, and bare English sounds flat and ordinary to the ears. It lacks the distinction of the alien. Poor English! Unless we take refuge in Lancashire brogue or Cornish or Yorkshire or something equally marked, English has no chance. We laugh consumedly at jokes in American which we would turn up our noses at in English. We are too hospitable all round. Tartarin of Tarascon was not really a very funny fellow, yet we hailed him as such. We are not exclusive enough. We set higher standards for ourselves than we do for others.

Miss Mitford would have had an abiding audience if she had written in Scotch or Irish. The Miss Mitfords of to-day who are wise write in dialect. It sounds so much more humorous to say "weel" than "well," and "unco" than "very"; while the joy of a nasal accent is elevating. Mr. Hardy's "Under the Greenwood Tree" talked to deaf ears, but Miss Jane Barlow, Ian Maclaren, and others like them have never lacked recognition.—H. B. Marriott Watson in The London Mail.

MRS. GASKELL'S "CHARLOTTE BRONTE."—What is the most popular biography in the English language? I do not mean the best, but the best selling. It has been said in print that this is Mrs. Gaskell's "Life of Charlotte Brontë." A writer in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, however, declares that this is a "gross exaggeration," and suggests that this distinction belongs to Boswell's "Johnson." I think a very good case could be made out for Mrs. Gaskell. Her book is, of course, not to be mentioned for a moment by the side of Boswell's when we are discussing literature, but it may surely challenge comparison with his when we are on the very much lower plane of discussing actual figures.

Within thirteen years of its original publication Boswell's "Johnson" had only sold 4,000 copies; it had a great run of success, however, when Croker edited it, and at the present day it sells steadily, but not, I imagine, in large numbers. The book is too substantial to take rank as a wildly popular book. In its best form—the form in which it was edited by Dr. Birkbeck Hill for the Clarendon Press—it has not yet reached a second edition. There are, of course, cheap one-volume editions, but they are read only at the risk of one's eyesight. Then, again, Boswell's "Johnson" has never been much of a favorite with women, who are the great readers of books.

As against this, Mrs. Gaskell was a very popular novelist; she wrote the biography of another popular novelist, and her book received a double measure of success alike from the author and the subject. It has, moreover, nearly always been published in one volume, some editions costing only a few pence. Altogether, although I do not doubt that Boswell has probably caught up by now, I think it exceedingly likely that during the sixties and seventies Mrs. Gaskell's book sold as many copies as Boswell's book had done from its first publication in 1791. This is merely a matter of speculation, however, and not a point that can be proved.

I do, however, admit that Mrs. Gaskell's book has practically ceased to count. This is due largely, however, I believe, to the fact that no adequately printed edition of the book exists at a moderate price. In these days an old book, in order to sell, must be helped by publishers and printers.—Clement Shorter in London Sphere.

WORDSWORTH.—The ode on Immortality may not give a "woman grace to go through wash-day with"; but a woman is not always a washerwoman. I cannot think men and women want to be constantly reminded of the machinery part of existence. Must all the "airts that blow" blow over cook stoves and steam boilers? Let's have a breath "from heaven or neist it." Put men astride Pegasus occasionally and let them forget their subjection to the "in the sweat of thy face." Maybe the workingmen of Brighton did not know what it all meant; but they felt more the essential, divine quality of their manhood, they were bigger and better men after they had listened to Frederick Robertson reading:

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting;
The soul that rises with us, our life's star,
Hath elsewhere had its setting,
And cometh from afar;
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God who is our home.

It is worth the while of any man who has a message to utter to his fellow-men to live in the atmosphere of Wordsworth's poetic diction and material. Here, as elsewhere, he had his shortcomings. "His sense of melody was painfully dull"; "his thought seems often to lean upon a word too weak to bear its weight"; his utter lack of humor "suffered him to select and strive to idealize subjects incapable of being idealized, with a manifest jar between theme and treatment." But, for all that, study Wordsworth's place as a protestant in the diction and material of English poetry. "In the hands of Dryden and Pope, poetry had been forced to appear in courtly costume and affect the fashion, to deal with the artificial manners and outside aspects of men, to utter itself according to a conventional standard," &c. Burns had, of course, awakened a very different song, had simply sung, had poured his full heart in profuse strains of unpremeditated art," untrammeled and untroubled by the canons of the poetic schools. But Wordsworth sang as a protestant and rebel against those canons—"the eldest born, the hardiest, the most original innovator of all that brotherhood" who were to shake off "the trammels of the so-called poetic diction that had tyrannized over English poetry for more than a century."—Homiletic Review.

THE CONSTITUTION.—The editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW urges that some one competent to do the work write a book explaining the Constitution of the United States. He would have the author make clear the powers of Congress in certain respects, and tell what are the limitations upon those powers. In view of the fact that the United States Supreme Court has been divided 5 to 4 in recent decisions upon important constitutional questions, it would seem that the task which THE TIMES editor proposes might be rather hazardous. The narrow margin by which constitutional questions of National importance have been decided in the past by tribunals of the highest authority would seem to indicate that a great deal of the commentator's work might be nullified while his book was still fresh from the press.

But despite the fact that the Constitution in its relation to some present National policies and conditions still furnishes matter for dispute, a useful and interesting book such as is suggested might be written, provided the writer refrained from "settling" constitutional questions according to his personal view of them. At this time constitutionalism as opposed to imperialism and other alleged evils in our National life, is a topic which deserves thoughtful consideration, and a clear and fair exposition of the Constitution for the lay reader would be valuable. It should, however, be reasonably free from legal phraseology and style of composition; in other words, the author ought to have the general reader in mind all the time and make his book as easily understood by the layman as possible.

The average American citizen has neither time nor inclination to study the Constitution for United States Supreme Court decisions, but a great many would profit by a condensed and reliable review of the leading features of the Constitution, and the different interpretations placed thereon.—Rome (N. Y.) Sentinel.

REPRINTS.—There are some strange omissions from the various series of reprints of standard fiction which are now being issued in such vast quantities and in such excellent style. All but two of Lord Beaconsfield's novels are out of copyright; yet I do not know of any one of them having been included in any cheap series. I am not, of course, referring to sixpenny reprints. Lord Lytton's "Pelham" is another instance—a work full of curious crudities, but at the same time nearly the equal in wit of Beaconsfield's "Vivian Grey." Theodore Hook is surely unjustly neglected; there is much good work in the two novels dealing with the fortunes of Gilbert Gurney. I should like also to see something of Carleton's and the Banims'. There is too great a tendency, in fact, to "follow my leader," with the result that the various series present a dull uniformity as regards the selection of works included. Of course, the publishers have to bear in mind that the public have a fondness for old friends, but I do believe that the occasional introduction of a new friend would meet with success.—London Academy.

Literature in Little.

THE MASTERS OF ENGLISH LITERATURE. By Stephen Gwynn. Small 16mo. Pp. 422. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.10.

A reading of Mr. Gwynn's volume seems to establish for it a distinct right to be. It is certainly a readable book and should be useful for its avowed purpose. The writer declares that there are in English certain authors "concerning whom total ignorance is a defect at least to be concealed," and that "the ordinary reader has neither time nor inclination to study all these authors at first hand." The undoubted truth of these premises would not, to be sure, excuse another "attempt to put together a survey of the literature" which concerns itself "only with such authors as can be deemed in this manner essential," unless the man who undertook it had some interpretative knack and something of freshness in his style. In Mr. Gwynn's case these qualities are present, though in the main he seems to follow in the track of Prof. Saintsbury. For instance, Mr. Gwynn has a notion that Hamlet and Falstaff are but the two sides of the same personality, and that the sum of Hamlet and Falstaff, taken together, comes near being Shakespeare complete—that is, the man Shakespeare as he was in the flesh.

A little thought, (writes he,) will show that Falstaff and Hamlet are near of kin, nearer, perhaps, than any two characters in Shakespeare; and each of them is in his own way the man born to be the looker-on and commentator at the spectacle of life. It is, perhaps, more than a fancy to say that in these two personations we come nearer than elsewhere to a presentment of Shakespeare himself; and that the plays might have been written by Hamlet and Falstaff in collaboration.

Mr. Gwynn's method is to quote generously from the author he is considering, to point out links with the past and with the future, and, except in the cases of men a knowledge of whose personality is especially important, to waste little time over biographical details. Usually there is just enough to fix time, nativity, and education. Of lives like Milton's and Swift's and Scott's and Byron's and Shelley's more is said.

In his choice of authors Mr. Gwynn seems to be a man of wide sympathies. For instance, he does not permit himself to say more of Keats than of Byron or Scott, nor does he neglect Burns to dwell upon Blake. To be sure, he absolutely tosses aside the dramatists of the Restoration period as not being English at all, but mere French importations, and though he is vastly admiring of Swift and Byron, he is most discreet in quotations from both.

On the whole, "The masters of English Literature" may be recommended as giving in small compass a singularly just view of the subject in its larger features. It ought to make a good text book for students; it will certainly provide busy or lazy people with excellent material for "concealing ignorance," and it may be read without boredom even by men and women haunted by the memory of a cloud of other hand books and more or less familiar, moreover, with English writers at first hand.

Entropy.

According to James Swinburne, an English engineer, not even textbook writers and engineers know what entropy really is. He has, therefore, written "Entropy; or, Thermodynamics from an Engineer's Standpoint," in order to make the matter plain. Unfortunately for the ordinary [illegible] after knowledge, his explanation [illegible] to [illegible]

gines. He says: "Increase of entropy is a quantity which, when multiplied by the lowest available temperature, gives the incurred waste." That is not too illuminating except to the specialist, so the author amplifies his definition:

In other words, the increase of entropy multiplied by the lowest temperature available gives the energy that either has been already irrevocably degraded into heat during the change in question, or must, at least, be degraded into heat in bringing the working substance back to the standard state. [The last part of this definition must not be omitted.]

As an appendix to this abstruse subject the author has added a controversial essay on "The Reversibility of Thermodynamics." In this he shows how badly we need a comprehensive definition of "heat," and how hard it is to make one. Furthermore, "when a reversible change takes place in an isolated system there is no increase of incurred waste, for if there were, on reversing there would be decrease of incurred waste and perpetual motion would be possible." For the very limited circle likely to understand it this book should be stimulating. (New York: Dutton. $1.25.)

IRISH POEMS.

THE RED BRANCH CRESTS: Deirdre: Meve: Cuchulain. By Charles Leonard Moore. Printed for the author. Philadelphia, 1904.

The stories of the Red Branch, like those of the Round Table, are taken from the ancient heart of the country to which they belong, and have passed through innumerable transformations in the course of telling and retelling. In many of the versions the body has been changed almost past recognition, but the spirit is hard to quench. Even the least sympathetic reciter of the beautiful old fables comes under the charm of their abundant imaginative energy, and where, as in the case of Lady Gregory's translations and compilations, the labor has been directed by both sympathy and art, the result is a joy to the reader. The metrical version of these three Red Branch stories for which Mr. Moore is responsible lacks the exquisite idiom of Lady Gregory's classic dialect, and the almost equally beautiful phrasing of Fiona Macleod, but in rude vital power and movement it surpasses both. As verse it is rough, monotonous, and frequently contorted, but the simple, swinging meter and dignified choice of symbols bring us into the true atmosphere of primitive legend without much dependence upon form or color. The story of Deirdre, with which the book opens, is sufficiently stirring in any rendering, and its dramatic possibilities are not neglected by Mr. Moore. The lack of complicating detail, of garrulous description, and of florid imagery, certainly does not subtract from the human interest of the legend, and Deirdre as a type of loving Irish fidelity is more directly appealing than in any of the recent prose versions of her history. The swift development of the tragedy, from the birth of the ill-fated daughter of Feilm to her death by the side of her lover, is marked by poignant sentiment curiously conveyed by the rushing sing song of the lines. The scenes are saturated with universal feeling as comprehensible to the modern as to the ancient mind, and the purely emotional style fits the sorrowful little tale like a flexible garment. To appreciate the different qualities of pleasure to be gained from different interpretations of Celtic pathos, one may compare these passages taken from three variants of Deirdre's lament upon leaving Alba. In Miss Macleod's paraphrase of the original the passion is veiled by a gentle melancholy of rhythm and phraseology, a mild modernity of mood.

Dear is this land to me, dear is this land:
O Alba of the lochs!
Sure I would not be sailing sad from thy foam-white sand
Were I not sailing with Naoise for the Irish strand.
O woods of Coona, I can hear the singing
Of the west wind among the branches green
And the leaping and laughing of cool waters springing,
And my heart aches for all that has been,
For all that has been, my Home, all that has been.

In Lady Gregory's translations the fierce primitive suffering is more directly rendered by the sharp, short sentences and poignant exclamations:

Dear to me is that land, that land to the east, Alban, with its wonders. I would not have come from it hither, but that I came with Naoise.

Dear to me Dun Fiodhaigh and Dun Fiona; dear is the dun above them; dear to me is Inis Droigneach, dear to me Dun-Suibhne.

O Coill Cuan! Ochone! Coll Cuan! where Ainnle used to come. My grief! it was short I thought his stay there with Naoise in Western Alban.

Glen Masan, my grief! Glen Masan! high its hart's tongue, bright its stalks; we were rocked to pleasant sleep over the wooded harbor of Masan!

Mr. Moore's lines have less particularity of reference and hasten to the ending with plaintive, unavailing sorrow. There is neither excess of fantasy nor preciousness, there is merely the simple, childish mood of the child heroine, which nevertheless avails to touch the heart.

Deirdre—

Wonders of my mountain home,
Alba, never had I come
Here save following my love.
Now to death his footsteps move,
I must leave thee in whose wild
Arms I cradled like a child.
Vale of Laidh, oh, Vale of Laidh,
Soft thy slopes for me were made!
Vale of Masan, where I had
Rocking sleep in branches glad!
Glendarua, mountain vale,
Sheltered from the shattering gale,
There the cuckoo's voice I heard,
I, untethered as the bird!
Dearer yet this cliff of Dreighn,
Where the sands and waters join,
Where I lit my cavern fire,
Glowing like my love's desire!
Let me kiss this entrance door;
Stately forms, we leave ye here.
Let me [illegible]

and of the brave Cuchulain, whose high feats and rich temperament throw a glamour over any legend that touches him. The same forthright dramatic style is kept suggesting actual scenes and personages rather than the mystical unreality of legend. One defect in the text for the ordinary reader is the absence of any indication of correct pronunciation. The Irish names are quite out of the routine of English rule and custom, and the most transcendental reader can hardly be expected to know by intuition that "Cuchulain" is pronounced "Cuhoolin" or "Cuhullin," that "Naiose" is "Neesha," or "Nayaha," and that "Conor" is either "Cunnhoor" or "Concobar."

A Wood Nymph.

GREEN MANSIONS: A Romance of the Tropical Forest. By W. H. Hudson. 12mo. Pp. 318. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.20 net.

For those who are not content with woman as she is—of the earth earthy, however fine the brand of clay—here is a story of woman distilled and sublimated into a sort of forest fairy, a little lower than the angels, perhaps, but certainly higher than the saints. It was a young gentleman of Venezuela, his fortune wrecked in one of the revolutions so incidental in his country, who took refuge among the tribes of wild Indians along the upper tributaries of the Orinoco and the Amazon, where the coquettish Casiquiare flows, now this way and now that, favoring first one and then the other of those great streams. Among the savages this young gentleman dwelt a number of years, till of the customary garments of civilization he had little but his Spanish cloak, which, however, he still knew how to wear with Spanish grace.

One day, walking in the forest, our young gentleman of Venezuela heard the most beautiful, birdlike notes, yet he saw no singer. Later he did see the singer, and it was no bird, but a beautiful slip of a girl diaphanously attired. Also, as in the beginning, there was a snake, and over the snake (literally over him) the girl and the man made friends. The snake promptly fastened his fangs in the man's leg, but no great harm came of the bite.

It turned out that the girl was a foundling of unknown race, and lived in the wood with an old man, a Spaniard; so, though she preferred to speak the speech of birds, she was not ignorant of the tongue of Spain. Evidently, too, her unknown race was higher, more spiritual, than the common sons and daughters of Eve are yet become, but the girl was not unhuman for all that, and in the woods grew up a romance of the finest flower.

In short, this is a story for the eaters of spiritual lotus, a dream of a green land, spoiled by the presence of savage men, and provided with an end tragic enough for the utmost enthusiasts of sadness. A funeral pyre and a passing like that of the phoenix—and then a man mad with grief, later mellowing into a mood whereof Kipling may give the key when he says:

"I may not find thee quick and kind,
Or know thee till I die."

In the Days of A. D. 710.

A PRINCE OF CORNWALL. A Story of Glastonbury and the West in the Days of Ina of Wessex. By Charles W. Whistler. Illustrated. 12mo. New York: Frederick Warne & Co. $1.50.

A. D. 710 or thereabouts is the period of this story, but the language is modern enough, for which we are grateful to Mr. Whistler. Banished by King Gerent from his own country Prince Owen of Cornwall wanders through the forests of Sussex and meets with Oswald, the little son of the Thane of Eastdean, lately entered into the religion of Christ. Owen takes the lad safely home and later stands by the Thane when his neighbor Erpwald, high priest of the God Woden, batters in the gates of Eastdean and demands that the Thane swear allegiance again to his outraged deity. There are many slain that day, and Owen finds himself suddenly left foster-father to the little lad whom he had already rescued from the claws of hungry wolves in the forest.

The story bristles with plots and intrigues. In the palace of Ina at Glastonbury Owen and the youthful Oswald find welcome with honor, and here Oswald, under the gentle tutelage of the good Queen grows to man's estate. There are scenes, too, of the Wessex country when Gerent reigned over it, and although finally Gerent recalled Owen to his place at Court, there were certain factions in the kingdom who still hated the Prince. So there are plots laid to spirit Owen away, and again there are thrusts at the Prince through his foster son. There are kidnappers and assassins hired in plenty; arrows aimed at still sleeping faces in the moonlight; poisoned cups of red wine, and notes of warning. There is a strange dream of a lost valley where the ancient Druids held their rites for thousands of years, where a stagnant pool reflects a tottering menhir, and here to this abode of the Evil One Owen is carried, and here in hot pursuit rides Oswald and two others defying the curse of ages that has rested on the place, placing the sign of the cross on the very face of the menhir, and tumbling its crumbling pile into the stagnant pool. There are battles, too, bloody ones, and bloodless ones, and a beautiful maid who does not love young Oswald, but another who does, and still another in league with the base conspirators. In fact, there are many characters to flit across the pages, back and forth and back, and in [illegible] across the adventurous [illegible]

"C. W. B.," Glencoe, Penn.: "Who publishes 'Poole's Index'? Who are the publishers of Kinglake's 'Invasion of the Crimea,' mentioned in Queries, Aug. 20?"

(1) Poole's "Index to Periodical Literature" is published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: Vol. I., 1802-81, revised edition, in two parts, $16; Vol. II., first supplement, January, 1882, to January, 1887, and Vol. III., second supplement, January, 1887, to January, 1892, $8 each; Vol. IV., third supplement, January, 1892, to January, 1897, and Vol. V., fourth supplement, January, 1897, to January, 1902, $10 each; abridged edition of the "Index," 1815-99, $12. (2) Kinglake's "Invasion of the Crimea" is published in this country by Harper & Brothers in six volumes, $2 each.

V. ROBERTS, Park Avenue Hotel, New York City: "Can you tell me anything about an English translation of 'Madame Bovary,' which appeared about a quarter of a century ago under the title of 'The Doctor,' or 'The Doctor's Wife'? I should like to know the exact title and the name of the English author or adapter."

This novel, we think, is "The Doctor's Wife," adapted by Miss M. E. Braddon (Mrs. John Maxwell) from Flaubert's "Madame Bovary." It was published, anonymously, in England in 1864, and was long in print in this country in the old Seaside Library.

HENRY LLEWELYN WILLIAMS, Pearl River, N. Y.: "In 'Appeals to Readers' of Aug. 20 Charles F. Carty, 1 William Street, New York City, inquires concerning the authorship and date of the first appearance of the 'Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck,' which he describes as 'a rather early specimen of American caricature work, first issued about 1847.' I am sorry to balk Mr. Carty's patriotic wish to include this work—a story told in pictures—among American caricatures as an 'early specimen.' The book is a copy of Rudolf Toppfer's 'M. Vieux-Bois.' It is one of the once noted 'Albums Toppfer'; this one and 'Bachelor Butterfly' ('M. de Cryptograme') are still published by Dick & Fitzgerald, New York City. Toppfer was a Swiss artist and the writer of 'Nouvelles Genevoises' and 'Voyages en Zigzag'—no offense to the Boston 'Zigzag Journeys,' as Toppfer died in 1846. He asserted that he preferred the crayon to the pen, as 'more people see than can read'; and, besides, he procured by his 'Albums' a vogue all over Europe which his words in French would not have won. They inspired Mayhew and Cruikshank in their 'Toothache' folder, and were the model for Busch and the Bilderbogen books. I doubt there were any but the two cited done in English and reprinted here. I think the American pictures were 'rubbed off' and re-engraved; anyway, the originals are always in print in Paris. But the later Paris editions of his novelettes and travels were redrawn by modern artists—I see Leloir, the etcher, and Daubigny, the landscapist, named. They ought to have a place in all libraries that 'respect themselves.'"

The first American reprint of Toppfer's work, to which Mr. Carty gives the date of 1847, seems to have been issued Sept. 14, 1842, as a supplement to Brother Jonathan. Mrs. Harriet H. Shepard, Plantsville, N. Y., kindly sends an advertisement from this magazine, which, in part, reads as follows: "The publishers of Brother Jonathan have received per Great Eastern the English plates of an original and highly amusing and laughter-provoking publication, entitled, 'The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck.' * * * This curious love story is got up upon an entirely original plan, and contains one hundred and ninety-eight humorous designs illustrative of the misfortunes which befel Mr. Oldbuck. * * * It will be published early in September in an extra double Brother Jonathan, price as usual 12½ cents, or ten copies for one dollar."

"A. J. A.," Herkimer, N. Y.: "Who is 'Nimrod,' who wrote or edited the 'Memoirs of the late John Mytton, Esq., of Halston,' an old English sporting book which is in my library?"

"Nimrod" was C. J. Apperley, the author of a number of sporting books, including "Remarks on the Condition of Hunters, the Choice of Horses, &c.," 1831; "The Chase, the Turf, and the Road," 1837; "The Horse and the Hound," 1842; "Hunting Reminiscences," 1843, &c. His "Memoirs of John Mytton" was first published in 1835 with twelve colored plates by Alken. The second edition, with eighteen colored plates by Alken and Rawlins, appeared in 1837. In 1851, the third edition, with a memoir of Apperley, was published. These editions were valued by Slater in 1890 at £10, £8, and £6 respectively. There are later editions of the book—1869, 1877, 1892, &c.—but their value is not great.

"B. Q.," 118 East Thirty-second Street, New York City: "What did Shakespeare mean when he made Hamlet talk of 'out-Heroding Herod'?"

The phrase is an allusion to the rant and raving of the old stage King of Jewry in the ancient Mystery Plays of England. Although it has been misapplied for many years, the phrase still retained abundant meaning in Shakespeare's days. Herod's mode of Heroding it can be seen by this extract from the Miracle Play called "The Offering of the Three Kings":

> I am the greatest above degree
> That is, or was, or ever shall be;
> The sun it dare not shine on me,
> An' I bid him go down.

Elsewhere in the same play Herod claims to be the maker of heaven and hell, to wield the thunderbolts, and to be able to kill all his enemies by one wink of his eye, and he calls the infant Christ "a misbegotten marmoset."

Mrs. N. J. BISHOPRICK, 431 Washington Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "The author of the poem, 'Naming Cambridge,' which I sent in answer to a request, is William Everett of Cambridge, Mass., who, I think, is a brother of C. C. Everett, who was a well-known Unitarian clergyman and author."

"R. J.," Richmond, Va.: "It is said that Coleridge wrote 'Kubla Khan' from the 'recollection of a dream.' Is this so?"

"Kubla Khan" was produced, under the influence of "an anodyne," in 1797. Coleridge averred that, having fallen asleep in his chair over a sentence from Purchas's "Pilgrimage," "Here the Khan Kubla commanded a palace to be built and a stately garden thereto, and thus ten miles of ground were inclosed with a wall"—he remained unconscious for about three hours, "during which time he had the most vivid confidence that he could not have composed less than three hundred lines"; "if that," he adds, "can be called composition, in which all the images rose up before him as things, with a parallel production of the correspondent expressions, without any sensation or consciousness of effort." On awakening he proceeded to write out his "composition" and had set down fifty-four lines when he was "unfortunately called out by a person on business from Porlock," whose departure, an hour after, left him almost oblivious of the rest. This confession, dated 1816, has been generally accepted as true, but Coleridge had a trick of dreaming dreams about himself which makes doubt on the subject permissible.

"E. K. H.," National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md.: "In Appeals to Readers of Aug. 13 M. Hunt, Provincetown, Mass., asks: 'Who is the "C. L. D." of Prof. Woodberry's "North Shore Watch"?' The 'C. L. D.' to whose memory this scarce 'piece of elegiac verse' was dedicated was Clarence Laighton Dennett, who died June 5, 1878. If I remember rightly, he was both a boyhood and college friend of Mr. Woodberry. My copy of the poem is No. 62 of the edition of 200 printed for private distribution, and contains on the title page the full name, date of birth, and time of death of 'C. L. D.'"

"F.," Portland, Me.: "When did the brothers Duyckinck die?"

George Long Duyckinck, born in 1823, died in 1863; Evert Augustus Duyckinck, born in 1816, died in 1878.

"MUSICAL," Troy, N. Y.: "Can you kindly give me a short sketch of Miss Constance Bache?"

Miss Constance Bache, who died in June, 1903, pianoforte professor, translator, and musical writer, was born in Edgbaston, Birmingham, the youngest child of the Rev. Samuel Bache, and sister of the two musicians, the late Edward and Walter Bache. With the idea of becoming a public player on the pianoforte, she studied music at Munich. Prevented from following her ambition, she turned her attention to teaching and the translating of works on music or for performance. Among her publications are: "The Letters of Franz Liszt," "Bülow's Letters," the songs of Liszt, Brahms, Cornelius, and others; Liszt's oratorio, "St. Elizabeth"; "Hänsel and Gretel," and numerous cantatas and libretti. Her last work was "Brother Musicians," 1901.

A STEADY READER, New York: "I remember seeing a book which was a review of the Reform Administration under Mayor Seth Low, and which contained the speeches made by District Attorney William T. Jerome during the campaign, but I cannot recall the name of the book. Can you let me know it?"

The book is Alfred Hodder's "Fight for a City," published by the Macmillan Company, New York. $1.50.

"B. B.," Long Island City, L. I., N. Y.: "When was Gen. G. B. McClellan first called 'Little Mac'?"

This was an army nickname given affectionately to him by his men during the civil war. It was taken up, and became a popular sobriquet when he was the Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1864.

"F. P.," Lanesborough, Mass.: "Can you tell me who wrote 'Real Life in London; or, The Rambles and Adventures of Bob Tallyho, Esq., and His Cousin, the Hon. Tom Dashall, Through the Metropolis. By an Amateur,' London, 1821? It has colored plates. Is this a first edition?"

It was written by Pierce Egan, the writer of many sporting books, and was originally published, 1821-2, in fourteen parts. It was then issued in two volumes, boards. Value in parts, about £15; in original boards, about £10; rebound, about £8 or £9.

"D. D.," Mamaroneck, N. Y.: "Who was the Cambridge professor to whom 'English literature owes a debt for having directed Edward FitzGerald's attention to Persian and Omar Khayyam'?"

Dr. Edward Byles Cowell, (1826-1903,) who was Professor of Sanskrit at Cambridge University for nearly forty years. He was born in Ipswich, England, the eldest son of a corn merchant. From Ipswich School he entered commercial life with his father, married in 1847, and in 1850 achieved his ambition by entering Oxford, where he graduated at Magdalen Hall. He then went to India, and in 1856 became Professor of History in Calcutta. In 1858 he was appointed Principal of the Government Sanskrit College, where his deep learning and personal charm endeared him to his students. After holding this post for nearly six years he returned to England, and in 1867 was made Professor of Sanskrit at Cambridge, which position he occupied at the time of his death, Feb. 9, 1903. From the very first, as a lad at school, the bent of his mind toward all languages was strongly marked. He taught himself Persian in 1841, and all his life was spent in the labors, equally beloved, of acquiring new languages and teaching them. He did not confine himself to Oriental tongues, but was as great a scholar in Welsh, Hebrew, Italian, and Spanish as in any of the Eastern languages he knew. Most of his literary work is represented by translations of Asiatic texts, either alone or in collaboration. There are, however, numerous original papers from his pen contributed to the transactions of learned societies or to the public magazines.

A. MILLS, Exchange Place, New York City: "What is the meaning of the English proverbial phrase, 'From Land's End to John o' Groat's'?"

It means "from one end of Great Britain to the other." Land's End is a granite promontory in Cornwall which marks the southwesternmost extremity of England. John o' Groat's house is the name given to a curious octagon-shaped ruin at Duncansby Head, on the northernmost point of the mainland of Scotland. Tradition says that it was built by one John o' Groat, but is not positive as to the personality of that gentleman. One legend has it that he was a poor man, who derived his name from the fact that he ferried passengers over to the island of Stroma for a groat. The more popular story makes him the descendant of a Hollander, De Groot, who, in the reign of James IV., settled in the vicinity. John and his seven cousins, it is reported, met every year to celebrate the memory of their ancestor. Every year a dispute arose over the question of precedence, until finally John, to settle the difficulty, built an eight-sided house of his own, with a door opening toward each point, and eight windows, and an octagon table in the centre, so that all might enter simultaneously, each at his own door, and there might be no head of the table.

"SUBSCRIBER," Port Jefferson, L. I., N. Y.: "Where is the original manuscript of Gray's 'Elegy'?"

It was sold at auction in London in 1875, and purchased for the sum of £200 by the late Sir William Augustus Fraser, who died a few years ago, bequeathing it to Eton College, where it is now.

"PHILOSOPHY," Rutherford, N. J.: "What was Spencer's first book?"

At the age of twenty-two he wrote a series of letters in The Nonconformist on "The Proper Sphere of Government." In 1848 he became sub-editor of The Economist, and at the beginning of 1851 produced his first book, properly so called, "Social Statics."

Miss A. THOMPSON, Hoboken, N. J.: "What books were written by the late Edna Lyall?"

Miss Ada Ellen Bayly, ("Edna Lyall,") was the author of "Won by Waiting," 1879; "Donovan," 1882; "We Two," 1884; "In the Golden Days," 1885; "Their Happiest Christmas," 1886; "Knight-Errant," 1887; "Autobiography of a Slander," 1887; "A Hardy Norseman," 1889; "Derrick Vaughan, Novelist," 1889; "To Right the Wrong," 1892; "Doreen, the Story of a Singer," 1894; "How the Children Raised the Wind," 1895; "Autobiography of a Truth," 1896; "Wayfaring Men," 1897; "Hope the Hermit," 1898; "In Spite of All," 1901; "The Hinderers," 1902, and "The Burges Letters," 1902.

"MISS G.," Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.: "Was 'Under Two Flags' the first novel written by 'Ouida'? Please give the names of her best-known child stories or tales about children."

"Under Two Flags" was first published in 1867. "Ouida" had previously published "Held in Bondage," 1863; "Strathmore," 1865; "Chandos," 1866; "Cecil Castlemaine's Gage," 1867, and "Idalia," 1867. The tales referred to include "Two Little Wooden Shoes," "A Dog of Flanders," "The Nurnberg Stove," "The Little Earl," "A Province Rose," &c.

"B. A. J.," Paterson, N. J.: "Austin Dobson's poem 'A Postcript to Goldsmith's "Retaliation"' contains a reference to Dr. Johnson, the meaning of which puzzles me:

> "'. . . . The' rough in the rind,
> The heart of the giant was gentle and kind.
> What signifies now, if, in bouts with a friend,
> His pistol, missed fire, he would use the butt end?'

"I have seen this metaphor somewhere, but cannot place it. Can you aid me?"

The metaphor occurs in Boswell's Johnson in the following form: "He [Johnson] had recourse to the device which Goldsmith imputed to him in the witty words of one of Cibber's comedies: 'There is no arguing with Johnson; when his pistol misses fire he knocks you down with the butt end."

"C. C. R.," Jersey City, N. J.: "Kindly advise me what books were written by Emile Gaboriau other than the following: 'The Widow Lerouge,' 'File No. 113,' 'The Honor of the Name,' 'Monsieur Lecocq,' 'Other People's Money,' and 'The Mystery of Orcival.'"

He was the author of "The Slaves of Paris," "The Count's Secret," "Within an Inch of His Life," "The Clique of Gold," "A Thousand Francs Reward," "The Thirteenth Hussars," "The Little Old Man of the Batignolles," &c., which are issued in cheap paper form by Street & Smith.

Appeals to Readers.

Will the publishers of Major Caleb Huse's pamphlet on "The Supplies of the Confederate Army, How They Were Obtained in Europe and How Paid For," kindly send another copy to this office, addressed care of Editor Queries, NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW?

J. M. WARD, 30 Rogers Street, Branford, Conn.: "I would like to find an account of the rescue of the English flag by Thomas Allport in one of England's wars occurring between 1700 and 1800. The man who made the first attempt was killed, Thomas Allport was successful, but lost his right arm. He was knighted, and given an estate on which, I think, there were two halls, Everton and Worley."

VINCENT F. O'REILLY, 52 Broadway, New York City: "Can any of the readers of Queries supply the subsequent lines to the following two songs:

> "'Down by the river side I sit,' > While twilight shadows fall;'

and

"'St. Kevin once was travelling in a place called Glendalough.'

"This last is an amusing legend of the origin of the seven churches in Glendalough."

Miss T. B. SMITH, Vineyard Haven, Mass.: "Where can I find a poem entitled 'Washington at Valley Forge'? It is greatly desired by a friend, who thinks it was in a school reader of years ago."

"OPINIONATIVE," 1,311 Madison Avenue, New York City: "What is the source and correct version of a quotation to this effect: 'I can take care of my enemies; God save me from my friends'?"

"ARMY," Fort Huachuca, A. T.: "Can any one tell me where to find a poem which runs something like this:

> "'If thou shouldst pass
> And say to other eyes
> I love thee, sacrifice
> Of years would not atone,
> Not startle me to drink alone
> Some draught of joy, &c.?'

"These may not be the exact words, but the poem was published in The New York Daily World in the Winter of 1887-8."

Smiles's "Self-Help."

A new, abridged edition of the late Dr. Samuel Smiles's "Self-Help; With Illustrations of Character, Conduct, and Perseverance," has been edited by Ralph Lytton Bower, who has adapted the work especially to American readers by omitting several passages of a local and British interest. He has also provided helpful and explanatory notes and an appendix, containing biographies and characterizations of many of the principal persons mentioned in the text, including Adrian VI., Arnold, Audubon, Bacon, Brougham, Buffon, Bulwer, Channing, Chatterton, Canning, Carlyle, Cheruibini, Cicero, Clay, Corbett, De Foe, Disraeli, Drake, Gainsborough, George III., Galileo, Frederick Augustus I., Gibbon, John II., Irving, Jones the architect, Lely, Locke, Mohammed, Napoleon, Milton, Schubert, Scott, Shakespeare, Schiller, Sixtus V., Southey, Turner, Tennyson, Virgil, Voltaire, Washington, James Watt, Wordsworth, Wolcsley, William I., Wellington, Xenophon, Young, Ziska, and many others.

Samuel Smiles died April 16, 1904, aged ninety-two years. He was born at Haddington, N. B. Among his publications are "Conduct," "Duty," "Thrift," "Life of John Murray," "Life of George Moore," "Jasmin," "Life and Labor," "Character," "Industrial Biography," "Invention and Industry," "Thomas Edward, Scotch Naturalist," "Robert Dick, Geologist and Botanist," "The Huguenots," "A Publisher and His Friends," &c. An introduction to the present volume is written by James Baldwin. (12mo, Pp. 304. In the series of Eclectic School Readings. New York: The American Book Company.)

The Village Press.

The Village Press, conducted by F. W. and B. M. Goudy, which was established in Park Ridge, Ill., in July, 1903, has moved to Hingham, Mass. W. Goudy and a frontispiece by Walter J. Enright; Rossetti's "The Blessed Damozel," with portrait frontispiece and illustration in photogravure; "The Ninety-first Psalm," printed in red and black, and with initial letters and title page drawn by F. W. Goudy; Charles William Eliot's "Emerson as Seer," and Browning's "Rabbi Ben Ezra," with illustrations on wood, initials, and decorations in color.

Emperor and King in this instance is William II. of Germany. The volume will contain autographed portraits of the Emperor and members of the imperial family.

THE PUBLISHERS.

Plans of Some of Them—Forthcoming New Books.

BREAKING the Wilderness," the new book by F. S. Delanbaugh, is to be brought out by G. P. Putnam's Sons the end of October. It will contain a map giving the latest conclusions of the locations of the villages of the Rio Grande region before 1630. This map is the result of many years of study on the part of the author, whose arrangement of these early native towns is different from the accepted view as advocated by Bandelier, Hodge, and others.

E. P. Dutton & Co. are publishing in Miranda's library "The Princess and Other Poems," by Alfred Lord Tennyson. The volume is illustrated with drawings by Paul Woodroffe, who has also made the designs for the decorations on the title-page and around the pictures. Other books published in the library are Mrs. Jameson's "Shakespeare's Heroines," illustrated by R. Anning Bell, and Browning's "Men and Women," illustrated by Henry Ospovat.

Henry Holt & Co. will shortly issue "Irrfahrten" and an edition of "Germelshausen," a story of the romantic experiences of a young German painter on a foot tour in the valley of the Werra, by the genial German, Friedrich Gerstäcker, who once visited this country and whose writings are used in the schools here.

The Century Company is rushing through the press "Thackeray's Letters to an American Family," which appeared in The Century Magazine. These letters were all written to the different members of the family of George Baxter of this city. Miss Lucy W. Baxter has written an introduction and provided notes for the book, which will also contain reproductions of drawings and odd little bits scribbled by the novelists on his pages.

E. P. Dutton & Co. are issuing "A Primer of Physiology," by E. H. Starling, F. R. S. The book has been written for "young people who are desirous of learning something of the manner in which the normal processes of life are carried on." The author has taken the cat for an example. The illustrations and diagrams show various parts of the body of that animal. The book treats of food, digestion, breathing, the circulation of the blood, the skin and its uses, the muscles, feelings, the central nervous system, &c.

Two editions of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's "The Youth of Washington: Told in the Form of an Autobiography," will shortly be issued by the Century Company. The book is the fruit of years of study and research into the heredity, circumstances, and events which fitted a Virginia planter for one of the greatest careers in history.

Henry Holt & Co., in several of their recent books, have done away with the frontispiece. In "A Night with Alessandro" and "In the Dwellings of the Wilderness" they had small colored landscapes that serve as a sort of pictorial prologue and epilogue. In "The Pursuit of Phyllis," just published, the story opens with a picture of the hero starting from London on the pursuit, and ends with one of Phyllis. The pictures for the latter book have been made by H. Latimer Brown.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. report that Mrs. Wiggin's "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" has been translated into German, and J. Engelhorn of Stuttgart has the exclusive German rights. That author's "Birds' Christmas Carol" has just appeared in a new Danish version.

"Morning Thoughts to Cheer the Day," arranged by Miss Maria H. Le Row, is prepared with the intention of showing by quotations from writers in high favor that the new learning has by no means eliminated the idea of the fatherhood of God from current thought, and also in the hope of strengthening faith. It is to be published in various styles.

Charles Scribner's Sons are to bring out within the next fortnight "Literary Leaders of America: A Class Book in American Literature," by Richard Burton, Ph. D., formerly Professor of English in the University of Minnesota. The book treats only of the main figures in American literature, dealing with the others in the introduction, a preliminary, and a closing chapter. It is practically a biographical, critical, and illustrated account of Irving, Cooper, Poe, Hawthorne, Emerson, Bryant, Longfellow, Holmes, Whittier, Lowell, Whitman, and Lanier.

Longmans, Green & Co. have almost ready for publication "Trinity in Unity: Four Lectures on Certain Aspects of the Athanasian Creed, Its Truth, and Its Sanctions," preached in York Minster at the Trinity Season of 1904, by the Rev. Dr. Henry Temple, Canon Residentiary and Chancellor of the Church and Rector of Oswaldkirk.

The current number of The Century Magazine contains a reproduction of "The Woman in Black," by Degas, the original of which was recently bought by Mrs. Gardner for her collection at Fenway Court, Boston.

Everett Waddey Company of Richmond, Va., is bringing out a second edition, revised and enlarged, of Dr. Charles L. C. Minor's "The Real Lincoln from the Testimony of his Contemporaries." The book was originally published in pamphlet form, but the commendation it received impelled the author to further research into official records of the War Department and publications by people of Northern sympathies. Dr. Minor has endeavored "to correct such misrepresentations as make claims for Lincoln entirely inconsistent with the grave defects that are conceded by the closest associates of his private life."

Thomas Whittaker has in press a study of the relation of Whittier to religious sentiment, entitled "The Mind of Whittier." The author is the Rev. C. J. Hawkins, a New England divine.

E. P. Dutton & Co. are sending out gratis, on application, a little brochure descriptive of books for school libraries. The list is based upon selections prepared by experts of New York, Pittsburg, Buffalo, and Wisconsin and other library organizations. There are nature books by Clara D. Pierson, Olive Thorne Miller, E. Nesbit, and Eugene Smith; classics by Kingsley, Lamb, Paul Creswick, Jonathan Swift, Bunyan, Jane Porter, and others; fiction by E. S. Brooks, W. B. Allen, Alicia Aspinwall, Ruth Ogden, and James Otis; stories of adventure on the frontier by Col. H. R. Gordon and others; fairy tales by Frances Browne, Katherine Pyle, Anderson, Grimm, and the Countess d'Aulnoy; miscellaneous books, including "Mother Goose Nursery Rhymes," with illustrations by E. Stuart Hardy and others; games books, short story books, histories, &c., and colored picture books. The brochure, which has been gotten up with much care, contains miniature illustrations from the volumes described.

Herbert B. Turner & Co. announce for early publication a novel entitled "Piney Home," by George Selwyn Kimball. It is a story of the woods of Maine.

Henry Holt & Co. have sold the English rights to the late Guy Wetmore Carryl's dramatic story of the American colony in Paris, "The Transgression of Andrew Vane," to William Heinemann of London.

The Macmillan Company is publishing Vol. IX. of the "Annual of the British School at Athens," covering the session of 1902 to 1903. It contains a fully illustrated account of Arthur Evans's excavations during that period at Knossos in Crete, and illustrated papers on the work that is being done in another part of the island by the members of the school. Among the contents is a paper by Prof. W. M. Ramsay on "The Topography of Asia Minor." There are also two colored plates.

The Everett Press of Boston is publishing this week "Sequil," Judge Shute's continuation of his "Real Diary of a Real Boy." The title of this book comes from the entry in the "Real Diary," dated Dec. 23, in which the diarist says: "Billy Swett lent me a dime novel to read today. It was named Billy Bolegs a sequil to Nat Ted the traper. sequil means the things in Nat Ted that was not finished."

The Broadway Publishing Company is bringing out "Satan of the Modern World," by Edward Gaston Dayer; "The New Woman Analyzed," by Winifred Harper Cooley, and "Lady Cleaver," by Mrs. A. Kay Cleaver.

The Century Company, is to be "The River's Children." It will be illustrated by Harry C. Edwards.

G. P. Putnam's Sons have secured the American rights to W. B. Maxwell's book, "The Ragged Messenger," reference to which was recently made in Mr. Alden's letter from London. This is the story of a religious enthusiast, who is bent on relieving the poor. He suddenly comes into possession of great wealth which his wife wants him to spend in luxury, but which he devotes to bettering the conditions of the slums. The author shows the influence which the change of circumstances has on the hero somewhat as does George Gissing in his "Democracy."

"The Distribution of Wealth," by Thomas Nixon Carver, Professor of Political Economy in Harvard University, will shortly be added to the economic series published by the Macmillan Company. The purpose of the book is to show how men determine or ascertain the values which are set upon things in communities with which they are acquainted in a civilization of which they are a part.

J. B. Lippincott Company is bringing out popular editions of "Chesterfield's Letters" in one volume and of "The Federalist."

G. P. Putnam's Sons will publish next Tuesday "Narragansett Bay," by Edgar Mayhew Bacon; "The Master's Violin," by Myrtle Reed; "Earthquakes: In the Light of the New Seismology," by Major Clarence E. Dutton; Lady Seymour's translation of E. Dumont's "Souvenir sur Mirabeau," entitled "The Great Frenchman and the Little Genevese"; first series of Paul Elmer More's "Shelburne Essays," Badsworth's "Defense of Bridge," "Early Hebrew Story," by John P. Peters, D. D.; "Up Through Childhood," by George Allen Hubbell; a popular edition of Poe in ten volumes, an edition of his tales in five volumes, and an edition of his poems in five volumes; Macaulay's "Essays," in six volumes; "Strabismus, or Squint," by Dr. Francis Valk, and Parsons's "Pathology of the Eye."

It is reported by J. B. Lippincott Company that the State Text-Book Board of Tennessee recently adopted their "Elementary Algebra" for exclusive use in the schools of that State during the next five years, and that "Worcester's Primary New School" and "Academic" Dictionaries were readopted for a second-five-year term.

Gould on Bankruptcy.

After years of fruitless discussion, Congress finally in 1898 enacted a law making the treatment of bankruptcies uniform throughout the United States, thus in some measure atoning for the defects of the law of 1867 and its two predecessors. "The Bankruptcy Act of 1898," annotated and explained, is a digest of this act, containing all a practicing lawyer needs, and a text book of bankruptcy law and practice. The editor is John M. Gould, whose "Notes on the United States Statutes," issued recently, form the basis of this new manual; he was assisted by Arthur W. Blakemore of the Boston bar.

Mr. Gould's book gives the text of the act, all the amendments thereto, the important Federal and State decisions thereon down to May of this year, and the general orders and forms established by the United States Supreme Court. The text is printed by sections; first the act, then the amendments, and lastly a statement of the points decided by the courts. Preceding the text there is a seventeen-column table of the cases cited; appended is a twenty-page index divided into three parts, one to the book, one to the general orders, and one to the forms. The chapter headings include: Compositions, Discharge, Federal and State Jurisdiction, Arbitration, Offenses, Officers and Trustees, Creditors, Claims, Dividends, Liens, Titles to Property, and some others. The binding is a typical legal cloth with colored labels on an octavo book (Boston, Little & Brown, $3.)

"The Georgians."

"The Georgians" is the title of a new novel of Southern life by Will N. Harben which Messrs. Harper & Brothers will publish Sept. 8. The author has used as the central figure in the present story the humorous old Southern farmer who gave his name to an earlier work by the same hand. The publishers think Mr. Harben in "The Georgians" has accomplished stronger work than he has done before, and promise a good and entertaining story. It seems Abner Daniel takes an active part in the plot and plays detective to admiration.

ABOUT AUTHORS

What Some of Them Are Saying, Writing, or Planning.

PROF. BARRETT WENDELL, with the assistance of C. N. Greenough, A. M., of Harvard University, is preparing for Charles Scribner's Sons "A History of American Literature." This is based on Prof. Wendell's "Literary History of America." That work has been abridged, largely re-written, and adapted to the requirements of high schools and colleges. Prof. Wendell is the author of a "Life of Cotton Mather," "William Shakespeare; A Study in Elizabethan Literature," &c. He was the first American to give regular lectures concerning English literature in an English university. He has just been appointed first Hyde lecturer in Paris, and, as the current Lamp says, he "is the happiest possible choice, from every point of view, to initiate this course."

Mrs. Florence Merriam Bailey, the well-known ornithologist, and author of a "Handbook of Birds of the Western United States," &c., spent last month exploring the mountains of Colorado.

S. C. Woodhouse, author of "The Grump," a tale for children, has written another "Grump" book, entitled "Eliza Grump," which E. P. Dutton & Co. are sending out. It is a little 32mo in size, and contains twenty colored plates by Gerald Sichel, who illustrated the author's previous book. "Eliza Grump" is the story of how the widow of "The Grump" was changed into a sausage for allowing "The Chairman" to make love to her. He was turned into "the curriest of curs", and ate up the sausage.

On a recent visit to Cape Cod, Joseph C. Lincoln had his own book, "Cap'n Eri," published by A. S. Barnes & Co., urged upon him by a train boy, who assured him that for the time he had been on the road—ten years—he had not handled a novel that had sold so well. Mr. Lincoln protested that he had read the book, but was finally excused from buying a copy when he admitted that he thought highly of it himself.

Dr. William Osler of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, with King Edward VII.'s special approval, is to succeed Sir John Burdon, a distinguished English physician, as Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford University. He is to bring out through Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Oct. 1, an essay on "Science and Immorality."

Prof. John B. Clark of Columbia University will have in the October number of The Century Magazine an article on "The Real Dangers of the Trusts."

Among the writers in the September issue of The Architects' and Builders' Magazine are James N. Hatch, who contributes the first part of a series of articles on "Chicago Foundations"; George E. Walsh, who writes on "Staff Architecture," and there are articles on "The Possibilities of a Suburban Residence Park" and "The New Manhattan Bridge."

Elizabeth Robins Pennell, in an early number of The Century, will describe picturesque Mont St. Michel in a paper called "In the Peril of the Sea." The article will be illustrated with drawings by Joseph Pennell.

Benjamin Brooks is preparing for the October Scribner's Magazine an article on "The Molders." He writes from actual experience of the processes of the foundry, the excitement and variety in the molder's trade, and his risks and achievements. Edwin B. Child will illustrate the article with colored pictures made from actual scenes.

Linnie Sarah Harris has written what is described as a light, unconventional romance of love and music, entitled "Sweet Peggy," which has for its heroine a young woman with a marvelous voice. The author is a Maine woman. Little, Brown & Co. will publish the book in a few weeks.

Mary Mapes Dodge, editor of St. Nicholas, will bring out this Fall, through The Century Company, a new volume entitled "Poems and Verses." A new illustrated edition of Mrs. Dodge's "Rhymes and Jingles" is also announced by Charles Scribner's Sons for Sept. 24. The author has contributed eighteen new poems to this volume, and many of the old ones have been revised, while others have been rewritten. The illustrations and decorations are by Miss Sarah S. Stilwell. The book will be uniform with Riley's "Book of Joyous Children," Stevenson's "Child's Garden of Verses," and Field's "Lullaby Land."

According to Henry Holt & Co., the American publishers of her "Web of Indian Life," the London house which issues the book reports that it has already been reprinted in England. Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, author of "On the Face of the Waters," a novel of the Indian mutiny, has written to the London publishers: "It is exceedingly interesting; though a trifle, perhaps, too enthusiastic, it is an excellent bit of work for India."

Harris Burland, one of the younger English authors whose novels are becoming popular, has written a romance entitled "The Princess Thora," which will be brought out in this country by Little, Brown & Co.

Miss Jessie Peabody Frothingham is completing a new volume for boys as a companion to her "Sea Fighters from Drake to Farragut." Charles Scribner's Sons will bring it out about Sept. 17.

Dwight W. Huntington has written a complementary volume to "Our Feathered Game," which Charles Scribner's Sons have on their September list. It is on "Our Big Game," and will deal with the deer, the ox, the bear, and the cat families. It is written on the same lines as the first book, from the point of view of the sportsman who is a lover of nature. The appendix will contain technical information likely to be of use to the big game huntsman. Mr. Huntington has shot nearly all of the animals he describes. He tells anecdotes of the chase and writes about the habits of the various wild animals. The sixteen full-page illustrations are from photographs of the animals in their natural haunts.

J. S. Young has written a history of the development of internal improvements in the United States to 1836, which the University of Chicago Press is issuing with the title "Political and Constitutional History of the Cumberland Road." The Cumberland Gap, which was the first road and the easiest way to the West, forms the central thread of the history. The road was a great factor in American civilization and politics. The author shows the economic value of the highway, and also its political importance during the sixty years' growth of the Western States preceding the civil war, tracing in detail the chronology of its development.

PEACE BASIS MADE FOR SUBWAY TROUBLE

Union Leaders Go to Mr. Belmont Again.

STRIKE TALK THEN CEASES

Change of Front Follows Leader Mahon's Arrival — Concessions Said to Have Been Made for Old Employes.

Negotiations were resumed yesterday between August Belmont, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and representatives of the various unions involved in the contention over motormen's wages in the subway. Such substantial results were achieved that last night the danger of a strike on the elevated roads in this city was said to have been practically averted.

The conferences, which brought about a change in a situation which only a few hours before had not been far from acute, were of the men's own seeking. Mr. Belmont and the principal officials of the Interborough Company and the National representatives of the unions comprising the employes of the elevated system met twice in the day.

The first conference was held early in the afternoon at Mr. Belmont's residence, and was attended by the joint committee from the local organizations which have represented the men in the demands which they have made on the company as well as by the National officers. The second conference was held last evening at the office of the Interborough Company in the Park Row Building, and was attended by the National chiefs alone.

After the second conference Mr. Belmont framed a proposition which is to serve as basis for a peaceful settlement of all the differences involved. This proposition was reduced to writing and submitted to Grand Chief Warren S. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, First Vice Grand Master Charles Wilson of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and W. D. Mahon, International President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America.

The text of the peace proposal was not made public last night. From what could be learned of its substance, it appears that, although the company has made some concessions that may mean a great deal to the men, Mr. Belmont has remained firm in his refusal to make the wages of motormen in the subway $3.50 for a nine-hour working day. If the men accept the peace terms they would be compelled to yield the principal point for which they have been contending. It was the turning down of this demand, in fact, that started the whole trouble.

The Peace Proposal.

The firmness of Mr. Belmont in insisting upon a $3 rate for a ten-hour day in the case of subway motormen, however, has been somewhat tempered by certain additional provisions contained under this head in the peace proposal. Mr. Belmont, his friends assert, has in his heart a soft spot for the engineers who have spent the best years of their life in the service of the elevated road, and he is understood to have told Chief Stone that if they are not taken good care of in the apportionment of subway jobs it is not going to be his fault.

If the tentative agreement submitted last night should be ratified and go into effect, elevated motormen desiring to change and go into the subway would receive such preference in the way of picking out runs that, despite the lower wage scale, there would be an inducement for them to do so.

An elevated motorman of good standing, for instance, could have early morning and late afternoon runs, which would enable him to take his luncheon at home and yet sit down with his family for dinner in the evening. This in itself, it was pointed out, would more than make up for the difference in wages, especially as the ten hours will be counted from the time of reporting to the time of discontinuing—not merely the time actually spent in runs, as on nearly all other roads.

In the matter of priority and seniority some concessions were made by the company. Employes of the elevated system, whenever possible, will have preference in the subway, and under certain conditions their years of service on the elevated will stand to their credit when it comes to the matter of promotions.

Elevated employes changing to subway positions of the grade they have occupied on the elevated road will take their seniority with them. Employes on the other hand who apply for subway positions of a grade superior to what they have filled on the elevated system must take their lot with the beginners.

Wage Scale Increases.

In the proposition submitted by the company provision has also been made for increases in the wage scale of practically all the various grades of employment in the subway corresponding to positions on the elevated roads now filled by members of the Amalgamated Association. These increases are not large, but will, it is said, bring the scale of wages in the subway for employes of these classes up to the scale with the ratification of the last agreement between the Amalgamated Association and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

The proposition reached the three chiefs late last night. Although none of them was willing to discuss it or even admit that such a proposition had been received, they seemed well pleased with the situation. Mr. Belmont remained closeted with Vice President E. P. Bryan and Superintendent Frank Hedley at the Interborough office early last evening, and it was understood that this time was spent in discussing the various propositions contained in the company's offer and in reducing them to the form in which they were finally submitted.

No statement dealing in detail with the provisions of the document was given out by officials of the company last night. They declared that all information must come from the other side. Vice President Bryan, however, made the following statement:

"You may rest assured that no strike will be declared to-night, and I think everything will be amicably settled."

That the outlook for a not distant settlement of all the differences between the company and its men which marked the closing of the day was due to a change of sentiment on the part of the men seemed evident. Evidences of this change of heart became manifest early in the day. On Friday, when the strike vote was taken the air was full of strike talk. The men declared that they had made their final appeal to the company, and that any overtures thereafter must come from Mr. Belmont.

Yesterday morning the first thing Chief Stone of the Brotherhood of Engineers did was to contradict some of his earlier statements, frequently reiterated, that "it was up to Mr. Belmont," and that unless the road granted the demand for the $3.50 rate a strike surely would follow. And instead of setting about making arrangements for a strike Mr. Stone went into a secret conference, the upshot of which was that Chief Stone, First Vice Chief Wilson, and President Mahon of the Amalgamated sent a message to Mr. Belmont for another conference.

Mr. Belmont replied that he would be glad to receive at his residence, 44 West Thirty-fourth Street, at 2:30 in the afternoon. The conference occupied only half an hour. The men seemed relieved when they left the Belmont residence. Vice Grand Master Wilson of the firemen did most of the talking.

"We have had a heart-to-heart talk with Mr. Belmont and representatives of the Interborough Company," he said, "and it looks now as though a peaceful settlement of all outstanding differences between the company and its employes might be reached in the near future."

Chief Stone, on the other hand, declared that the conference had not changed the situation any.

The man who brought about the request for a conference, it was learned later, was Mr. Mahon, the International President of the Amalgamated Association. He reached this city from Detroit late on Friday evening. His first appearance in connection with the threatened trouble was at the conference of the National Chiefs yesterday morning.

Mr. Mahon, it is understood, at once declared that he was not in favor of the Amalgamated men engaging in a costly strike at this time for the sole purpose of giving support to the brotherhoods, who had point blank refused their aid to the members of the Amalgamated Association on the elevated system when they were fighting for recognition by the Interborough Company and the wage scale now in force.

He announced that he surely would not ratify the local pact patched up by President Pepper with the local organization of engineers and firemen until he had gained additional light on the situation from Mr. Belmont and the Interborough officials.

There was some very plain talking at the early morning conference of the chiefs. It was pointed out that if Mr. Mahon should refuse to ratify the agreement between the local branches of his organization and the two brotherhoods, the Amalgamated men would be welcomed as members of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, one of the great National railroad brotherhoods. Under those circumstances, however, the agreement which the Amalgamated men on the elevated have with the company and under which they are receiving higher wages than men doing similar work anywhere else in the country, would go out of force because it was made with the Amalgamated Association.

At the conference held at Mr. Belmont's house practically all that was said by the officials of the company was addressed to Mr. Mahon. In the company's offer, also, it is said, practically all the concessions are made to the Amalgamated men. And it was said that there certainly is nothing in the offer to encourage the brotherhoods to seek a footing in the subway.

Another circumstance that might have had something to do with the efforts set on foot by the men to have negotiations reopened was learned yesterday, when it was stated on good authority that the vote of the engineers had not been unanimous in favor of a strike, as had been asserted at the close of the polls on Friday night. It was recalled that the official ballot was not given out at that time.

Many of the engineers on the elevated are said to be opposed to a strike.

The Company Ready.

From an official of the Interborough Company it was learned yesterday that, regardless of what the present prospects may be, the company will go on preparing just as though a strike was expected.

"If an effort should be made to tie up the road," said this official, "we would have every line running within twenty-four hours. We calculate that after the first twenty-four hours we would be able to take care of about 80 per cent. of our normal traffic, or—if rioting and violence set in—possibly only 60 per cent. We would be able to make an increase of 10 per cent. for every succeeding twenty-four hours, and in three or four days would have everything running smoothly."

It was learned from this official that the company has 3,000 men ready to go to work on short notice.

Those who discussed the possibility of a strike yesterday figured that a curious and somewhat embarrassing situation would be created in regard to such union platform men as have been made special policemen and who had, with the other special policemen who are not union men, to take the statutory oath to support the Constitution and the laws of the State. The non-union men, in the event of a strike, would be under no embarrassment, while the union men would, under the law, be compelled to go through formalities prescribed by the rules of the Police Department before they could shake off responsibility as sworn peace officers if they chose to cast their lot with the strikers.

About fifty special policemen were sworn in on their own application and at the instance of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

The leaders will hold a long meeting to-day and will, it was said last night, send a reply to Mr. Belmont's proposal.

Population Shows Gain of Only 444,613 in Ten Years.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—The Minister of Commerce has received an official report of the last census of France, begun in 1901. It shows the population to be 38,961,945, or a gain of only 444,613 in ten years.

Comparative tables disclose that there is no other European country in which the population increases so slowly. The percentage of increases in Germany, Great Britain, and Russia is almost a third greater than in France for the same period.

BLOW STRUCK AT "CORNERS."

Court Holds Operators Cannot Compel Payment of Manipulated Price.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—According to a decision rendered to-day by Judge Chytraus of the Superior Court; Board of Trade operators who succeed in engineering a "corner" in wheat, corn, or other commodities in which transactions are made on 'change, have no right to compel payment of the manipulated price instead of the actual value of the commodity at the time fixed for the settling of trades.

The case was that of a number of firms and individuals against Board of Trade operators and the Bank of Montreal, in which bank was tied up nearly half a million dollars. This money represented the difference betwen the price for July oats, 1902, which was demanded by the manipulators of the "squeeze", and the actual market price.

UNIONS VOTE TO END LOCAL MEAT STRIKE

Decide There Is No Gain in Backing Chicago Fight.

PACKERS SCORE A POINT

Terms of Settlement Provide that Competent Men Now at Work Shall Be Retained.

By a vote of the thirteen locals of meat cutters and butcher workmen in this city the strike in sympathy with the Chicago butchers was declared off last night. The strikers here gain nothing by the fight, as it was purely sympathetic and they had no grievances of their own.

The men will return to work on Tuesday, the conditions being that the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company and the United Dressed Beef Company, the two firms against whom the strike was declared, will keep all the competent men they are now employing, and all strikers for whom there is room will be taken back, preference to be given to the rest when vacancies occur.

Prior to the action of the unions conferences were held between the strike leaders and the two firms. The strikers were apparently convinced that the strike was lost and at a meeting of the Executive Committee it was decided that it should be called off. This decision was then put to a referendum vote of the locals and affirmed.

The order of National President Donnelly, calling a strike in the independent shops, was never even considered. The action of the locals was independent of the National body, the Amalgamated Association of Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, of which Donnelly is President. The strike has lasted nearly four weeks and involved about 3,500 men in New York and vicinity.

GOMPERS WON'T INTERFERE.

Refuses to Call Federation Meeting for Chicago Strikers.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—President Donnelly, who sought to get President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor to convene the Executive Council of the National body with a view to involving all branches of organized labor in his struggle with the packers, has met with a refusal.

President Gompers in a telegram to President Donnelly to-day announced that it would be impossible to call a meeting of the Executive Council at this time. The only ray of hope held out to the strikers was that any proposition Donnelly had to submit might be laid before the regular meeting of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, to be held in the National capital on Sept. 12.

President Gompers's reply has cast a gloom over the camp of the stock yards strike leaders here. It is inferred he looks upon the struggle against the packers as a hopeless one.

A real meat famine now confronts the city. Restaurants and hotels have supplies running from two days to three weeks, but the latter quantity is only held by the very largest and most provident establishments. The strike seemed so near an end in the last seven days that many became careless and let their refrigerators run almost empty. The closing down of the independent plants has caught these people short, and there will be a great scramble to replenish.

Just as soon as it was reported that the handlers were called out, R. J. Collins, President of the Fulton Market Company, the membership of which includes the meat dealers on Fulton Street, called a meeting at the Leyden & Collins store, and a lengthy conference was held. As yet no plans which the dealers may have determined to act upon have been announced, but it is said at the market that a committee appointed at the conference may be sent to confer with the strike leaders.

The time set for calling out the handlers has been extended by the allied trades to Wednesday night. The commission men declare they will do all in their power to prevent a famine.

"The prolonged strike and the stick-up man and porch climber are silent partners. When the strike lasts over a week it is an invitation to the crook to come to town and get busy."

In this declaration Chief of Police O'Neill explained to-day the reign of crime that has fallen upon Chicago. To the presence of the police at strikes in all parts of Chicago O'Neill attributes the activity of criminals, who have instituted a series of thefts without apparent fear of the police.

"The lawbreaker is fully aware the policeman is too busy acting as an umpire between capital and labor to watch him," he said. "There are over 750 policemen working in the stockyards district."

AID FOR CHICAGO STRIKERS.

Federation of Labor to Raise Money for Their Families.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The executive officers of the Federation of Labor have decided to allow the agents of the Chicago butcher strikers to raise money throughout the federation to provide for the families of the strikers while they are out. Allied unions of the federation will be called on to contribute.

The Executive Committee of the federation will hold its annual meeting here Sept. 12. It has other matters besides the Chicago strike to consider, among them being the strike of the weavers at Fall River, and the prolonged strike of miners in Colorado. At federation headquarters it is stated, that the Colorado men have succeeded in raising abundant money for their campaign.

The committee is said to have under consideration a formidable programme for securing labor legislation from the next session of Congress.

APPEAL TO NON-UNION MEN.

Colorado Miners' Union Entreats Them to Quit Work.

TRINIDAD, Col., Sept. 3.—President Howells and Secretary Simpson of District 15, United Mine Workers of America, have issued a call entreating the non-union coal miners who have taken the places made vacant by the striking union miners to strike Sept. 7.

The call appeals to every non-union man in the Southern Colorado coal district and guarantees the same protection and help that is being furnished to the union men who are on strike.

KAISER AS BALLET MASTER.

He Shows Berlin Chorus Girls How a Dance Should Be Rendered.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—Emperor William has given yet another example of versatility. His latest achievement is as a stage director or ballet master.

A grand rehearsal of "Coppelia" was being held at the Royal Opera House, and the Emperor was present. The corps de ballet were engaged in a Slavic dance, and the Emperor did not like the tempo.

His Majesty walked on the stage, and showed the dancers and the orchestra how the dance should be rendered. His royal dignity was forgotten in his highly animated explanation of what he wanted.

He coached the ballet and the musicians until he was satisfied with the performance.

TRAIN KILLS SIX IN TROLLEY.

World's Fair Engine Crashes Into Suburban Car.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 3.—Six persons were killed and nineteen were injured, two probably fatally and nine seriously, to-day by the collision of a Wabash World's Fair shuttle train with a suburban electric car at the Sarah Street crossing. There were twenty-five passengers in the car and none escaped injury.

The shuttle train was returning to Union Station from the World's Fair grounds at the rate of about twenty miles an hour, it is stated. The street car, which was on its way to the suburbs with a load of people returning home, stopped directly in front of the engine and was cut in two.

The trucks of the car were knocked 100 feet away, while part of its roof was carried 200 feet further by the train. Bodies of the dead and injured, with wreckage of the dismantled car, were scattered along the track for that distance.

A. W. Burbank, engineer of the shuttle train, who blames the motorman of the electric car for the accident, said:

"I was within 100 yards of the suburban crossing when I saw the suburban car start across the track. It looked to me as if it had ample time to get across."

No satisfactory explanation has been given why the car stopped in the middle of the track.

The dead and fatally injured are all St. Louisans, so far as is known. Two women and a twelve-year-old boy who were killed have not yet been identified, however.

Theodore Cook, the motorman, whose shoulder was fractured, is held a prisoner at the City Hospital, and the conductor of the suburban car, Patrick Sheehan, has been arrested.

BOY DIES FROM CHUM'S BLOW.

"Soak 'Im, Don't Be a Fraid Cat," Said Others, but Hyman Was Dead.

Eight-year-old Hyman Abramson and his chum, William Katz, two years older, were playing "tag" and "duck on the rock" with a lot of other children on the public playgrounds at Monroe and Market Streets yesterday afternoon. Everybody was having a good time until the two youngsters got too rough.

The other children said afterward that Hyman tried to kick the Katz boy. There was a quarrel, and William swung his right, catching Hyman over the heart. The lad fell like a log, and the other youngsters gathered around him.

"Aw, git up and soak 'im. Don't be a fraid cat," said one.

But Hyman didn't get up, and he didn't speak. He lay quite still in a way that gave the childish onlookers a creepy feeling. Some of the older ones carried him to a bench and told a policeman. Then an ambulance surgeon from Gouverneur Hospital came and said Hyman was dead.

It was learned from his parents, who live at 50 Market Street, that the boy had been subject to heart trouble. The Katz boy, who lives near by, at No. 69, went home, but didn't tell his parents what had happened. When they heard of it he had been sent to Brooklyn on an errand.

SLASHING PRICE OF COAL.

Pittsburg Company Making Cuts Which Other Producers Have to Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 3.—There is slashing in the price of coal, to secure large contracts. The Pittsburg Coal Company has reorganized its whole working machinery so as to reduce expenditures in the production of coal at least 15 cents a ton. This has enabled the concern to secure some of the largest contracts of the year within the past month.

The latest contract was secured from Cox Brothers of New York for 100,000 tons to be delivered before Dec. 1. The other coal producers have been trying to meet the cuts made by the Pittsburg concern, which is employing 50,000 men and shipping 2,500,000 tons of coal in a month, an amount equivalent to the production of the entire State of West Virginia.

The cut made by the Pittsburg concern will cause anthracite producers to meet the low prices, as Eastern consumers are contracting for soft coal in preference to paying the anthracite producers the highest price of the year for fuel.

BURGLAR A BON VIVANT.

Ate Like an Epicure and Stole Like a Fop.

Special to The New York Times.

MILLBURN, N. J., Sept. 3.—A burglar who seemed to be more interested in obtaining a square meal than carrying off any large amount of booty visited the house of Dr. D. E. English last night. He set the dining table with plates, knife, fork, and other appurtenances. He then turned on the electric light, lighted the gas range, boiled some eggs, set his meal on the table, and ate it. Then he went to the ice-box, from which he took some roast beef, made it into sandwiches, and placed it in one of the physician's baskets. His menu consisted of canned lobster, roast beef, bread, and tomatoes. The débris was found this morning.

After satisfying his appetite the burglar went out through the back door, which he left open, to the barn, where slept Thomas Sullivan, Dr. English's coachman. He gathered up the coachman's clothing, $7, a pair of stylish gaiters, the pride of master and coachman, and a razor, and then departed without disturbing the sleeper. Down stairs he changed his own shoes for the pair of beautiful gaiters and departed. The basket of eatables was left behind and found with the old shoes to-day.

SOLDIERS IN DIRE STRAITS

Tales of Desperate Fighting and Terrible Hardships Told.

STORES BURNED BY RUSSIANS

Guns Left By Retreating Army Are Prizes of the Japanese—Noncombatants Killed.

TOKIO, Sunday, Sept. 4.—(10 A. M.)—Fighting in the vicinity of Liao-Yang is continuing to-day.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sunday, Sept. 4.—(12:15 A. M.)—All Russia will learn by this morning's newspapers that Gen. Kuropatkin's army is in full retreat to the northward, that Liao-Yang has been abandoned by the Russians and occupied by the enemy, and that Gen. Stakelberg's corps of 25,000 men is surrounded and cut off.

A dispatch was received last night from Gen. Kuropatkin announcing that he has ordered his army to evacuate Liao-Yang and withdraw northward.

The Russians, the General stated, blew up the magazines and set fire to the army stores and provisions at Liao-Yang before evacuating that place.

Gen. Kuropatkin said that the First Siberian Army Corps, (Gen. Stakelberg's corps,) which during the past five days had suffered considerable loss, had been obliged to retire several kilometers westward as a result of the Japanese attack on Sykwantun, (eleven miles east of Liao-Yang,) hence the order to evacuate Liao-Yang.

Japanese Captured Sykwantun.

Gen. Kuropatkin said further:

"On the night of Sept. 1 Gen. Kuroki attacked Sykwantun, captured a majority of the Russian positions, the occupation of which was completed on the night of Sept. 2, the Russians retiring six miles distant.

"The First Siberian Army Corps was almost surrounded. This corps previously saved Gen. Orloff's detachment by attacking the Japanese flank when Gen. Orloff was threatened with annihilation. G. Orloff was seriously wounded.

In an earlier report under yesterday's date Gen. Kuropatkin, describing the change of front resulting from Gen. Kuroki's flanking movement, said the Russians advanced against Kuroki on Friday and that the Japanese the same day attacked the Russian right, but were repulsed.

Kuropatkin Reported Successes.

The General Staff yesterday afternoon reconsidered its determination not to make public Gen. Kuropatkin's dispatch to the Emperor of Friday, and the text was given out as follows:

"At nightfall Thursday the Japanese attacked our Sykwantun position, but were repulsed after a hot fight. They renewed the attack at night, this time with success, driving back a regiment in the direction of Sakutun. The retreat of this regiment led to the evacuation of the positions held by other troops. Toward morning the troops advanced gradually in order to retake the Sykwantun position.

"At dawn on Friday I assumed the offensive against the troops of Gen. Kuroki's army. At midday the heads of the attacking corps are in line and preparations are being made to retake by artillery the position captured during the night by the Japanese, and the infantry is also advancing to the attack.

"During the night the Japanese violently bombarded the interior of the Russian position inside the town of Liao-Yang, the railroad station, and the railroad itself. Our losses were insignificant.

"I have just received a dispatch from the Chief of the Liao-Yang garrison, timed 10:35 A. M., to the effect that the Japanese attacked the fort situated in the centre of our position, but they were repulsed with very great loss. We had six men killed in the fort."

Report from Sakharoff.

Lieut. Gen. Sakharoff, in a report to the General Staff dated Sept. 2, says:

"To-day our troops assaulted the heights of Sykwantun, and after a desperate fight we captured the whole chain, but immediately made the discovery that we had to deal with a strong Japanese force with a front extending from Yen-Tai to the River Tai-Tse.

"A detachment under Major Gen. Orloff, which was guarding the Yen-Tai mines, advanced a short distance, but, meeting the Japanese superior in force and in a strong position, had to retire.

"Major Gen. Orloff was wounded, but the danger of the enemy's movement was averted by his return to the station at Yen-Tai.

"The gallant regiments of the First Siberian Rifle Corps came up, and Gen. Stakelberg checked the attacking Japanese. In this fight the brave commander of the Second Siberian Regiment, Col. Ozersky, was severely wounded.

"At 9 o'clock in the evening there was a lull in the fighting all along the line, and the only firing heard was the boom of guns at Liao-Yang. According to a telephone report, the garrison at Liao-Yang repulsed the second Japanese attack.

"In order to ascertain the enemy's strength two regiments (6,000 men) on the west front were ordered to attack. After a fierce fight it was discovered that the enemy opposing the two regiments were more than two divisions (about 35,000 men) strong.

"The losses to the Russian Army have not been ascertained exactly, but according to the latest account they exceed 3,000 in killed or wounded.

Shells Fell in Liao-Yang.

"At 3:45 o'clock P. M. the first Japanese shell fell in Liao-Yang, and was followed by a hail of projectiles which swept the railroad station and the suburbs of the town itself. Fortunately the station was empty, all the rolling stock having been removed. The first persons wounded were seven subjects of charity, a doctor, several Chinese, and a commissariat non-commissioned officer.

"By 5 o'clock in the evening several fires had been caused by the bombardment, and the booming of the guns followed our train as it carried off the wounded.

"The Russian casualties in the fighting of Aug. 31 and Sept. 1 are stated to amount to 7,000. The enemy lost double or treble that number.

"Japanese prisoners appear to be worn out."

Russian Hopes Dashed.

The hopes of victory raised in Russian breasts by the earlier official telegrams proved short-lived. Gen. Kuropatkin had scarcely begun the offensive against Gen. Kuroki's army when he was compelled by the overwhelming force of the Japanese flanking movement to give up all idea of continuing his advance, and hurriedly withdrew in the direction of Mukden.

The retreat is the logical consequence of the Russian plan of leading on and tiring out the Japanese at the successive stations of the road northward, thus placing their foe at the constantly growing disadvantage of lengthened lines of communication.

The success of this plan was marred by a blunder of Gen. Stakelberg, who, in the words of Gen. Kuropatkin, insisted on placing his own interpretation on orders, instead of fulfilling them. Gen. Stakelberg erred in failing to cross the Tai-Tse River when Gen. Kuropatkin decided that the whole army should retreat to its northern bank. (This statement is apparently erroneous, as Gen. Sakharoff's report says that Gen. Stakelberg did cross the Tai-Tse.)

This blunder, it is feared, will involve the loss of the whole of the First Siberian Army Corps, consisting of the First, Second, and Sixth Rifle Divisions, the Usuri Cossack Brigade, the First Siberian Artillery Brigade, and a sapper battalion.

Russian Stores Lost.

The abandonment of the whole position at Liao-Yang involves the loss of a great accumulation of stores, though it is believed that much of these had been sent north before the commencement of fighting.

Something akin to consternation prevails among Russians who have learned of the disaster to Gen. Stakelberg's corps. All realize that there is small hope now for the relief of Port Arthur, but the military officials are unanimous in the belief that it would only be folly for Gen. Kuropatkin to remain and run the risk of being surrounded with his whole army.

It is declared that the Commander in Chief, by his withdrawal north, has actually converted what might have been disaster to himself into what is regarded as a reverse for the Japanese, for the failure of the Japanese to hold Gen. Kuropatkin's army and inflict a decisive blow, it is asserted, cannot be regarded otherwise than a reverse. Field Marshal Oyama's tenacious frontal attack and the clever flank movements could not have had any other object than to compel the Russians to accept a decisive engagement.

OYAMA REPORTS VICTORY.

Speaks of the Russians as Routed—Kuroki Commands Railway.

LONDON, Sunday, Sept. 4.—A dispatch from Tokio to the Japanese Legation here says Field Marshal Marquis Oyama reports as follows:

"Sept. 3 (9 A. M.)—A remnant of the routed enemy is still offering some resistance outside Liao-Yang.

"Our central and left armies are attacking it."

An earlier message from Marquis Oyama said:

"The enemy in front of our left and centre armies continued to retreat on Sept. 2 to the right bank of the Tai-Tse River, except the portion of his forces occupying the defense works from the south to the northwest of Liao-Yang and the heights northeast of Nutchang.

"Our armies are continuing the attack. Our right army occupied on the morning of Sept. 2 part of the heights west of Hei-ying-Tai.

Kuroki's Successful Move.

GEN. KUROKI'S HEADQUARTERS ON THE FIELD, Sept. 2, via Fu-San, Sept. 3.—For the past two days the army under Gen. Kuroki has pushed to the northwest toward the railroad north of Liao-Yang.

His right wing has taken the last line of intervening hills and holds a commanding position from which to strike the railroad.

The fighting lately has been continuous and heavy, and there has been much artillery fire.

Last night the Japanese carried a strongly fortified Russian position north of the Tai-Tse River and west of Awangtuan by a bayonet charge. In this fight the Japanese losses were small.

Positions Yesterday Morning.

TOKIO, Sept. 5.—(Morning.)—The Russian force confronting Field Marshal Oyama's left and centre continues slowly to give ground in retreat, and is crossing to the right bank of the Tai-Tse River.

A portion of the Russian army occupies a line of defense works extending northwest from a point south of Liao-Yang. The Russians also hold an eminence northeast of Nutchang, on the right bank of the Tai-Tse. This evidently is intended to shield the general retreat of both the left and centre.

The Japanese armies continued to press the Russians yesterday. They moved forward and occupied a line extending from Tatepjif to Yanchialintsu. Marquis Oyama telegraphed that he hoped they would reach the right bank of the Tai-Tse this morning.

Gen. Kuroki, after serious fighting, succeeded yesterday in taking a portion of an eminence near Hei-ying-Tai. Details of this fighting have not been received.

The Russians again appear to be concentrating in the vicinity of the Yen-Tai coal mines, twelve miles northeast of Liao-Yang. Possibly another great battle will occur there.

The present trend of the movements indicates that the Japanese may move past Liao-Yang, temporarily leaving the city untouched.

BLOODIEST BATTLE OF HISTORY.

Engagement Also the Longest—Wonderful Valor on Both Sides.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sunday, Sept. 4.—(2:50 A. M.)—The battle of Liao-Yang, which began with a Japanese advance on Aug. 24, the day of the christening of the Czarevitch and concluded yesterday (Saturday) with the retreat of Gen. Kuropatkin, is believed to have been the longest and the bloodiest of history.

Numerous incidents in the fighting upset the theory evolved by experiences in the Boer war that a modern battle must necessarily be fought at long range. Both sides repeatedly came to hand-to-hand encounters in bayonet charges, and the men of both sides were often so near each other that they could distinguish features and hear words of command.

In one instance they were separated only by the width of the railroad, and actually threw stones at each other. The mad heroism of the Japanese and the stubborn tenacity of the Russians has not been paralleled anywhere save in some of the desperate encounters of the American civil war.

Correspondents state that several of the bayonet attacks made by the Japanese throughout the battle were forced by the depletion of ammunition, of which modern arms entail such extravagant expenditure. The Japanese came on with empty guns and with hopes of finishing the attack with cold steel, but it was proved that such attacks cannot be driven home in the face of the fire of breech-loading guns.

Artillerymen Suffered Terribly.

The Russian artillerymen suffered terribly in the prolonged fighting south of the Tai-Tse River. One battery lost forty men killed and the remainder wounded, and when a fresh battery was brought up into position, the survivors protested with tears against being removed, begging to be allowed to die beside their own guns.

The work of the Red Cross, which, throughout the war has been most devoted on both sides, has proved almost as dangerous to nurses and doctors as has the work of the combatants. Many bearers and assistants were killed or wounded in attending to injured under fire. A Sister of Mercy was killed and a surgeon was wounded in the final assaults on Liao-Yang.

American Correspondents Shot.

Telegraph operators and correspondents also have suffered severely. Two correspondents of The Associated Press have been shot. One has been decorated for bravery.

During the ten days' fighting the condition of the soldiers of both armies has been pitiable. Many of the Japanese prisoners were starving and almost naked when captured, which speaks volumes for Japanese endurance.

It is wonderful that the commissary arrangements made it possible to supply the men during such a continuous battle. The Russians were better fed, being near their own base, but the terrible strain of the continuous fighting caused some of them to fall asleep in the midst of the cannonade and even on the firing line.

MUCH ANXIETY IN FRANCE.

But It Was Not Believed Yesterday That Kuropatkin Was Routed.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—The battle of Liao-Yang attracts intense interest and anxiety among the French officials and public generally, as it is regarded as likely to prove the turning point of the war.

The Foreign office construes the latest advices received here this afternoon as showing that Gen. Kuropatkin has suffered a serious check, though not yet amounting to a defeat or a rout. The officials continue to say that he is executing a plan of slow withdrawal toward Mukden, giving dogged resistance as he falls back.

Military experts point out that the battle is greater than any fought during the Franco-German war, the siege of Metz involving 350,000 men on both sides, whereas there were over 400,000 at Liao-Yang. The Figaro says it is the greatest fight since the battle of Leipsic.

The newspapers here reprint the Berlin Tageblatt's statement that King Edward's visit to the Emperor of Austria brought out a mediation movement to which the United States and France are parties When questioned on the subject to-day a foreign Office official replied:

"Owing to the frequency of such reports you are authorized to state that France has had absolutely no communication with Russia up to the present time relative to mediation."

Captain T. Bentley Mott, the American Military Attaché here, will be present at the grand military manoeuvres, begining at Dijon Sept. 8. Three Army Corps, numbering 60,000 men, will participate, under the command of Gen. Brugére, the Commander in Chief. The manoeuvres are expected to develop features of attack and defense similar to those the Japanese and Russian Armies are carrying out in earnest. Capt. Mott will be the guest of Gen. Brugére, who is supplying horses, mess, orderlies, and a complete equipment to the foreign attachés.

HAD TO ABANDON GUNS.

Mukden Hears Russians Lost a Number as Early as Wednesday.

MUKDEN, Friday, Sept. 2, (Delayed.)—After six days' battle, on the last three days of which the heaviest fighting occurred, the Japanese on Wednesday abandoned their direct attack on Liao-Yang in favor of a flanking movement.

The Russian artillery fire was greatly aided by the sending up of balloons southeast of Liao-Yang, thus locating the Japanese batteries.

The Russians were compelled to abandon a number of guns, being unable to remove them through the mud.

On Wednesday Japanese shells reached the railroad station and the railroad bridge over the Tai-Tse River. Others fell as far north as Yen-Tai.

The railroad is being used almost exclusively by hospital trains and for the transportation of Japanese prisoners.

The latter are in a dreadful state of exhaustion. Many of them had been without food for two days, during which downpours of rain filled the trenches. Their shoes and clothes are in tatters.

KUROPATKIN WAS PRAISED

His Strategy Was Described in Official Circles as Brilliant—What the General Staff Thought Would Happen.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 3.—A report was received here early this morning that Gen. Kuropatkin was in full retreat. The War Office admitted that such a rumor had come from the seat of war, but declared that it was not official.

It was evident, however, that the report fell like a cold douche upon the General Staff. There were signs that importance was attached to it. The Emperor, who was going to Libau to-day, postponed his trip. It is stated that the Czar for the last three days has been spending most of his time with his Cabinet at Alexandra villa, with maps spread out before him, following the movements of the battle.

A high officer of the General Staff said he did not believe Gen. Kuropatkin could afford to abandon his stores at Liao-Yang, and thought an army corps would be left there to protect them, suggesting that Liao-Yang might become the "Ladysmith of the Russo-Japanese war."

The War Office suggested that if Kuropatkin was retiring it might be due to the development of another flanking movement by the Japanese, further north and from the west. It was pointed out that there were persistent reports that the Japanese were moving up the Liao-Ho toward Sinming-Tun just before the battle of Liao-Yang began.

It was also asserted that the main operations had been transferred to the north bank of the Tai-Tse River, where Gen. Kuropatkin had assumed the offensive, hurling the bulk of his army against Field Marshal Oyama's right, under Gen. Kuroki, and at the same time holding the Japanese centre and left, on the other side of the river, in check with the force left on the south bank for that purpose.

"Brilliant Strategical Stroke."

The operations on the south side, it was declared, were now regarded as being of secondary importance, and Kuropatkin's action in throwing the bulk of his army across the river to the right bank in order to protect his rear and give him an opportunity to try conclusions single-handed with Kuroki was described as a brilliant strategical stroke.

The Russian force, which, it was said, was left on the Liao-Yang side of the Tsai-Tse was described as strong enough, behind its fortified positions, to hold Oku and Nodzu long enough to give Kuropatkin a chance to strike Kuroki and at the same time to protect the bridges. In case of a reverse, it was said, the bridges would furnish ample facilities for the Russian troops on the Liao-Yang side to rejoin the main army.

The movement that the authorities at Tokio regarded as a Russian concentration at Yen-Tai was regarded here as Kuropatkin's preparation for taking the offensive.

For strategic reasons the General Staff at first decided not to publish the text of Gen. Kuropatkin's official dispatch of yesterday, the substance of which was sent to The Associated Press. Later it was made public. In military circles Kuropatkin's tactics were approved and confidence was expressed in the issue.

The failure of Tokio to chronicle what was described as the voluntary passage of Kuropatkin's main army across the river was said here to indicate that the Japanese desired to reap as much glory as possible if they succeeded in taking possession of Liao-Yang.

The Public Puzzled.

Kuropatkin's decision to make the crossing with his army was not known to the Russian public until this morning. The public had difficulty in figuring out the situation, but the statement that Kuropatkin had begun his attack upon Kuroki served to revive the people's spirits, which had dropped perceptibly during the previous forty-eight hours.

STAKELBERG'S GALLANT ARMY.

Has Had to Bear the Brunt of the Fighting Since Early June.

News that Gen. Stakelberg's First Siberian Army Corps has at last met with complete disaster contains much of pathos. After losing about 10,000 men at Vafangow and bearing the brunt of the rear guard fighting in the retreat of more than 150 miles, this gallant body deserved a better fate.

It fell to the lot of the First Siberian Corps first to meet the Japanese in an open field in pitched battle. It was early in June, after Oku had taken Nan-Shan Hill and part of his army was marching to invest Port Arthur, that the Czar sent orders to Gen. Kuropatkin to relieve the garrison.

To Lieut. Gen. Stakelberg, a hero of many wars, and fighting companion of Gen. Kuropatkin, fell the task. With his corps of about 50,000 men he marched down the Liao-Tung Peninsula, expecting to fall upon the Japanese rear guard, while the Port Arthur garrison was to drive back the investing force.

Gen. Stakelberg's army narrowly escaped annihilation in this instance. Secretly a Japanese force of at least 50,000 men, in addition to those driving in the garrison at Port Arthur, had been gathered in the lower Liao-Tung peninsula. The armies met at Vafangow, or Telissu, on June 15.

Stakelberg underestimated the force opposed to him and failed to guard against a flanking movement. The result was that just as he had prepared to strike a blow at the Japanese right flank his own right was enveloped by a column that had made a long detour and was almost annihilated. Only a sudden storm that impeded the movement of the Japanese saved the Russian army from destruction.

It was this disaster that compelled Gen. Kuropatkin to aid the development of the Japanese plans. He was compelled to march south with a large part of his army to extricate Gen. Stakelberg, who was threatened from the south by Oku and from the east by Nodzu. The latter at one time almost cut him off.

Then began the long retreat to Liao-Yang. Kuropatkin, threatened on the flank by Kuroki, moved back, leaving Stakelberg to hold the rear guard, first at Kai-Chow, then at Tashi-Chão, then at Hai-Cheng, and finally at An-shan-Chan. After the Russians were driven out of the last named position, Stakelberg's battered corps was engaged in the fighting south of Liao-Yang, and he was wounded in one engagement.

PRINCESS TO FLEE TO FRANCE.

Her Agent There Talks of Plot to Deprive Her of Her Fortune.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Copyright, 1904, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—To judge from statements of M. Henri de Nousanne, whom I saw to-day, and who is the representative here of the united interests of Princess Louise of Saxe-Coburg and Count Metassich, this affair will be fruitful of revelations of a most sensational nature.

According to M. de Nousanne, the Emperor's brother-in-law, Duke Ernst Guenther of Schleswig-Holstein, recently borrowed largely in London on the prospective heritage of Princess Louise and invested the money in a big transatlantic steamship enterprise, the Director of which is known to be the Emperor's private financial agent.

Consequently every means, M. de Nousanne says, will be adopted to prevent the Princess from recovering her civic rights and denouncing the plot to deprive her of her fortune.

Though liable to arrest on entering France, the Princess intends to come here, trusting to public opinion to protect her; but she is in a very fatigued and excited state, and naturally changeable, so at any moment she may alter her mind and go to England or America, where she feels she would be safe.

BAD ELSTER, Saxony, Sept. 3.—A note left for her maid Olga by Princeess Louise of Saxe-Coburg when she escaped from her hotel here early Tuesday morning, requesting the maid to keep her belongings carefully, closed with the words:

WOMAN SHOT IN ODD ACCIDENT.

Wind Slammed Door and Threw Gun from Rack.

Bearing a woman in a critical condition from a gunshot wound, Edward Morrison's naphtha launch raced in a gale across Jamaica Bay, early yesterday morning, while a doctor worked over her. Several times the frail craft was in danger of swamping and had to be bailed.

The woman was Mrs. John Wiesbrod of 128 Woodbine Street, Brooklyn, who was accidentally shot in the breast. The accident occurred at the Summer home of Edward Morrison, on Black Hall Island, near the Rockaway Inlet. Mrs. Wiesbrod was asleep shortly after midnight yesterday when the slamming of a door by a gust of wind threw a shotgun from a rack in an adjoining room. The weapon was discharged, and the full load of shot tore through a thin frame partition, lodging in the woman's side.

Mr. Morrison jumped into his launch and hurried to Canarsie for medical aid. He brought back Dr. Charles S. Thall, who saw at once that the woman's removal to a hospital was necessary. She was wrapped in blankets and carried aboard the launch. Canarsie was a full eight miles away, and a gale had sprung up. The night was pitch dark, too, and Skipper Morrison had to guess his course; but after an hour and a half's fight with the storm Canarsie was reached and Mrs. Wiesbrod was taken to the Bradford Street Hospital, in East New York. It is believed that she will die.

J. P. MORGAN'S KIND ACT.

Gives Up Pleasure in Canada to Visit Sick Friend—Collecting Bric-a-brac.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Sept. 3.—Instead of accompanying the Archbishop of Canterbury on a sightseeing tour of Montreal yesterday, J. Pierpont Morgan left by special train, and at Burlington, Vt., was soon at the bedside of a sick friend. He canceled engagements with the distinguished prelate's party to do this.

Returning to Montreal, the New York financier gratified his well-known passion for rare bric-à-brac, &c. He visited auction rooms and places, where he obtained old curios. Several dealers got big checks from him, and in Mr. Morgan's rooms at the Windsor Hotel are old brass candlesticks, odd weapons, several very old books, and other articles of value lately purchased.

He is interested in old jewels and has purchased from Major Rogers of Montreal, for $750, a remarkable pearl weighing twenty-four grams.

DEPEW'S POCKET PICKED.

Binghamton Sleuths Arrest Two Actors, Who Are Much Flattered.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Senator Chauncey M. Depew was the victim of pickpockets while attending the Whitneys Point Fair Thursday. For two days pickpockets had reaped a harvest at the fair. Over $1,000 is known to have been stolen in one day, and there are scores of victims who never made known their small losses.

In the course of the hand-shaking reception on the grounds some one cleverly abstracted a sum of money from Senator Depew's pocket. He did not discover his loss until about to leave for New York.

Last evening the Binghamton police arrested two men they believe to have been guilty of picking Senator Depew's pockets, but who proved to be actors now engaged in this city. The arrest made a hit with the comedians, who are now advertising themselves as the only performers ever charged with robbing a United States Senator. The amount of Senator Depew's loss is not exactly known.

$800,000 FIRE IN MEMPHIS.

Began in a Grocery House in the Wholesale District.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 3.—Fire on Front Street, in the heart of the wholesale district, today destroyed property approximating in value $800,000. The fire originated in the Oliver-Finnie Company's grocery from an unknown cause. The stock and building were destroyed. The building on the north of the Oliver-Finnie Company, owned by John Denle's sons, stored with lime, was partially crushed by falling walls. The Memphis Paper Company's building was crushed. It was also partially burned, as were the building of W. C. Early & Co., wholesale commission merchants, and the rear portions of the J. T. Ferguson & Co. building.

The Oliver-Finnie Company's loss is between $400,000 and $500,000. Winne, Love & Co. and Beher & Co. were also among the firms who suffered loss.

LAST HOPE GONE OF AIDING PORT ARTHUR

Garrison Can No Longer Expect Help from Kuropatkin.

WARSHIPS MAKE A SORTIE

The Bayan Repaired—The Novy Krai Reports a Repulse of the Japanese on Aug. 26.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sunday, Sept. 4.—Gen. Kuropatkin's retreat will undoubtedly have a discouraging effect on the garrison at Port Arthur, which can no longer hope for relief from the north.

It is considered doubtful here, however, whether the Japanese are in a position to press the siege, and it is more than probable that they have diverted a portion of the besieging army to reinforce their troops operating in Manchuria.

This would account for the temporary lull in the fighting at Port Arthur. It is noticeable that the siege reports reaching here do not mention further assaults on the fortress, but only speak of bombardments.

Advices from Port Arthur dated Aug. 31 announce that Rear Admiral Oukhtomsky's squadron went out Aug. 29 and shelled the Japanese positions. The squadron consisted of the battleships Retvizan and Peresviet, the armored cruiser Bayan, and the protected cruiser Pallada. This is the first intimation that the repairs on the Bayán had been completed.

The vessels put to sea at 6 o'clock in the morning, under cover of the batteries, and returned safely, after accomplishing their mission.

The message adds that the Japanese are bombarding the fortress daily and nightly, but are not causing serious damage, the inhabitants seeking refuge in the bombproofs.

This message, which was sent from Che-Foo, says the Japanese continue to provision their armies from Wei-hai-Wei and Che-Foo, loading steamers outside those ports.

CHE-FOO, Sept. 3.—(9 P. M.)—A copy of the Port Arthur Novy Krai of Aug. 27 has reached here. The paper speaks of the Russian battleship Retvizan having shelled Japanese troops who appeared near the village of Wudianfan, and this would indicate that some of the Russian warships at Port Arthur are not so seriously damaged as the reports from Chinese sources have represented.

The Novy Krai confirms the official Japanese report that the Japanese cruisers Kasuga and Nisshin bombarded two small forts near Golden Hill some time ago, but it does not say that these forts were silenced, as the Japanese reported. These two forts are in the vicinity of Wudianfan, which is commanded by Fort No. 2.

The Japanese mounted eight guns in front of Wudianfan on Aug. 25, and have established one large and one small fort to the northeast of the village. It was a detachment of Japanese cavalry and infantry which appeared in the open in the vicinity of Wudianfan, which the Retvizan helped to force back. A gun on one of the new Japanese forts was struck by a Russian shell and ruined.

The account published in the Novy Krai does not go into details, but the inference is obvious that the Japanese have been assaulting the smaller forts dominated by Golden Hill. The paper makes reference to a trench along the hills, and remarks that only the heads of the Japanese troops can be seen above it.

On the night of Aug. 25, according to the Novy Krai, a piece of white paper on the end of a pole was hoisted above the Japanese trenches. The Russians ceased firing and sent a detail forward to communicate with the enemy. The Japanese, in imperfect Russian, requested assistance in removing their dead. The Novy Krai considers this request strange, considering the fact that the Japanese do not allow the Russians to remove their dead.

At 3 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 26 a Russian searchlight revealed the Japanese troops opposite Fort No. 1, beginning operations, and thereupon the entire Russian line opened fire upon the enemy with rifles, occasionally using cannon. In reply the Japanese fired irregularly at Fort No. 3.

Daylight developed the startling fact that the Japanese had advanced a trench to the north of Fort No. 2. This trench was manned heavily with artillery, which interfered seriously with the Russian fire. The Japanese then opened fire with six guns on the hill known as the Eagle's Nest, in the meantime continuing to use sand bags for the further strengthening of their newly intrenched positions.

The Russians concentrated their fire on the sand bags, the Japanese replying from another position three-quarters of a mile to the northeast.

The Novy Krai declares in conclusion that at 10 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 26 the Japanese were unable longer to endure the bombardment and abandoned the newly made trench to the north of Fort No. 2 and Wudianfan, fleeing to the low ground near the railroad.

The Novy Krai asserts that a Japanese torpedo boat was sunk off Port Arthur on Aug. 25.

An intelligent Chinese, who has arrived here, says that on the night of Aug. 29 the Japanese surprised the Russians at Pali-Chwang and inflicted severe losses. The Russians retired and the Japanese occupied their position.

The next morning at 3 o'clock the Japanese moved from their new vantage ground in heavy force and desperately assaulted the Pali-Chwang and an adjoining fort repeatedly until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when they were compelled to retire, losing over 1,000 men.

Finding these forts impregnable the next morning at 4 o'clock the Japanese forces hurled themselves against another fort near Pali-Chwang. By hand-to-hand fighting they succeeded in driving out the Russians and occupying their positions at 7 o'clock in the morning.

Artillery was brought up and desperate efforts were made to make the position secure, but after enduring for seven hours artillery fire from the other forts the Japanese were compelled to retire.

The Japanese succeeded, however, in rendering the position useless to the Russians, and it is now unoccupied.

It is believed that the weakening of the Russian line will result in further efforts to break through in this quarter. The bombardment of the town continues.

The Russian warships occasionally reply to the Japanese bombardment.

GANG DECAPITATES VICTIMS.

Much Excitement Caused by Finding of Bodies in Wyoming.

Special to The New York Times.

BASIN, Wyo., Sept. 3.—A headless body discovered two days ago near Eagle's Nest has been identified as that of Thomas Williams.

He was, it is almost certain, slain a month ago by the mysterious gang of cutthroats who recently robbed and killed a cowboy named Davis near this city, decapitated the body, and threw it into the river. The head of neither of the victims has been found.

The two crimes have created a profound sensation here. The authorities have employed detectives to aid in running down the guilty parties.

HORSE KILLS BOAR IN FIGHT.

Attacked by the Latter and Crippled for Life.

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, Conn., Sept. 3.—In a desperate fight which lasted for an hour, a valuable horse belonging to William Pinckney of Brookfield was injured so badly that it probably will be crippled for life, and a vicious boar, also owned by Mr. Pinckney, was killed. The fight between the two animals occurred last night.

The horse had been turned into a pasture lot to graze. In one corner of this lot was a pen in which the boar, a large brute with long tusks and teeth of razorlike sharpness, was kept. The presence of the horse near the pen enraged the boar, which, after trying several times, broke down the side of the pen, escaping.

The boar attacked the horse, which was taken by surprise. With the boar's teeth buried in one of its hind legs, the horse ran across the lot dragging its assailant behind it. The horse kicked madly with its free foot and finally shook the boar off.

The latter resumed the attack and succeeded in frightfully gashing the horse on the legs and body. The horse kicked the brute time and again, and had it partly disabled when its owner and several farm hands heard the noise of the fight and came running to the scene. The boar was finallay beaten off with clubs and pitchforks, but not until it had been mortally wounded. The horse is living, but its injuries have probably lamed it for life.

SCULPTOR'S EYES BLACKENED.

Fixes Damage at $2,000 in Suit Against His Assailant.

Pierre Feitu, a sculptor, of 51 West Tenth Street, is suing Eugene F. Aucaigne, manager of H. V. Bocnne's bronze foundry, in the City Court for $2,000 damages, alleging that Aucaigne assaulted him and blackened his eyes. The assault, he says, occurred on July 14 last while both men were on a train bound for their Summer homes at Valhalla.

Feitu had been in the habit of sending his models to Aucaigne, who superintended the reproduction of them in bronze. But for some reason the men quarreled. Feitu's friends say he decided to send his models to a rival casting plant. He had received an order from the French Society to design a bronze memorial for presentation to Mayor McClellan in commemoration of the Slocum steamboat disaster. Instead of sending it to his old friend Aucaigne he sent it to a rival foundry.

On July 14, according to the sculptor's affidavit, he was riding in the smoking car when he saw Aucaigne with two women in another car. The sculptor says he did not speak to Aucaigne, but declares that after the train had passed White Plains the latter entered the smoker and attacked him without provocation. The result, according to the picture painted in the complaint, was that the metal artist decorated the sculptor's eyes with two large, black rings.

In answer to the complaint Aucaigne says he was justified because Feitu had said things about his character.

THUGS BEAT AND ROB WOMAN AT BRONX PARK

Policeman Finds Her Unconscious Behind Bushes on Road.

HAD LOST HER COMPANIONS

She Said That She Was Edna Blessing of Philadelphia—Lost $50, Pins, and Necklace.

A young woman who said that she was Miss Edna Blessing of 505 North Sixth Street, Philadelphia, was found unconscious and badly beaten near the Pelham Avenue entrance of the Zoological Park, in the Bronx, last evening. She said that she had been waylaid by six men and had been robbed of $50 and all her jewelry.

Mounted Policeman Fox discovered the woman as he was riding past a clump of bushes a block west of the entrance to the park at 8 o'clock. He heard groans, and, after listening for a time, found the woman in the bushes. Her head had been battered and her clothes had been torn. Some men rode along on bicycles at about that time, and with their help Fox got the woman out in the roadway.

Meanwhile Dr. McGowan was summoned from the Fordham Hospital. While he was on the way some whisky was forced down the woman's throat, and she recovered consciousness, retaining her senses long enough to tell her name and address. She was then taken to the hospital.

There she said that she had come on to this city from Philadelphia in the afternoon with some women friends, and that they had gone to the Zoological Park. There was a large crowd there, and she had become separated from her companions. Going to the keeper at the Pelham Avenue gate, after having made a vain effort to find her companions, she asked how to get down town. He told her to go to the west, but she thinks that she misunderstood his directions and went toward the east.

At any rate, after having gone for a short distance she turned about, and at last reached the gate again. She had gone past that only a short distance, she said, when a man stepped out from the bushes and dragged her from the road. She says that in the bushes there were five other men, all of whom wore their hats over their eyes.

She was beaten, she said, with a length of iron pipe and was at last knocked and choked into unconsciousness. She said that the men robbed her of $50, an opal pin, a ruby and a diamond pin, and a gold necklace. This was her story to the Coroner, who had been summoned under the impression that the woman might die.

She fainted several times while she was telling the story, and at a late hour last night was said to be in a serious condition.

Capt. Ferris of the Tremont Station and Capt. Deevey of the Bronx Park Police Station detailed their best detectives to the case. The police were still searching for the men at a late hour last night and were making a careful examination of the vicinity with the aid of lanterns.

SHE FLED FROM AUTO LAW.

Mrs. Fisher Escaped from Maryland by Strategy.

Special to The New York Times.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Clark Fisher of New York, widow of a wealthy manufacturer, who is on a tour to Cleveland, Ohio, reached this city in an unlicensed automobile last night, learned of Maryland's drastic automobile law, and early this morning, with the aid of local automobilists, effected a strategic escape to the Pennsylvania boundary.

The party consisted of Mrs. Fisher, chauffeur, and valet. Their suspicions were aroused by an inspection of their machine by officers, who have been very diligent in enforcing the statute which requires autoists to obtain a license from the Secretary of State at Annapolis and to tag their motor cars with an appropriate number.

A telegraphic application for license was made, but as further precaution against police court activity Mrs. Fisher's large touring car was sent out of town in care of one local automobilist, while another Hagerstown chauffeur later to-day conveyed her party in his own machine to an appointed place of meeting. Hagerstown automobilists and hotel men are indignant at the frequent arrests of tourists under the new law, and are ready to help intended victims.

Mrs. Fisher, whose next stopping place is at Bedford Springs, Penn., is the woman who has declared she will never again ride behind a locomotive on account of her experience in a wreck two years ago, when her husband sustained fatal injuries. She herself was permanently crippled.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 3.—The long-drawn-out litigation between Phelps, Dodge & Co. of New York and Lycurgus Lindsay of Los Angeles, which involved the ownership of and right to work in the heart of the Cananea copper deposits of Sonora, Mexico, has been settled by arbitration.

The New York firm, by the terms of the agreement, has the right to operate the copper properties located by Lindsay, but later transferred under operation to the Indiana-Sonora Company. Phelps, Dodge & Co. have secured a controlling interest in the Indiana-Sonora Company, owning the original lease of the property. Control was secured from Thomas Taggart, now Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, and other prominent organizers and stockholders of the Indiana Company.

The settlement of the controversy involved an expenditure of $2,000,000 on the part of Phelps, Dodge & Co., that amount being the purchase price of the stock control of the Indiana-Sonora Company plus the expense incurred in the development of the mines.

PHYSICIAN FELLED BY DAYLIGHT FOOTPAD.

Dr. J. C. Hallock Hit with "Blackjack" in Prospect Park.

NO EFFORT MADE TO ROB HIM.

Unknown Man Sprang from Shrubbery Behind Him, Struck Twice, and Escaped Over a Wall.

Dr. James C. Hallock, fifty-seven years old, of 203 Sterling Place, Brooklyn, was the victim of a mysterious attack made by a strange man armed with a "blackjack" in Prospect Park yesterday afternoon. After beating the doctor over the head with the weapon the stranger ran off and escaped without making any attempt at robbery. Both the doctor and the police are puzzled as to the motive for the assault.

Dr. Hallock, who is retired, until a short time ago lived in St. Louis, where he was well known as an allenist, being connected with several institutions there. It has been his habit of late to go to Prospect Park in the afternoon and read under the shade of the trees there. He went there yesterday afternoon and spent some time sitting on a bench near the Ninth Street entrance reading newspapers. Starting for home, he took a little-traveled path leading to the Plaza.

He was walking slowly along this path when he heard some one spring out from the shrubbery behind him, and before he could turn he received a heavy blow on the back of the head. The physician staggered but recovered himself, and turned to face his assailant.

As he did so the fellow sprang upon him again and dealt him a blow on the right temple which felled him to the ground. Although the doctor lay stunned and helpless on the path, the stranger made no attempt to rob him, but ran off through the shrubbery to the park wall, which he scaled and disappeared.

Dr. Hallock was too dazed to attempt to follow the man. He made his way to the Plaza, where he found Policeman David Byrne of the Park force, whom he told of the assault. The physician was bleeding from a cut on the head, and the policeman called an ambulance surgeon from the Seney Hospital. After having his wound dressed Dr. Hallock went to his home.

The park police and those in the adjoining precincts hunted for the physician's assailant, but found no trace of him. Dr. Hallock said he could not recall ever having seen the man before. The stranger, he said, was apparently about twenty-five years old and was rather well dressed in a dark suit, with sack coat and a black derby hat.

The man was armed with what the doctor took to be a "blackjack." Except for the presence of the physician and the stranger, the path was deserted when the attack was made. Dr. Hallock declared that he was completely in the dark as to the motive for the assault.

MAY BE CASE OF SUICIDE.

No Evidence That Connecticut Girl Was Murdered.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 3.—It is the opinion of Coroner Mix that Louise Dubois, the young woman whose body was found on the shore at Woodmont yesterday, committed suicide. Neither he nor Medical Examiner Barnett has been able to find any evidence to support a theory that the young woman was thrown into the water.

The matter of holding an autopsy is undecided, although the Coroner does not think it is necessary. At the same time he is anxious to find some motive for self-destruction. Mr. Mix has a number of letters written to Miss Dubois by her former suitor, Ernest Lapointe, formerly of Wallingford, but now living in Hamilton, N. J., but he will not make them public. The family say, however, that a letter received on Tuesday contained a complaint from Lapointe that Miss Dubois was not writing to him as often as she had promised.

TRAMPS WAGE FIERCE CONFLICT

Gang Captured by Dunellen's Mayor and Posse of Citizens.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, Sept. 3.—Mayor Wyckoff and a posse of Dunellen citizens which he had hurriedly summoned captured a gang of tramps, who were engaged in a fierce battle near the Greenbrook tanks of the Jersey Central Railroad last night. The railroad men telephoned to Mayor Wyckoff to hurry the police to the spot. Without waiting to find any of the regular policemen, the Mayor collected some citizens living in the vicinity of his home and hastened to the company's roundhouse, where an engine was in waiting for them.

Arriving at the tanks,

SAY FRAUDS MADE PRIMARIES A FARCE

Both Sides Accused of Repeating and Bad Methods.

ELECTION LAW THE CAUSE

Elsberg's Amendment Enabled Existing Leaders to Have Only Their Henchmen at the Polls.

If statements of politicians in New York and Brooklyn who do not speak from any sense of grievance are to be credited, an investigation of the primary election returns held in the two boroughs last Tuesday would disclose frauds so extensive as to shock the community and compel legislative reforms. There is an abundance of evidence to indicate that the primaries were an outrageous farce.

That gangs of repeaters operated in both boroughs in the close districts is not only generally admitted by election officers, but is borne out by hospital records. The number of blackened eyes and broken heads in evidence during the past few days among the thugs of the east side and the tough districts of Brooklyn who are relied upon to do dirty work at primary elections and are well paid for their services seldom has been exceeded, according to police reports. It is said that there were thirty men in a west side hospital being treated at one time for injuries which they had received around the polls, and a Brooklyn Police Captain is authority for the statement that when a repeating gang from Brooklyn which had gone over to Manhattan to help out in a couple of Tammany primary fights returned, the most of them looked like they had been through a thrashing machine.

It is safe to say that the number of repeaters who met with deserved punishment was far less than the number of inoffensive citizens who were beaten up for no other cause than their espousal of the candidacy of some aspirant for leadership, who, they thought, would prove more upright and efficient than the man who had been intrusted with the responsibility.

It is a rather remarkable fact that although there were some hot fights against the leadership of both Democratic and Republican members of the Republican and Democratic Executive Committees of New York and Kings County, the only successful contests were those of Joseph P. Donnelly against John L. Shea in the Seventeenth District of Brooklyn and Andrew T. Sullivan against Frank D. Creamer in the Eighteenth District of Brooklyn.

Fault in the Primary Law.

Practical politicians who are so sure of their places that they can afford to speak frankly say that in their opinion as long as the primary law stands as it is at present, and especially as long as the amendment made to it last Winter at the instigation of Senator Elsberg remains in force, it will be practically impossible to defeat any district leader unless the influence of the Chairman of his organization is actively used against him.

The Elsberg amendment provides that in cities of the first class an Election Inspector shall be removed forthwith by the Bureau of Elections, without the preferring of any charges or without notice to such officer, upon the written request of the representative of the political party who certifies the name of such election officer or his successor. The effect of the amendment is to give the President of the Republican County Committee and the leader of Tammany Hall absolute power to control the machinery of primary elections in New York County, and to give the leaders of the Republican and Democratic organizations in Brooklyn like authority.

The Elsberg amendment grew out of charges that Tammany Hall Democrats had been serving in the past as Republican Inspectors at primary elections. This discovery was made by M. Linn Bruce when he was acting as Chairman of the Republican County Committee, and was one of the links in the chain of evidence which Mr. Bruce established that certain Republican district leaders had formed an offensive and defensive alliance with the Tammany leaders of their districts, the purpose of which was to crush opposition to the existing order. The amendment is understood to have been drawn up by Otto Rosalsky, who succeeded President Murray of the Republican County Committee as Republican leader of the Eighth Assembly District at the primary last Tuesday. Mr. Rosalsky had no personal interest in the matter. He acted merely as attorney for the Republican County Committee, which approved of the proposed amendment and adopted resolutions urging its passage by the Legislature.

Senator Elsberg, who introduced the measure, however, did have a direct political interest in its becoming law. The faction with which he is allied in the Twenty-ninth Assembly District had great need of the amendment in the primary election which was held on March 29 last, and as Mr. Elsberg pushed it assiduously, and it was put through the Legislature on March 17, less than two weeks before the primary was held.

What Elsberg's Amendment Did.

The interest which the Mason-Elsberg faction of the Twenty-ninth District had in the passage of the amendment is illustrative of the way in which it can be used to subserve political ends. After the Mason-Elsberg faction had succeeded a year ago in electing members of the County Committee of their own choosing they were betrayed. Instead of choosing Mason for leader, the District Committee met and chose Alderman Franklin B. Ware. That was generally regarded as dirty politics and created an intense feeling in the district. The Mason-Elsberg faction protested to the Executive Committee of the County Committee against the recognition of Ware as the leader of the district. They also carried their protest to Gov. Odell. That was just about the time that Gov. Odell had secured control of the State organization, and, naturally, he was inclined to be cautious in taking sides. However, a committee of the Executive Committee was appointed to hear evidence on the case. This committee allowed the matter to drag along undecided until the March primaries. Meantime, Ware being nominally the leader, had won over a considerable number of the Election Inspectors in the district to his side, and the Mason-Elsberg faction was confronted with the necessity of going into the March primary fight with the election machinery in the hands of the district in which their enemies unless they could devise some method by which they could turn the tables. The proposed amendment to the primary law, drawn up by Mr. Rosalsky and indorsed by the Republican County Committee, gave them an opportunity of which they were quick to appreciate the advantage.

The amendment became law, and the Mason-Elsberg faction, having the support of President Murray and the Republican Executive Committee, was enabled by virtue of it to secure the removal of forty-seven Election Inspectors in the Twenty-ninth, whose allegiance had been given to the Ware-Schwarzler crowd. Nineteen of these Election Inspectors were removed on the day before the primary. They were removed by an order of Executive Chairman Halpin of the County Committee, and their successors, also named by Mr. Halpin, were men who had been indorsed by the Mason-Elsberg faction.

The Mason-Elsberg faction triumphed at the primaries, and Mason was chosen executive member in place of Ware. Probably they did not need the Election Inspectors to make certain their victory, but the fact remains that they spared no effort to get them. Their contention is that they desired no advantage; that all they wanted was a fair count, and they feared they could not get a square deal if the machinery was left in the hands of the Ware-Schwarzler crowd. To be fair to them, it is but just to state that the bad faith of the Ware-Schwarzler crowd in turning against Mason after they had been put on the County Committee by his supporters gives color to the Mason-Elsberg contention.

Inspectors Removed in Brooklyn.

Senator Elsberg and Mr. Mason were not the only leaders who were able to see in the amendment a chance to wrest the election machinery from their political opponents. Senator P. H. McCarren also made use of it in the March primary to maintain his supremacy in Brooklyn against the attempted encroachment of Tammany. He had forty-four Inspectors of Election removed in the Seventh District, of which William A. Doyle is the leader, and he also had nineteen removed in the Third and twenty-seven in the Ninth.

Senator McCarren made even more extensive use of his power under the primary law to remove Election Inspectors who were obnoxious to him as a preparation for the primary held last Tuesday. In August he had no less than 279 Inspectors removed and men named in their places whose loyalty to his leadership he could absolutely rely upon. He had 120 removed on Aug. 26, four days before the primary. Nearly all of these removals were in districts in which there were contests.

On the Republican side Leader Gilman of the Nineteenth District of Manhattan and his ally, Lemuel Ely Quigg, having Gov. Odell and the Republican County organization on their side, were able to effect whatever removals of Election Inspectors in the Nineteenth they deemed desirable. They made extensive use of the power of removal, and incidentally it may be mentioned, were successful in their fight.

The Elsberg amendment to the primary law was made at the suggestion and through the influence of the political managers. Tammany Hall and the Brooklyn Democratic organization were as much in favor of it as the Republican County Committee. True, it did not serve Mr. Murphy's purpose in his fight with McCarren, but it absolutely insured the re-election of his friends in Manhattan to the Executive Committee of Tammany Hall, and that, of course, was a more important consideration to him than even McCarren's defeat, much as his heart was set upon the overturning of the Brooklyn organization. The Bureau of Election was never even consulted about the proposed amendment.

If a district leader has control of the election machinery of his district, as he may have under the existing law, and is disposed to maintain his leadership by dishonesty, the primary elections are reduced to an an absolute farce, as some of them undoubtedly were last Tuesday. It is a well-known fact that there are hundreds of enrolled voters in each Assembly district who never vote at primary elections. The custom of these men to remain away from primaries is well known to the district leader and his election-district Captains. If they have Inspectors of Election of their own choosing who will wink at fraud the game is easy. All they have to do is to organize a gang of repeaters who will vote on the names of the men who it is well known will not go to the polls.

Repeaters Permanently Organized.

In fact, they do not have to organize such gangs. It is generally known to practical politicians and to the police that there are two such gangs in New York County, organized for just such work, and whose services can be procured for a price. One of them is known as the "Mat-Haired Gang" of the east side, because of the fact that most of them wear their hair short but thick in the back. The other is known as "the Dude Repeaters." There are also two gangs of repeaters in Brooklyn. Not infrequently when district fights are numerous and likely to be hot gangs are imported from New Jersey and Philadelphia.

The repeaters run little risk under present conditions other than that of a collision with a rival gang, and they are always willing to take chances if there is enough in it. Inasmuch as the Inspectors of Election are generally in sympathy with the cause of the man in whose interest they have been hired to operate there is little risk that they will be challenged when they attempt to vote upon some name furnished to them. Even if they should be challenged, their plans are well laid for escape. They always enter a police place in threes and fours. If one of them is challenged and the policeman in the booth starts to arrest him the others "give the officer the foot," as the saying is, which is to trip him up and send him sprawling to the floor. In the confusion the man who was challenged makes his escape. It occasionally happens, too, that the confusion created by the assault on the policeman affords a quick and handy partisan a chance to slip a number of prepared ballots into the box and have them entered as voted by a confederate working on the books.

The only way in which the repeating gangs can be kept from operating when the district leader desires their services is for the contestant to get a crowd of toughs together, ready for action, station them near the polls, and then have some one on the lookout who knows the members of the repeating gang. As soon as the repeaters come in sight the cue is given to those in wait, and there is a mix-up. This way of meeting the situation was adopted by many of the contestants in last Tuesday's primaries, and that accounts for the unusually large number of fights around the polls.

The following letter was received by President Voorhis of the Bureau of Elections from A. M. Ritzman, an Inspector of Elections, who had been removed summarily upon the request of a district leader:

I kindly ask your Honor to state to me the reason of my removal as Inspector of Election for the Twenty-ninth Election District of the Thirty-fifth Assembly District.

As I have served on the board for three years to the satisfaction of the Republican Party and the organization, and have been since my twenty-first year a Republican up to this date, I cannot understand the cause of my removal.

The office is under a civil service examination, and I passed such, and was accepted by the Bureau of Elections, appointed and sworn in as Inspector. I presume to have a right under the Constitution, of our great country as a Republican to cast my vote for any candidate from the organization of the Republican Party, and I believe that I have the full right as an American citizen and as a Republican in principle to demand from your Honor satisfactory information, as well as to be reinstated to my rights as Inspector of Election.

As I am an honest, loyal Republican and fighting only for the principle of our party in supporting the Hon. M. J. Harrington as leader, I think that Mr. Edward Healy has no right, or should not have such, to dispose of any one as long as he is recognized by the people as a Republican.

I therefore ask an explanation and also for my right under the law to be reinstated.

President Voorhis, of course, was powerless to take any action in Ritzman's case. Ritzman's letter showed him to be an intelligent man and it was found that he had passed a good examination when his qualifications to act as an Inspector of Election were inquired into, but he was for Matthew J. Harrington for leader as against Mr. Healy, the present leader, and that fact disqualified him.

An official of the Bronx is responsible for the following story:

"I was in a barber's shop Wednesday when a man whom I did not know came in and got to talking about the primary fight in the Twenty-first Assembly District between Tammany Leader Matt Donahue and John J. Cody.

"'That fellow Cody is a fool,' he said. 'If he had been wise he could have beaten Donahue. All he had to do was to pass $20 to enough of the Election Inspectors. Most of them were sore on Donahue. I know I was, and $20 would have fetched me all right. Why, say, in my poll there was a guy came in and voted on the name of my brother-in-law who lives in New Jersey. What do you think of that?—and me taking the vote. But I didn't put up no kick. I just let him vote, because there was nothing in it for me to make a holler. That's the kind of work they were doing all day in the district.'"

Superintendent of Elections George D. Morgan said yesterday that under a decision of the Attorney General he was unable to exercise any jurisdiction over the primaries.

"I have some men out watching, however," said Mr. Morgan, "and my information is that the primaries were about as rotten as any ever held."

ELECTION BOARD ACCUSED.

Nagle Watcher Makes Complaint in Thirty-fourth District.

All four members of the election board which presided at the Democratic contest in the polling place of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Election Districts of the Thirty-fourth Assembly District were arraigned in the Harlem Court yesterday on a charge of violating the primary election law. The cases were adjourned until Tuesday.

The men are Charles T. Reilly of 364 East One Hundred and Twenty-third Street, Chairman of the board; Robert H. Schroeder of 105 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street; John Donnelly of 68 East One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, and John T. Schaeffer of 221 East One Hundred and Twentieth Street.

The complainant, Peter J. Henry, a watcher for Percival E. Nagle, the defeated candidate for leader, charges that when the polls were closed and the votes counted there were sixteen more ballots than were names of voters checked off on the polling list. According to the primary law, it is complained, in a situation like this, the election board should have turned all the ballots back into the box and then drawn out sixteen ballots at random and destroyed them. Instead of doing this, Henry alleges, the board checked off sixteen more names of persons who had not voted, and thus made their accounts tally.

DEMOCRATS BUSY WITH UP-STATE ORGANIZATION

Not in Twenty Years Has Work Been So Thorough.

CANVASSING EACH DISTRICT

Safeguards Thrown Out to Prevent Misuse of Campaign Funds, So Prevalent in Past.

Not in twenty years have the Democratic managers in this State entered upon such an elaborate plan of organization in all sections as is being carried out now. For a month a careful investigation of conditions in each county, with a view to forming organizations by election districts, has been carried on, under the direction of William S. Rodie, the head of the Up-State Organization Bureau. As an aide Mr. Rodie has Cogressman Francis Burton Harrison, who has already covered the greater part of he State and is now on a second tour, conferring with County Chairmen and other leaders. Both Mr. Rodie and Congressman Harrison are working day and night, and by October, when the State campaign will be in full swing, expect to have from ten to twelve men working in each election district. As there are approximately 6,000 election districts in the State, this will mean an army of workers numbering from 50,000 to 60,000.

At the present time organizations in nearly one-fourth of the election districts have been perfected. In Greater New York, of course, Messrs. Rodie and Harrison are doing nothing, as Senator Victor J. Dowling is in charge of the work here. Tammany Hall in Manhattan and the Bronx and the McCarren organization in Brooklyn are, of course, well organized in every election district.

For the up-State sections, however, nothing of the kind has been attempted since the third Cleveland campaign of 1892, and even then the work was not so thorough as it is now. One of the serious problems which the Democrats have encountered in late years up the State, and one which is being carefully guarded against now, has been the diversion of campaign funds to private uses by so-called Democrats who have been nothing more nor less than adjuncts to the Republican organization. So thorough has the disorganization become since the capture of the State by the Republicans in 1838 that in many counties Democrats who turned Republicans and allied themselves with the Republican organization still were permitted to handle campaign funds.

More than one instance has come to light where there was absolutely no expenditure of money, although from $500 to $3,000 had been sent into the sections in question. This year the plan is to spend an average of $200 in an election district, this to cover all the printing, the expenses of meetings, and the cost of twice thoroughly canvassing the district.

The first canvass now is well along, and the second canvass will be made in all the districts simultaneously during the closing week of October, so that in the opening days of November the party managers will have an almost exact line on what may be expected from each election district on Nov. 8. It is figured that the expense of the organization plan will be about $1,000,000.

McCLELLAN TO TAKE STUMP.

Mayor Will Speak in Several Big Cities in Other States.

It was announced at Democratic National headquarters yesterday that Mayor George B. McClellan will take the stump for the Democratic ticket immediately after the State Conventions. Chairman Taggart said the Mayor had placed himself at the disposal of the committee and that he would be assigned to important cities outside of New York State.

Chairman Taggart spent some time yesterday going over campaign matters with ex-Senator James K. Jones and J. G. Johnson, the two managers of the 1896 and 1900 Bryan campaigns. Daniel J. Campau, the National Committeeman from Michigan, who was a visitor at headquarters, declared that the Democratic candidate for Governor in Michigan, Woodbridge N. Ferris, had an excellent chance of being elected.

"Michigan people are showing increased interest in the National canvass," said Mr. Campau. "Michigan was the closest State in the country in 1884. It divided its Electoral vote between Cleveland and Harrison in 1892, and will be equally interesting this year."

SHEEHAN IN RHODE ISLAND.

Confers with Leaders About the Campaign in That State.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 3.—William F. Sheehan arrived here to-day, and is the guest of James T. Woodward. It is believed that Mr. Sheehan is here to confer with State leaders about the Democratic campaign in Rhode Island as well as for social purposes.

During the afternoon several prominent leaders called upon Mr. Sheehan, among them Mayor Boyle of Newport. The replies of the men who took part in the conferences indicated that the National Democratic Committee feels that the prospect for success in Rhode Island is encouraging.

TO HEAR COCKRAN AND TOWNE.

Parker Club of Actresses Secures Them for First Meeting.

The Thetarical Women's Parker Club is spending out cards for a gathering in the Lyric Theatre on Tuesday afternoon, when Representative Bourke Cockran and ex-United States Senator Towne will speak.

The theatrical profession will be represented in the line of oratory by Eddie Foy, Amelia Stone, Alice Fischer, and Joseph Miron. Grace Cameron will call the meeting to order. Miss Bertha Blake of "The Royal Chef" company, who got up the organization, received yesterday a letter of congratulation from Judge Parker's secretary.

BIG OUTING OF THE AHEARNS.

Five Thousand Will Attend Association's Labor Day Picnic.

Probably the biggest Tammany outing of the year will be that of the John F. Ahearn Association to-morrow at College Point. Borough President Ahearn is the sponsor for the association, which will turn out a crowd of fully 5,000.

The party will leave Pier 49 East River at 9:30 o'clock. The programme for the day includes three baseball games, a half-mile run, 100 yards for fat men, and 100 yards for members, a broad jump, putting the shot, and hop, step, and jump. Breakfast will be served at College Point, and dinner at 6 o'clock in the evening. On the return trip the party will land at the recreation pier at the foot of Market Street, and there will be a big parade through the district.

"Big Tom" Foley, the leader of the Second District, had his annual outing yesterday at Sulzer's Harlem River Park. The Sullivanites of the Sixth and adjoining districts will have their affair at Donnelly's Grove on Sept. 8.

Preparing to Entertain Editors.

Arrangements have been completed for the Democratic editorial conference which will be held on Sept. 7. Josephus Daniels, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, received a letter from Judge Parker yesterday saying he would be pleased to receive the delegation. The banquet for the editors will be given Wednesday evening, Sept. 7 at the Waldorf-Astoria. On the following morning the party will go to Esopus.

ODELL ATE CLAMS WITH RAGTIME TRIMMINGS

Governor at Ward's Feast with His Kitchen Cabinet.

HELD ON SHELL ISLAND, TOO

Politics Not Discussed, According to Those Who Were the National Committeeman's Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Gov. Odell and Gov. Franklin Murphy of New Jersey, and most of the members of the "Tapeworm" Club were entertained by National Committeeman W. L. Ward at a clambake at his Summer home, the Spray cottage, Shell Island, on the Sound, this afternoon. The party, consisting of about forty State and National politicians, left New York on the 12:40 o'clock train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. At the Port Chester dock they boarded Mr. Ward's steam yacht Diana and sailed over to Shell Island. The islanders greeted the Governor and his party with a salute fired from a nine-pound cannon. Mr. Ward's cottage and private pier were gayly decorated with flags and bunting.

The clambake was served on the verandas, and between each course an orchestra played ragtime music. The clambake was prepared by James Wier, an old hotel man of Port Chester, after the Rhode Island fashion, hot stones and seaweed being used to cook the food. Samuel Comly, President of the Village of Port Chester and a business partner of Mr. Ward, was the only person present besides the politicians. Every one denied that political affairs were discussed.

"We did nothing politically," said Gov. Odell, when he came ashore. "Clams were the only thing under consideration. It was a capital feast."

Gov. Odell and Gov. Murphy at 5:40 o'clock left Port Chester for New York. The rest of the party remained at the Spray cottage for a moonlight sail and a dinner, which was served at 10 o'clock.

Before Gov. Odell left the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday to go to National Committeeman Ward's clambake he admitted that Timothy L. Woodruff would not be the Temporary Chairman of the Republican Convention.

"He got out of it of his own accord," said the Governor, "I did not push him."

The Governor would not discuss the report that the Temporary Chairmanship had been tendered to ex-Gov. Frank S. Black, but it can be stated positively that it has been, and that Black will be the Temporary Chairman if he will accept. The assembling of the Governor and his kitchen cabinet at Shell Island immediately following the decision that Lieut. Gov. Higgins was to be the Republican organization's choice for Governor, and that Woodruff was to be entirely eliminated, led to a great deal of discussion among Republican politicians and a great many puns on the name of the place selected for the tryst of the slate-makers.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff has gone to his Summer camp in the Adirondacks, but it is probable that he will be back in the city before the end of the week.

ANOTHER DRAWS HER PENSION.

The Original Has Begun Proceedings to Find Out Who She Is.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Margaret Edwards of Madison Street, Morristown, learned to-day that another Mrs. Edwards has been drawing a pension of $12 a month for the last thirty years on her husband, James Edwards, who served in the Fifteenth New Jersey Volunteers.

Since the war Mrs. Edwards heard from her husband occasionally until seven years ago, when all communications ceased.

About three years ago Mrs. Edwards made an application for a pension, but heard nothing from it. She then made another application, and learned that some one else was drawing the pension. Mrs. Edwards has not learned yet where the other Mrs. Edwards lives, but she has retained ex-Mayor E. A. Quayle to investigate the case.

She has her marriage certificate, which was given to her sixty years ago by Bishop Bernard J. McQuaid of Rochester, who was at that time a missionary in the northern part of New Jersey.

FAIRBANKS ON THE WING.

"We Will Not Haul It Down," Says He When a Flag Falls on Him.

LA PLATA, Mo., Sept. 3.—Senator Fairbanks left Kansas City to-day for Chicago, en route to Bath, Me., where he will speak Monday. The first stop was at Lexington Junction. There the Senator made no speech, but he personally greeted all who were assembled.

At Carrollton there was a longer stay and a larger crowd, and he made a brief speech from the rear platform, saying among other things:

"There has been during the last few years prosperity in the factory, on the farm, and upon all the great lines of commerce. All of this is a high tribute to the efficacy and virtue of Republican policies and Republican Administration. Do we wish to continue our progress? Then we should hold fast to the policies under which we have accomplished so much, and we should support the Administration which is achieving so much in our common interest.

At Marceline Senator Fairbanks, speaking from the rear platform, recalled a trip he had made over the Santa Fé Railway in 1896, and said there were by no means as many signs of prosperity along the line then as now. There then were, he said, "many empties, and many dead engines, whereas to-day the equipment of the road is taxed to its utmost. There are more engineers at the throttle to-day than there were in 1896.

"Why, my good friends? I will tell you why. Because during the last seven years we have been operating under Republican policies. There have been two great patriotic American statesmen at the throttle in Washington."

While the Senator was speaking a large American flag fell over against him. He pushed it aside, saying, "We will not pull it down. Republicans never pull down the flag."

VERMONT CAMPAIGN CLOSED.

Republicans Say They Will Be Satisfied with 20,000 Plurality.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Sept. 3.—The Vermont campaign closed to-night with speaking in nearly every town of any importance in the State. The election will be on Tuesday. As the Vermont election will afford the people of the country the first real line they have on public sentiment in the present campaign, both parties have put forth their utmost efforts to make the best possible showing.

Both National Committees have sent into the State orators of National reputation. The Democrats have had Bourke Cockran and Edward M. Shepard of New York, B. F. Shively of Indiana, and Senator Latimer of South Carolina, while the Republicans have had as their principal speakers Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Attorney General Moody, Representative Hill of Connecticut, and Judge Kenworthy of Iowa.

The Republican candidate for Governor is Charles J. Bell of Walden and the Democratic candidate Eli H. Porter. Local issues have figured to some extent, but the importance of the bearing which the result in Vermont might have on the rest of the country has been the chief theme of both Republican and Democratic orators from the outside.

In 1898 McKinley's plurality in the State was 40,000, and in 1900 it was 29,719. The Republican plurality on the Governorship in 1902 was 24,500. The Republicans admit that they do not expect anything like the plurality that McKinley had in either of his campaigns, or even the plurality which the Republican candidate for Governor had in 1902.

They say they will be satisfied with a plurality of 20,000. They admit that if the Republican plurality should fall below that figure the result might well be taken as indicating a drift toward the Democracy.

Nearly all of the orators who were sent by the National Committees of both parties into Vermont to stir up enthusiasm left tonight for Maine, where there is to be another week of campaigning. The Maine campaign will close next Saturday night and the election will be on the following Tuesday. Maine and Vermont are the only two States of the Union in which State elections will be held prior to the Presidential contest.

TOOTH PULLED, BLED TO DEATH

Bridgeport Physicians Unable to Save Banker W. N. Middlebrook.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 3.—William N. Middlebrook, Assistant Secretary and Assistant Treasurer of the City Savings Bank of Bridgeport, died at his home this afternoon as the result of a hemorrhage he suffered Thursday, following the extraction of a tooth by a local dentist.

Despite the efforts of physicians soon after the tooth was pulled, the flow of blood could not be stopped, and he was taken to his home unconscious.

PARKER SEES CAMPAIGN BOOK.

Regular Soldiers Cheer for Him as Their Train Passes Through.

Special to The New York Times.

ROSEMOUNT, Esopus, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Laden with the proof sheets of practically every page of the Democratic campaign textbook ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy of Boston came here to-day to go over them with Judge Parker. A large share of the afternoon and part of the evening were taken to read the views of the party as put together by Messrs. Quincy, George F. Parker, and J. S. Cowherd, the special committee appointed to compile the textbook, and who have since been further clothed with authority to compile and publish practically every document to be put out this campaign by the National Committee.

It was deemed unwise to allow any part of the proof sheets to be seen, and of course neither the Massachussetts leader nor the candidate would discuss the contents. Judge Parker had opportunity to revise anything he liked, but so far as could be learned any changes he proposed were few and those only of phraseology.

According to Mr. Quincy, the work will be about 500 pages and the first edition will be 10,000. The manuscript is complete and the only delay, it seems, has been with the printer.

Speaking of the situation in his own State, Mr. Quincy said:

"I think we have a fair prospect of winning the Governorship. Conditions in our State are very favorable to Democratic success, I think. Several issues have arisen, particularly the reciprocity issue, which have helped to split the Republicans.

"I feel sure we will hold our three Congressional districts in Boston and gain one more, though I have no hope that the Worcester district, now represented by Thayer, will return a Democrat, as Thayer refuses to run again. As he won in 1902 only through a split among the Republicans, and was helped materially by his great popularity, I think the district is probably lost to us.

"The Democrats of Massachusetts are desirous of picking out the strongest man they can find for Governor. I understand Col. W. A. Gaston does not desire to enter the running this year."

Several trains bearing United States regulars from barracks in the State to the army manoeuvres at the old fields of Manassas and Newmarket passed over the West Shore Railroad this afternoon, and when Esopus was announced scores of the boys pushed their heads out of the windows and howled for the Democratic nominee.

A huge Democratic banner was strung to-day opposite Isaac Burger's hotel, near the railroad. It is a street banner, regulation size, and can be seen easily from passing trains. It bears the portraits of Parker and Davis.

POPULISTS MAY NAME BOULTON

State Committee Secretary Denies Receiving Aid from Republicans.

As a result of several meetings of the Populist State Committee, held last week, it practically has been decided that Alfred J. Boulton, a Bryan Democrat, who ran on the Fusion ticket in Brooklyn last Fall for County Clerk, is to be the candidate for Governor. Mr. Boulton is the head stereotyper of a Brooklyn newspaper.

All of the members of the Populist State Committee this year have been known as Bryan Democrats in the past. The Chairman is Jay W. Forrest of Albany. Melvin G. Palliser is Chairman of the Executive Committee, and H. C. Stimson, an attorney, of 25 Broad Street, is Secretary of the State Committee. Secretary Stimson yesterday denied that the Republicans were contributing to the Watson campaign fund.

CHINESE COOLIES SWINDLED.

Western Gang Extorted Money from Victims Brought for World's Fair.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—The scheme of the Chinese ring to land 241 coolies and women in this country in violation of the Exclusion act is proving to be a much more serious offense than at first appeared, and some of the ring members may yet find themselves behind prison bars.

The plans assured the making of $100,000 by the landing here of the coolies under the pretense that they were to be placed in the concession of the "Chinese Village Company," at the St. Louis Fair. Ostensibly, the coolies were to be returned to China after the fair, but they themselves had been made to believe that they would be permanently landed in the United States. With this expectation the coolies had paid $800, Mexican, in the first instance, and $110, United States money, on their arrival in this city.

This last assessment upon the ignorant victims was made on the ground that there was some hitch and that the $110 was required to pay for the bond necessary to enable them to land.

HOOK BOATS IN CRASH IN FOG DOWN THE BAY

Big Liner St. Paul Aground, Took Up Channel Room.

OFFICERS QUELLED THE PANIC

While trying to avoid ramming the big American Line steamer St. Paul in a heavy fog in the lower bay yesterday morning the steamboat Asbury Park of the Sandy Hook Line was run down by the Sandy Hook, a sister boat, and fifty feet of her starboard rail were carried away. Nobody was injured, but the hundreds of passengers on both boats were panic-stricken, and only the use of force by the officers prevented many persons from jumping overboard.

Several women on both boats fainted, and children were knocked down and separated from their parents in the rush for life preservers. There was splendid order among the crews, and boats were ready for launching within a minute after the accident.

The St. Paul was in an uncomfortable berth herself at the time. Her pilot had miscalculated the position of the southwest spit, the turning point in the main ship channel, and had run the big ship aground inside what is known as Flynn's Knoll. Her passengers heard the crash of the two big harbor boats, and one of the ship's big lifeboats was put over the side to render any assistance necessary. The fog lifted in time for the officers of the St. Paul to see that the boats were not seriously damaged and a great cheer went up from the ship. It was started by the cabin passengers, and taken up with a vim by the steerage. Both steamboat Captains acknowledged the greeting with sharp jerks on the whistle.

The entire incident was enacted in fifteen minutes, but to the frightened passengers it seemed hours because of the dense fog, which shut everything from view. The whining of the fog siren on Sandy Hook Point, the coarse blasts of the steamboats, and the shrieks of other fog-hidden craft only added to the general confusion.

The Asbury Park was on her 10:21 trip to the city from Atlantic Highlands, and had about three hundred passengers aboard. The Sandy Hook was bound south and heavily loaded with a big crowd bound out of town for Labor Day. Edward McGovern, a passenger on the Sandy Hook, said:

"It was fortunate that we had slowed down considerably when the crash came. Capt. Larson had heard the whistles of the St. Paul and Asbury Park and was proceeding very cautiously. I was well forward on the saloon deck, looking out of the window when suddenly the bow of the Asbury Park loomed up dead ahead. I could feel the engines of our boat being reversed instantly, but it was too late. The Captain tried to sheer off, but struck the Asbury Park a hard blow on the starboard side about fifty feet from the bow. The shock almost threw me off my feet, and did knock down my boy. Many passengers were on the forward promenade deck, and when the crash came there was a mad scramble for safety. The officers were cool, however, and soon restored order. Several persons were bruised and several women fainted."

Neither Captain blames the other for the accident. They agree that it was one of these unfortunate situations in which every waterman finds himself at some time in a fog. Capt. Braisted of the Asbury Park said:

"When I spied through the fog the St. Paul aground right at the channel turn I was compelled to change my course in a hurry. I knew the Sandy Hook was in the vicinity. When the crash came my boat was at a dead stop. It was fortunate that the blow was a glancing one. As it was our injury was slight. The officers and crew were cool and colected and were at their stations and prepared to face any emergency."

Both boats were repaired at Atlantic Highlands last night and will make their regular trips to-day. The St. Paul remained aground until nearly noon.

SHOT TO SCARE HER FATHER.

But the Revolver Was Loaded and She Killed Him.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 3.—Mary Alice Botham, an eighteen-year-old girl, who shot and killed her father, Joseph Botham, here on Aug. 23, was discharged in the District Court to-day. It was shown that Miss Botham fired a revolver containing what she supposed were blank cartridges at her father, who was making a disturbance, for the purpose of frightening him.

The verdict of the inquest was justifiable homicide. The girl was charged with manslaughter at the time of her arrest.

TOBY, M. P., TELLS HOW THE HARD-WORKED PREMIER "RESTS"

Some of Balfour's Holiday Recreations—Age a Bar to Chamberlain's Ambition—The Season of Discontent in Clubland—London's Latest Street Nuisance.

By HENRY W. LUCY.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—In the early years of his leadership of the House of Commons Arthur Balfour used joyfully to mark its close by rushing off to be present at the Passion Play at Oberammergau. That of course assumed that the date of the Prorogation synchronized with that of the Play. This year it does not, and the Premier was left at liberty to undertake to deliver the Presidential address at the meeting of the British Association.

For a hard-worked Minister, buffeted through a six months' Parliamentary Session, that seems an odd way of enjoying one's self. The task has apparently been made the harder by the circumstances attendant on the closing weeks of the session. The all-night sitting, to others a crowning sacrifice of personal comfort, Mr. Balfour welcomed as a special intervention of Providence.

"If," he said to a friend, "the House had adjourned as usual at midnight I should have gone off home and gone to bed, excusing myself as being too fatigued after a constant grind of ten hours to turn to and complete my address. Having to stay at the House through the night, I just sat down and got to work."

He rather hinted that the final revision of the manuscript was accomplished in the quietness of a Sabbath morning spent at Lord Rothschild country house.

The Premier shares with Mr. Gladstone the gift, priceless to a busy man, of quickly resting. This is largely due to the trained habit, brought to perfection by the older statesman, of swiftly, in intervals of rest, throwing off all mental associations with the work temporarily set aside. Mr. Gladstone once told me that when he laid his head on the pillow after whatsoever day and night of intense excitement, he peremptorily dismissed all thought of the situation, however critical, which had engaged his attention. Sometimes, after an exceptionally lively night at the House of Commons he, before getting into bed, read "something light"—Homer, I fancy, by preference. As a rule he was able to get right off to sleep, completing his minimum term of seven hours.

READS FAR INTO THE NIGHT.

The Premier's habit, at least in holiday time, is to read far into the night and lay abed in the morning. That is not possible when the House is sitting. When, a fortnight ago, the House adjourned at 6:30 A. M., Mr. Balfour, who had sat it out, had an important public engagement for noon which was faithfully kept.

It is the week-ends, fruit of the new procedure rules, that keep him going. Some overworked men like to enjoy their Friday night to Monday morning in the quietness of their country home or such privacy as is to be obtained at a seaside hotel. Mr. Balfour finds his rest with hosts like the Rothschilds, whose perfectly appointed country houses are peopled from Saturday to Monday with brilliant company.

Asked how such conditions of life at the end of a week spent in the turmoil of Parliamentary and social life in London could suit him, Mr. Balfour answered:

"Well, it does. They don't get me up on my hind legs. Practically I don't show up till dinner time, and have the advantage of fresh air and change of scene.

It is an old Parliamentary joke, born at the period when Disraeli was Premier and had got through a session distinguished by lack of accomplished work, that he was "going to the Lords with the title Barren Session." 1875 was, however, a fruitful year compared with 1904. Of a dozen bills promised in the King's Speech, only one of first-class importance was passed, and that only by the machinery of the closure. Considering that for legislative purposes Mr. Balfour has had available a working majority of at least fourscore, this simple statement implies gross mismanagement, or, what inquired into will usually be found to come to the same thing, unredeemed ill luck.

He has, however, one success to his credit, the magnitude and importance of which outweighs a succession of failures. He has kept Parliament going till the usual date of prorogation and has earned for his Ministry six months' certain rest in the sanctuary of the recess. That is an achievement which in the circumstances probably no other man could have carried out. It should perhaps be added that no other responsible Minister would, for such particular purpose, have displayed equal cynicism in disregarding Parliamentary traditions.

On review of the past six months the wonder grows that Mr. Chamberlain should have played up to the Premier's lead in the matter of the duration of the present Parliament. It is avowedly not an instrument that may be used for accomplishing the fiscal revolution upon which he is bent. If he were in his fortieth year, or even his fiftieth, he might feel he could afford to look on, biding his time. But when the shadow of his seventieth year looms over a statesman, the opportunity of a month becomes of as much account as a youth reckons a year.

Lord Randolph Churchill, with brutal force, indicated the situation in 1886, when, Mr. Gladstone pressing forward with his Home Rule scheme, he described him as "an old man in a hurry." Mr. Gladstone, eighteen years ago insisting upon forthwith bestowing Home Rule on Ireland, was not many years older than is Mr. Chamberlain to-day devoting himself to an equally revolutionary scheme. With something like 200 members of the present House at his command, he can, as was demonstrated on a critical occasion in the past session, absolutely decree the day of dissolution. He has thought it on the whole most helpful to his purpose to allow the session to run its course, deferring dissolution till next year.

How long will he wait through 1905? Will he insist on a general election in March, or will he stand by while Mr. Balfour carries out his increasing purpose of bringing in a Redistribution bill? In the latter case dissolution cannot take place till November or December, the passing of a Redistribution bill being necessarily accompanied by the appointment of boundary Commissioners whose work may not be hurried.

WHAT NEXT YEAR WILL BRING.

Next year will see Mr. Chamberlain's sixty-ninth birthday. As he has himself long admitted, since recent by-elections with fuller freedom, the next General Election will place a Liberal Ministry in power. However mismanaged their affairs may be, they can scarcely be expected to go out under a term of four years. The Liberal Government, which in 1902 came in with a majority of forty, counting in the Irish vote, managed to hold the field through four sessions. There are some authorities who reckon that the coming General Election will give the Liberals a majority that will place their Ministry in a position independent of the Irish vote. At worst it will be of substantial form difficult to muddle away in four years.

That calculation brings us to the year 1909, and Mr. Chamberlain's seventy-third birthday. It is true Palmerston did not reach the Premiership till he was seventy-one, but being there he was not pledged forthwith to embark upon a herculean task. Like Macbeth, contemplating decision in quite other circumstances, Mr. Chamberlain, contemplating legislation embodying his fiscal scheme, must sometimes murmur to himself:

If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly.

The heat of the past three weeks is modified, and people are able to walk about the streets of London without fear of sunstroke. The trees in the parks are beginning to testify to the approach of Autumn, but the grass, refreshed by recent showers, is still a delight of greenery. West of Charing Cross the streets have an uncannily empty look, appearance of being deserted being enhanced by the drawn blinds in most of the mansions.

This is the time of the year when one is turned out of his favorite club, the premises being handed over for a month or so to the care of the painters and cleaners. As usual hospitality is provided in other clubs, its warmth and fullness being bounded by sudden drying up of special taps of wine. It is wonderful how, when the Reform, the Junior Carlton, the Union, or other clubs with carefully selected, jealously kept up wine cellars open their doors to the stranger, certain bins containing precious vintages at reasonable prices are crossed out from the wine list, miraculously to reappear when the stranger has departed from within their gates.

Now also is the autumn of our discontent with a new instrument of social torture known as the vacuum cleaner. Its appearance in London is of recent date. But it looks as if it had come to stay. Its undertaking is to thoroughly cleanse a house or flat without the preliminary of taking up carpets, removing curtains, or dislodging books.

That would be all very well if evidence of the working of the machinery was confined to the premises which benefit by its action. That unhappily is not the case. The vacuum cleaner is worked from the outside. Its engine being planted at the front door, the process of cleansing going on through a sort of hose passed through the windows. I know all about it, as one is at work opposite my study window at I write, the precursor, as I know by Spring experience, of other demons. The noise is something like the beating of the engines on board a ship. But, suffering that experience, you have the compensation of knowing that you are going along, every beat of the throbbing engine bringing you a step nearer your destination. Here, at least to the neighbors of the premises operated upon, there is nothing but the monotonous noise, a melancholy addition to the old cries of London.

It is a comfort to know that the process is expensive. A householder who recently received a bill for application of the vacuum cleaner tells me his carpets were excellently cleaned, but it would be nearly as cheap to buy new ones.

ARMENIANS RAID A TOWN.

Twenty Killed in Fight with Turkish Troops at Van.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 2, (Delayed.)—A hot fight between Armenian insurgents and Turkish troops occurred at Van on Aug. 31, in which more than a score were killed.

Armenians to the number of 150 raided the town, captured four houses, and barricaded themselves. Troops attacked the houses, and in the fight which followed two soldiers and twenty other persons were killed.

The authorities set fire to a number of adjoining houses so that the troops might be better enabled to besiege the insurgents. The town was panic-stricken, and those inhabitants who had not fled to the mountains took refuge in the churches and convent.

It is stated by the authorities that other Armenian bands are preparing to cross the Persian frontier.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Minister Leishman, at Constantinople, cables the State Department that the Armenian revolutionists are rather active at Van, and that considerable activity prevails locally. He says some Turkish houses have been burned, and small encounters are not infrequent, but there is no indication of any particular danger to foreign residents.

REPUBLICANS DIDN'T DO IT.

Assertion in Textbook That They Originated Rural Free Delivery False.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Chairman Cowherd of the Democratic Congressional Committee, in a statement given out to-night, takes exception to the claim made in the Republican textbook that the Republicans originated the rural delivery system for the benefit of farming communities.

He quotes from The Congressional Record of June 22, 1892, an amendment offered to the Post Office bill by Mr. Livingston of Georgia, appropriating $200,000 for experimental free rural delivery outside the towns and villages, which was ruled out on a point of order. The day following Mr. Watson of Georgia offered an amendment, which was adopted by the House, appropriating $10,000 to make an experiment with rural free delivery.

The Democrats were then in a majority in the House. The appropriation, however, was not used, Mr. Wanamaker being at the time Postmaster General.

In 1895 $20,000 was appropriated for this purpose, and with that appropriation Postmaster General Wilson established four routes. The first route was established in Bartholomew County, Ind.

Postmaster General Payne, on Feb. 25 last, replying to inquiries from Representative Livingston regarding the introduction of free rural delivery, referred Mr. Livingston to the appropriation acts for the fiscal years 1894, 1895, 1896, and 1897, which acts were passed when the House was controlled by the Democrats.

Concluding his statement, Mr. Cowherd says:

"It [rural free delivery] was originated by a Democrat, received its first appropriation from a Democratic Congress, and was instituted by a Democratic Executive. Like all reforms of that kind in the Postal Service, it began, of course, in a small way as an experiment.

"It was continued as an experimental service, the appropriations rapidly increased, received in the House always a practically unanimous Democratic vote, and several times the appropriations were increased upon the motion of a Democratic member. Having demonstrated its usefulness to the farming communities, the service was two years ago placed upon a permanent footing."

OLD CATHOLICS' CONGRESS.

Proposal to Send Address of Sympathy to Combes Negatived.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—At the international Old Catholic Congress Pastor Carrier of Geneva moved that the Congress take advantage of the present religious crisis in France to send an address of sympathy to Premier Combes.

The proposal was opposed by several Bishops and was voted down.

The next Congress will be held in Holland in 1908.

GREEK POLICE FOR CRETE.

Powers Are Willing to Abolish the International Gendarmerie.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—In regard to the Cretan question I learn from a well-informed source that while the Powers are not willing to support the annexation of the island to Greece they are willing to consent to the abolition of the international police force there, its place to be taken by Greeks.

It is said that were such a concession not made Prince George would be unable to return to Crete.

TIBETANS COMING TO TERMS.

Two Clauses of the Treaty with Great Britain Agreed Upon.

LHASA, Aug. 30, (Delayed.)—The Durbar to-day was attended by the Chinese Amban and Tibetan Regent, with three Councilors.

Col. Younghusband, Commissioner with the British expedition, was informed that two clauses of the treaty with Great Britain had been agreed upon. The question of indemnity is still to be settled.

URUGUAYAN REBELS DEFEATED.

War Minister Reports Decisive Victory —Gen. Saraiva Wounded.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 3.—The War Minister, who is in command of the Government troops, reports that he has gained a decisive victory over Gen. Saraiva, the leader of the Uruguayan insurgents.

Saraiva was wounded during the engagement.

British Civil Engineers Coming Here.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 3.—The Cunard Line steamer Etruria, which sailed for New York to-day, took upward of fifty civil engineers, headed by Sir William Henry White, former Chief Constructor of warships of the British Navy, and Prof. William Cawthorne Unwin, to return the visit of the American Society of Civil Engineers and to attend the Congress at St. Louis.

The Pope to the Irish People.

ROME, Sept. 3.—The Pope has addressed a letter to the Irish episcopacy, recalling the recent visit to Armagh of his legate, Cardinal Vincenzo Vannutelli, expressing satisfaction at the faith displayed, encouraging the Irish people to persevere, and blessing them all.

King Edward Back in London.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—King Edward returned to London this afternoon from Marienbad, looking in splendid health.

DROUGHT GRIPS NOVA SCOTIA.

The Withering Grass Causes Dire Forebodings Among the Farmers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Nova Scotia is being scorched by one of the worst droughts in its history, says United States Consul General Holloway of Halifax, Nova Scotia, in a recent report. This is practically true of the eastern portion. The uplands of Pictou are as brown as they usually are late in the Autumn. The hay crop is much less than half an average, in some places less than a third, and every other crop is suffering.

The farmers of Blue Mountain Garden of Eden, and, indeed, every part of the country, are bemoaning their withered grass and scantily covered hayfields. In some places the crop is so light, owing to the lack of rain, that it seems hardly worth the labor of cutting, but grass is so scarce and so poor that not a blade will be wasted that can be gathered in. The "oldest inhabitant" in Pictou says that he does not remember a drought so disastrous as this is likely to be. It may compel farmers who depend on upland hay to feed their stock through the Winter, as many do, to reduce their herds at a great loss.

Not only is the hay crop a failure, but the lack of rain is almost equally disastrous to oats and other cereals. Potatoes and root crops are suffering, and cannot much longer stand the lack of moisture.

OFFICIAL STAMP ON GUIDE.

He Now Belongs to the Regulars, Who Once Was a Volunteer.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 3.—The Capitol guide has become a permanent fixture. He is clothed with regularity by the State Superintendent of Buildings, who has posted rates he may charge for "tows" of visitors desiring to be shown over the structure, and been invested with a silver shield containing the words "Capitol Guide," and a number.

His descriptions of some things of historical nature are vastly different from the histories published. The consumption of the time for which the visitor pays seems to be his main object.

In the Wakefield marble wainscoting of the second floor several forms resembling animals and birds have been figured out, as time consumers, by the guide. Near the entrance to the Executive Chamber is a "chicken" according to him. Recently some humorist cut the picture of a rooster out of an illustrated paper and pasted it over the object in the marble.

The guide came along with a tow and said with a flourish of his arm: "There, ladies and gentlemen, is the picture of a chicken."

The visitors looked at the guide sharply and then at the guide reproachfully, and some one in the Executive Chamber let out a "cock-a-doodle-do." The visitors laughed.

MINERS' ANEMIA IN FRANCE.

Intestinal Disease Being Investigated There and in Other Countries.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—United States Consul Brunot writes from St. Etienne, France, as follows:

Since the beginning of the present year the subject of miners' anemia, supposed to be a consequence of the existence in those parts of the intestine known as the duodenum and the jejunum of a worm to which an Italian doctor gave the name Ankylostoma, is occupying the attention of the French Government. A committee has been appointed to study the question of its prevalence in the different mining centres of France, and circulars have been sent out to all the mining companies for reports from the doctors attached to the mines. The disease is being investigated in other European countries also.

Consul Brunot has forwarded a historical sketch of the disease, which is on file in the Consular Division of the Bureau of Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor, for consultation by all interested.

REVOLUTIONARY PROPAGANDA IN THE ARMY OF THE CZAR

Alarm of Authorities Disclosed by Secret Circulars Issued to Staffs of Corps—Information of a Secret Character Imparted to the Foreign Press in Spite of All Precautions.

Published by Arrangement with The London Times.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—The Russian correspondents of The Times write:

The Osvobozhdenie publishes the following secret circulars, of which the first two shed an interesting light on the conditions of revolutionary propaganda in the Russian Army, while the third details certain measures by which it is hoped to prevent the possibility of official secrets finding their way into the foreign press:

1. Copy Confidential Circular.
The Staff of the Army Corps —, Active Section.
March 16 (29,) 1904.
To the Commander of the — Division.

In addition to the order of Feb. 27 of this year, No. —, in view of the necessity for exercising a more effective supervision over the privates, I order as follows:

1. In all special and extraordinary cases, those in particular of a political cast, the fact shall be announced directly after discovery, to the officer in command, and further to the commanders of the several sections, while a personal report shall be rendered to the officers of highest rank stationed on the spot and to myself in the town of N. at any hour of the day in frock coat and scarf, (a belt decorated with silver and worn by superior officers.) Besides the announcements and reports rendered to the commanders of the proper instance, inquiries shall be instituted in regard to political cases, and in addition the facts shall be communicated to the head of the Provincial Gendarmerie Department, while as regards the mode of disposal of pamphlets, leaflets, proclamations, &c., of a criminal character the instructions of the circular of the District Staff of 1902 shall be strictly observed.

Watch on All Letters.

2. In order to guard against the diffusion of political infection in the ranks an unrelaxing watch must be kept upon all letters received by privates, particularly by those of them who are Jews. The latter, moreover, shall be forbidden to receive letters written in Hebrew, and if any written in this language come to hand they are not to be passed on to the addressees, but to be given up to the staff of the division or the authorities of the artillery corps for preservation until such time as they may be required. Any privates in whose possession letters in the Hebrew language may be discovered shall be visited with severe penalties. Letters in the Polish language shall be handed over to officers specially charged and appointed in each corps who are masters of the Polish language. A similar course shall be observed in regard to letters in the languages of the other non-Russian peoples of the empire. If in the letters received by privates there is discovered anything of a criminal character, such letters shall be presented to the Provincial Gendarmerie Department, a report being rendered at the same time to the officer in command.

3. In order that such letters to privates shall not find their way to their destination without the knowledge of the authorities, through the hands of relatives or acquaintances, in order, too, that no publications whatever of a criminal character shall make their appearance among the privates, it is necessary at comparatively frequent intervals, though not periodically, to examine closely the privates' boxes, and not only their boxes, but their persons, on the pretext of investigating, say, their footbands and the condition of their feet; their boots are to be taken off, as prohibited literature may have been concealed in the uppers, and search shall be made under the uniform, in pockets, &c., as well as in various secret corners in the barracks, as for instance, in the roofs, in drawers, and in bags containing dirty linen, &c. While not freeing commanders of companies, squadrons, and sotnias and the senior officers in batteries from the obligation of making such examinations, I consider it necessary to impose this obligation, together with the responsibility for the consequences, upon the commanders of battalions and batteries, while the commanders of the sections shall be obliged to conduct examinations and test inspections personally with the object of seeing that this order is executed.

To Keep Out Prohibited Literature.

4. An increased strictness shall be observed in the fulfillment by all ranks of the requirements of the inner service, with the object of preventing the accumulation in the courtyards of the barracks and in the barracks themselves of prohibited literature, the possibility of the appearance of which is always to be impressed upon the guards and sentries of squadrons, sotnias, and batteries as a matter for which they will be held responsible, this to apply also to the battalions and the several sections. For this reason it is necessary to impose on all persons on duty a severe penalty in the case of the discovery in the courtyards of barracks or more especially in the barracks themselves, of publications and proclamations of a criminal character. If the existing arrangement of sentries does not supply a safeguard against the appearance of proclamations, the number of sentries shall be increased to whatever extent shall be deemed necessary by the commanders of sections, any new arrangements to be submitted to your Excellency for confirmation.

5. A particularly close supervision shall be instituted over privates who are on the police supervision lists and over their correspondence, more especially over those of them who are volunteers.

6. Severe measures shall be taken to prevent the occurrence of cases of absence without leave, for which cases if they do occur guards and sentries, including officers on duty in the several sections, shall be held responsible. One of the measures of putting a stop to absences without leave is that of making sudden nocturnal inspections of the soldiers' quarters, such inspections to be carried out by the commanders on duty of companies, sotnias, squadrons, batteries, and battalions, and by the commanders of sections. For the purposes of such examinations there is no need to wake the men, but it is necessary to make sure that every private is sleeping in his bed. Such examinations are to be made at various hours of the night.

7. In general the issue of permits to leave the barracks should be greatly restricted, for large numbers of privates are in the habit of thronging in the markets and roaming about the town; such restriction is to apply especially to the case of Jewish privates.

8. When Jews are taken to the synagogues they shall go in groups under the command of their senior, who shall be under an obligation to bring back the group and to present it to the sentry of the section at the appointed time. Leave shall be granted to Jews singly only on condition that peculiar care is exercised in selection and in accordance with the judgment of the commander of the section. If after the announcement of these measures and instructions in the companies, squadrons, sotnias, and batteries, publications of a criminal character are discovered and cases of absence without leave frequently occur, the non-commissioned officers who may be found guilty of laxity in the work of supervision shall be reduced to the rank of privates, while those who have completed their term of service shall be placed in the reserve or retired, and the company, squadron, and sotnia commanders shall be deprived of their command of these sections.

Signed by the Commandant of the corps.
The Chief of Staff, —.

Warning to Commanders.

II.
Secret.
The Staff of the Military District of Vilna, Department of the District Quartermaster General, Active Service Section, March 26, (April 7,) 1904.
No. 1,195. Vilna.

There have recenutly been discovered in the garrison of N and in the sections of the railway brigade cases of the appearance of revolutionary propaganda among the privates, the disseminators of criminal ideas proving to be for the most part Jewish privates, some of them being volunteers.

To prevent a repetition of anything of the kind among the troops of the district I insist that the commanders of sections shall use the utmost rigor in securing a strict observance of all regulations of the inner service, more especially on the part of officers on duty, and of guards and sentries of companies, squadrons, batteries, and commands of every kind. Moreover, I request:

(1.) The commanders of sections to make arrangements for the institution of the most rigorous supervision over the privates of the sections intrusted to their charge, and particularly over Jews and Letts.

(2.) Battalion commanders and commanders holding a corresponding position in the artillery, cavalry, and engineers to make sudden nocturnal inspections for the purpose of checking the numbers of privates and searching their trunks and their clothes.

(3.) That on Church festivals conversations of a moral and religious character with the privates shall be instituted. A merely formal attitude to this matter will be productive of no advantage whatever; it is accordingly incumbent upon those in authority to take care that the conversations are made as interesting as possible. Further, I recommend all commanders of high rank to visit as often as possible the troops under their charge and to note whether the requirements of the statute relating to inner service are being duly observed among the troops.

In making this communication I give warning that in the event of the discovery of revolutionary propaganda in any section of the forces the commanders of such a section shall be held most strictly responsible.

The Commander of the Forces, General of Infantry, Grippenberg.

Leakage of Secret Information.

III.
Copy Circular, Confidential.
The Staff of the N Infantry Division, Active Service Section, Jan. 21, (Feb. 3,) 1904.
To the Commander of the N N Regiment:

On Jan. 7, 1892, in the order No. 3,341 to the forces of the district, there were published "the instructions as to the mode of preserving or carrying on secret correspondence," which instructions, it might have been thought, afforded a sufficient guarantee for the observance of secrecy in all cases in which there was no room for an intentional breach of it on the part of persons to whom such correspondence might be intrusted in the way of service. From time to time, however, information of an entirely secret character finds its way into the foreign press.

The commander of the forces of the district, as he cannot bring himself to think that any of the officers or officials has permitted himself to publish such information deliberately, assumes that the cause of breaches of secrets is probably an insufficiently attentive regard to the matter on the part of those to whom the preservation of secret correspondence is intrusted, or, possibly, the permission on their part of inopportune conversations in the presence of persons who should by no means be initiated into the secret arrangements of the service.

In view of a recent instance of the publication in the foreign press of a complete copy of a secret document it has become indubitable that there is even a possibility of the theft of papers or of laxity in their preservation. In order to prevent the recurrence of this, the commander of the military district has given orders that in the matter of preserving and carrying on secret correspondence strict regard shall be had to the instructions mentioned above, and that at the same time an inspection shall be made in the regiment under your charge for the purpose of discovering whether these instructions are now being observed, while henceforth a check shall be kept upon this branch of service work by means of sudden inspections; such inspections, I am bidden to inform the divisional commanders, may be made by his Excellency at any time.

In consequence of the notice issued by the Staff of the — Army Corps on Jan. 15, (28,) 1904, No. —, and by order of the divisional commander, I inform you of what has been set forth above in order that you may take the corresponding measures, and I add that his Excellency considers persons who may be found guilty of carelessness in the preservation and the handling of the secret correspondence of the service as being liable to be called to very strict account.

BOAST BY W. H. ELLIS.

He Claims Credit for Treaty Between America and Abyssinia.

Foreign Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—Hugues Leroux, the well-known author and traveler, has just returned from Abyssinia, where he went as the bearer of an autograph letter from President Loubet to the Negus.

On his return journey M. Leroux met W. H. Ellis, who accompanied the ill-fated F. Kent Loomis on the latter's journey across the Atlantic, and who, after Mr. Loomis's disappearance, took charge of the treaty between the United States and Abyssinia.

Mr. Ellis, according to M. Leroux's account, took the French traveler aside, and, after sending the young secretary who accompanied Ellis out of earshot, informed M. Leroux that he was the bearer of a signed commercial treaty between America and Abyssinia, which only required Menelik's approbation.

Mr. Ellis added the curious statement that the success of the negotiations between the United States and Abyssinia was due to himself. He declared that though Mr. Skinner, the American Consul General at Marseilles, first broached the subject to Menelik, the reason why he (Ellis) did not come forward at that time was that he had important private interests in common with the Negus which might have raised suspicion as to his motives.

CROWN PRINCE BETROTHED?

Frederick William of Germany and Duchess Cecilia Reported Engaged.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—The betrothal of the Crown Prince Frederick William and the Duchess Cecilia, sister of the reigning Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, was reported with some positiveness in Schwerin to-day, but is not confirmed by the Minister of Mecklenburg-Schwerin here or by the official news agency in Schwerin.

The Crown Prince was born May 6, 1882. The Duchess was born Sept. 20, 1886.

EXPORTS OF MANUFACTURES.

Exceeded Those of Agricultural Products in May, June, and July.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Manufacturers formed nearly one-half of the exports from the United States in the month of July. Speaking with statistical accuracy, they formed 48.27 per cent. of the total domestic exports. For the first time in the history of the United States' manufactures are exceeding agricultural products in the exportation of goods from the country.

Figures just issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor show that in July manufactures exported amounted to $40,000,000, against $31,000,000 of agricultural products, and in June manufactures amounted to nearly $42,000,000, against $37,250,000 of agricultural products. In former years agricultural products have greatly exceeded manufactures in the exports of the country, and it is only in recent months that manufactures have equaled or exceeded agricultural products in the export statements.

Even in the seven months ending with July last agricultural products exceed manufactures by nearly $100,000,000, but in May manufactures for the first time in the history of the country exceeded agricultural products in the statement of domestic exports, and this was again the case in June and July.

In May exports of manufactures exceeded agricultural products by about $1,000,000, in June the excess of manufactures over agricultural products was over $4,000,000, and in July the excess of manufactures over agricultural products was nearly $3,000,000.

In the three months of May, June, and July, 1904, the total value of agricultural products exported was $106,508,133, while the total value of manufactures exported in the same period was $120,789,768.

While it is true as above stated that the exports of manufactures in the months of May, June, and July have exceeded the exports of agricultural products, it should not be understood that the total manufactures exported during the entire year will exceed the total value of agricultural products exported. It is quite apparent, however, that the proportion which manufactures form of the total exports is steadily increasing, and that the proportion which agricultural products form of the total exports is steadily decreasing.

FRENCH BAND ENTERTAINED.

Guests of J. B. Martin at Luncheon—Off for St. Louis.

The members of the "Musique de la Garde Republicaine," the official military band of the French Government, were entertained at luncheon by J. B. Martin at the Café Martin yesterday afternoon. The Salle Renaissance, where the luncheon was served, was crowded with representative French citizens of New York, as well as many others not of French origin.

In addition to Gabriel Pares, the conductor of the Garde Republicaine, those at the speakers' table included President of the Board of Aldermen C. V. Fornes, who in the absence of Mayor McClellan, welcomed the musicians to New York; M. Soufflot de Magny, the Consul General of France at New York; Ferdinand Levy, who acted as toastmaster; Louis Martin, and Senator Victor J. Dowling.

In welcoming the band to New York Mr. Fornes referred to their visit here thirty years ago, and said that their coming to-day was a gracious act on the part of President Loubet, who in behalf of the French Government authorized the trip. Consul General de Magny spoke along the same lines.

M. Pares, the leader of the band, in acknowledging the cordial welcome extended the organization, said it was fitting that he should speak of the ties of friendship that unite the American and French peoples. He referred to the former visit of the band, when his father was a prominent member of the organization. One of the cherished possessions of the band, he added, was an American flag, presented to it on its first American visit by the ladies of New York.

The Garde Republicaine left for St. Louis at 7 o'clock last evening. They will remain there a month. On their return to New York they will give a concert, either in the Metropolitan Opera House or Carnegie Hall, the proceeds of which will be turned over to the Trustees of the French Hospital in New York.

It was pointed out that monetary considerations had nothing to do with the visit of the band, its presence being purely a courtesy on the part of the French Government to the management of the St. Louis Exposition and incidentally to the American people.

WOMAN SCULPTOR HERE.

Mrs. Kuhne-Beveridge-Branson Tells of Rough Rider Group.

Mrs. Kühne-Beveridge-Branson, whose works of sculpture have been exhibited in New York, London, and Paris, and her sister the Baronin Ray von Wrede, arrived here yesterday on the steamship Philadelphia. They are granddaughters of ex-Gov. J. L. Beveridge of Illinois, and it is to visit him that they come here. Both women brought in their trunks many fine Parisian gowns, and as the fact was reported about the pier a crowd of several hundred gathered around the trunks to gaze at the gowns as the Customs Inspector spread them out for examination.

Mrs. Kühne-Beveridge-Branson said that after three years of steady work she had just completed the model for her latest work, "The Charge of the Rough Riders." The model is about 10 by 20 feet, and has in it almost 200 figures. It represents President Roosevelt as Colonel of the Rough Riders leading a charge at the head of his troops, all mounted on broncos. The sculptor said that many critics had viewed the model in her London studio and that without exception they had praised it very highly.

GREAT CONCRETE ABUTMENTS.

40,000 Cubic Yards of Cement Used at New Washington Station.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON Sept. 3.—The concrete work being put in by the engineers engaged on the new Union Station here for the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore and Ohio is said to be the most extensive use of cement ever attempted in the United States.

The station building and the approaches are to be placed on concrete abutments forty feet square and fifty feet high. This mass of concrete is produced by huge bins leading to a mixer, and the work is mainly done by machinery, few men being required in the construction. The huge cement piers are to bear the weight of the station structure, and the high dome which will surmount the building. These piers will ultimately be faced with white granite.

The amount of concrete which will be used in the building alone, aside from the approaches, is enormous. It will amount to about 40,000 cubic yards. Besides this, there will be 400,000 cubic feet of stone masonry and 20,000,000 bricks. For the floor girders and roof supports of the main building, exclusive of the train shed, about 7,000 tons of structural steel will be utilized.

STAY AWAY FROM PANAMA.

Such Is the Warning of Minister Barrett to Americans.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—John Barrett, the American Minister to Panama, has made a special report to the State Department relative to the present and future conditions on the Isthmus as affected by the building of the Panama Canal, which is intended to prevent sore disappointment on the part of adventurous Americans attracted toward Panama by resumption of the vast enterprise.

Mr. Barrett says in part:

"No man seeking a position as clerk, stenographer, typewriter, engineer, foreman, or any similar class of labor which the average American is willing to perform should come to the Isthmus in expectation of securing a position unless he has made some previous arrangement for employment, or has sufficient funds to pay his expenses in Panama and of return to the United States if he finds no opening.

"More men of this kind are now coming to Panama and Colon than there are positions to be filled. The cost of living is very high, prices having increased nearly 100 per cent. in the last six months, and there is a great shortage of cheap and wholesome lodging and board accommodations.

"There is not any real boom in Panama, in Colon, or in the zone, but rents for houses, stores, and offices have doubled and tripled during the last few months, and are now almost exorbitantly high. In fact, the Panama landlords are, some of them, so unreasonable in their charges that there is danger of their driving business from Panama proper into a neighboring zone.

"The disagreeable and unhealthy features of the Panama climate have been ridiculously overstated by those who have studied the situation superficially while passing across the Isthmus in transit, or who desire to create a sensation. As a matter of fact, there has not been during the months of July and August a single uncomfortable night for sleeping, while the average days have not been hotter than those of New York and Washington.

"There has been hardly a single instance of serious illness among the considerable number of young men who are here in the employment of the canal, while the percentage of sickness among the larger group of laborers employed at Culebra is not greater than that upon similar excavation work in the United States. There has not been a single case of yellow fever for over a month, and there is less malaria than is often found in sections of the United States where there is considerable turning of the soil.

"My corrections of overdrawn criticisms of the Panama climate must not, however, be interpreted as meaning that there are not unfavorable features here. They exist as they do in all tropical lands, and, of course, the conditions of maintaining health and enjoying life are not by any means as favorable as those in the average temperate climes."

CONFUSION AT LINER'S PIER.

Philadelphia's Passengers Kept Waiting for the Two Appraisers.

What was declared to be one of the poorest pieces of work done recently by the customs officials was that which they tried to do at the American Line pier yesterday, when the steamship Philadelphia arrived from Southampton. The vessel brought over 500 cabin passengers, a majority of whom had goods in their trunks which it was necessary to have an employe of the Appraiser's department examine. There were two examiners at the pier.

There were plenty of Inspectors, but as soon as one found some goods that had to be appraised he looked for the appraiser, only to find him besieged by a number of other Inspectors. In this way the Inspectors were all soon occupied, and the passengers, sometimes in a line 200 long, were compelled to wait for over two hours.

Lashed to the deck of the Philadelphia were the spars of Commodore Morton F. Plant's yacht Ingomar, which has been racing in European waters for several months. Commodore Plant will return next week. His yacht will return soon.

RUINING FRENCH SHIPPING.

Dock Strike Threatens Maritime Supremacy of Marseilles.

MARSEILLES, Sept. 3.—The maritime supremacy of Marseilles, the second city in France, is threatened with extinction owing to the continuance of the strike and the tie-up of the entire marine industry. Much traffic has already been diverted to Spanish and Italian ports.

The strikers to-day sought to interrupt street traffic and troops were called upon to disperse the rioters.

The steamship companies, including the French Transatlantic Company, refuse to yield until the sailors consent to submit to the discipline of their commanders.

M. Leroy-Beaulieu, the eminent sociologist, has written a letter saying that American travelers are giving up traveling on French steamers, preferring German and British vessels, owing to fears of their lack of discipline, which is now the main issue of the Marseilles strike.

ARMIES GATHER FOR WAR AT BULL RUN

New York Regiments Swell Ranks of Blue and Brown.

SMART WORK BY THE 12TH

Their Rapid Detraining Evokes Praise from Gen. Corbin—Officers Unload Tent Poles—Bustle in the Camps.

Special to The New York Times.

CORPS HEADQUARTERS, GAINESVILLE, Va., Sept. 3.—The famous old battlefield of Bull Run, twice dyed with the blood of a divided Nation, harbors again to-night within its ample confines of sixty-five square miles some thousands of military tents and nearly 30,000 soldiers, separated into two hostile armies. The armies, however, are only technically hostile, and North and South mingle in both the Blue Army and the Brown Army, while Northern and Southern bands play each other's airs.

The great camp already is beginning to shape itself for the elaborate manoeuvres which begin on Monday, when a Blue Army of 15,000 men, under Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, based upon the Potomac River at Washington, will march westward against the Brown Army of 15,000 under Gen. Franklin Bell, operating in the Shenandoah Valley toward Washington.

The armies are named from their respective uniforms, the Blues wearing the old regulation blue and the Browns being attired in the recently adopted olive drab uniforms. The 5,000 regular troops who have been detailed to assist in the manoeuvres already are here, and a total force of nearly 25,000 militia will be sleeping under their tents to-morrow night. Then the hostile armies will be prepared on Monday to cut each other into hypothetical fragments.

New York Regiments Arrive.

The event of the day was the arrival of the New York regiments, and their appearance, their smart way of handling themselves, and their snappy, quick, and businesslike work won high and general praise from all the officers who saw them. These regiments are the Twelfth of Manhattan, the Fourteenth of Brooklyn, and the Seventy-fourth from Buffalo.

The "fighting Twelfth," as it is sometimes called, probably because it looks as if it could fight if it had to, left New York last night amid great cheering, and arrived at the battlefield this morning at 10 o'clock. To-day, perhaps, the first doubt of the mimic warfare was cleared away, and the factor in eliminating the doubt was the manner in which the New Yorkers, particularly the Twelfth, detrained.

A regular, from long experience, falls off a train and into line, just as naturally as a tumbling cat alights on its feet. Militia, however, do not always land so quickly or so successfully, and many were the curious regular eyes bent on the Twelfth's train when it reached Thoroughfare this morning. The result was a genuine surprise to all who saw. The whole regiment, 850 strong, spilled out of the train quietly, without confusion, and were in column for march before the regulars had time to catch their breaths. Several of the regular officers attached to headquarters were on hand to see the performance and timed it by their watches. The whole manoeuvre occupied some seconds less than three minutes.

On account of the intense heat of the long night journey two or three privates were temporarily overcome, but to-day their getup was as smart and soldier-like as it was when, amid applause, they made their march down town in New York.

An acute, interested, and enthusiastic admirer was Gen. Corbin, who is in supreme command of all the troops occupied in the manoeuvres.

"The Twelfth," he said, "beat everything in the facility with which it detrained. The men's appearance was excellent, and I am not at all surprised that two or three were overcome by the heat of the night journey."

The observed of all observers was Lieut. Cornelius Vanderbilt, with his Company D, to hustle along the work of unloading the tents and supplies. Lieut. Vanderbilt and Lieut. H. H. Rogers, Jr., of Company A, tore off their coats and did four men's work in getting tent poles off the train. After that Lieut. Vanderbilt was assigned to police duty.

Many of the onlookers were surprised to see the officers unloading poles, but Col. Brewer, who was at Thoroughfare at the time, said that when speed was necessary officers of the regular army frequently did the same thing. To judge by the remarks of the Twelfth's men afterward, none of them thought any the less of the two Lieutenants for their hard work. The First Lieutenant of Lieut. Rogers's company is Deputy Police Commissioner Harris Lindsley. Another officer of the Twelfth, Capt. Rogers Winthrop, has the distinction of being the only National Guard officer assigned to the staff of Gen. Corbin.

Praise for the Fourteenth, Too.

The Fourteenth of Brooklyn also made a creditable record in detraining, and, like the Twelfth, won praise for its smart appearance. The Fourteenth is in the Second Brigade of the Blue Army, the brigade being stationed at Manassas, and commanded by Brig. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss.

The remaining troops will arrive to-morrow, and Chief Quartermaster Col. John W. Pullman says that his schedule of eighty trains will go through successfully. Nearly all the troops are here now, and so far there has been no hitch.

Altogether to-day fifteen trains arrived, mostly from New York and New England, bringing nearly 4,000 troops, and the work in detraining through the Southern Railway's newly laid twenty-five miles of track was considered remarkable.

Quartermaster General Humphreys of the United States Army visited the field to-day and accompanied by Col. Bond, Deputy Quartermaster Capt. Budd, Major Baker, Capt. Crabbs, and Capt. Lyddel, made a tour of the three camps in three automobiles. Their report was highly satisfactory.

Of the general arrangement Gen. Corbin said this evening: "I have never seen a better camp, not even in my travels abroad. If the lessons which are being learned now had been known in 1898 the history of the Spanish war would have been different in that many mistakes would have been avoided."

The health of the camp, in spite of the very hot and dry weather, remains good. About fifty men are indisposed, but the number is regarded as small for so great a number of men in camp. While chopping a tree this afternoon a member of the Engineer Corps let the tree fall on him, and his leg was broken. This is the most serious casualty thus far reported.

Distribution of Troops.

While the situation of the battlefield and the disposition of the troops suggests a repetition or an imitation of the two battles of Bull Run, the plans, as drawn up by the War Department, make it quite the contrary. Gen. Corbin, in supreme command of all the forces, has taken particular pains to avoid any possibility of criticism on account of the division of the troops, and regiments from the North will fight side by side with those of the South against North and South on the other side.

The Twelfth of New York and the crack Second of Georgia will help each other defend Washington against the advance of the Blues, under Gen. Grant. Against these two regiments are the old Fourteenth of Brooklyn, with the First Tennessee Infantry, the First Florida Infantry, and the First South Carolina Infantry, all in the Blues First Brigade, under the command of Brig. Gen. Theodore J. Wint, United States Army.

The union of North and South and division of North against North and South against South has been carried out so thoroughly that any revival of hereditary feeling is rendered quite impossible. North and South are coupled in the divisional troops and in each of the four brigades of the opposing divisions.

In the First Division (the Blues) Battery I of the Massachusetts Field Artillery and Battery A of the First Virginia Field Artillery fight side by side. In the First Brigade of this division the Fifth New Jersey is coupled with the First Georgia. The First Alabama and the First Maine Infantry co-operate in the Third Brigade. In the Second Division, (or Browns,) commanded by Gen. Bell, three troops of the First Squadron of the Georgia Cavalry will travel with Battery I of the Connecticut Field Artillery. The Second Maine and Second Texas will fight together in the First Brigade. In the Third Brigade of this division the First Maryland and the Second New York will stand together. The Second South Carolina Infantry and two battalions of the West Virginia Infantry are bracketed in the Fourth Brigade of the Blues with the Second Vermont Infantry.

All these troops mentioned are militia, and, next to the elimination of the North and South, as such, in the manoeuvres, the next question, considered and apparently thoroughly solved by Gen. Corbin and his aides, was the judicious admixture in each of the eight brigades of regular soldiers with militia forces.

Assignments of the Regulars.

The militia outnumber the regulars by about four to one, and in order that the amateur soldiers may have the advantage of consorting with and following the example of the regulars, one body of regular troops is assigned to each brigade of the opposing forces. The regulars in the "Blue" army are five companies of the Fifth Infantry in the First Brigade, four companies of the Sixteenth Infantry in the Second Brigade, six companies of the Sixteenth Infantry in the Third Brigade, and four companies of the Fifth Infantry in the Fourth Brigade.

In the "Browns," under Gen. Bell, there are three companies of the First Infantry in the First Brigade, four companies of the Ninth Infantry in the Second Brigade, four companies of the Ninth in the Third Brigade, and in the Fourth Brigade five companies of the Eighth.

In the divisional forces under the opposing Generals the regulars show as follows: Gen. Grant has under him two companies of the Second Battalion of Engineers, eight troops of the splendidly drilled Fifteenth Cavalry, which was seen in Madison Square Garden at the Military Show last Winter, and the Twenty-third and Twenty-ninth Batteries of the United States Field Artillery. Under Gen. Bell in his allotment of divisional troops are one company of the Second Battalion of Engineers, two squadrons of the Seventh Cavalry, and the Third and Fourth Batteries of the United States Field Artillery.

To leaven the heterogeneous mass of 30,000 troops there will be music a plenty. The Blues and the Browns each have four bands. Of these only one is a militia organization—the band of the Second Vermont Infantry, in the Fourth Brigade of Gen. Bell's forces. In Gen. Grant's army the divisional section has two bands, that of the Second Battalion of Engineers and that of the Fifteenth Cavalry. Gen. Bell's Fourth Brigade, besides the Vermont band, has the band of the Eighth Infantry. The Blue Second Brigade and the First and Second Brigades of the Browns have no music of their own. Gen. Bell's divisional troops and all the other brigades have one band each.

Another example of the impartial and equable division of troops is found in the selection of the militia troops from the various parts of the Atlantic Division, the instruction of which is the main purpose of the manoeuvres. All States from Maine to Texas are represented by militia organizations of artillery, cavalry, infantry, hospital men, and signal corps in just proportions.

The rivalry among the National Guard organizations to be chosen to take part in the war game of course was great. Altogether troops were selected from seventeen States, of which New York sends four organizations. Of these, New York City has two—the Fourteenth of Brooklyn, which fought under Gen. Grant in the Spanish-American war, and the Twelfth Manhattan under Col. George Dyer. Besides the two regiments of infantry New York sends two troops of her pet cavalry organizations. Squadron A is honored with a place among Gen. Grant's brigade of divisional troops. Brooklyn's Troop C, under Capt. De Bevoise, is at Manassas.

The Force of Umpires.

The force of umpires, which will give the final word as to the success or failure of the various tactics employed by the rival commanders, has completed its elaborate plans for passing upon the execution of the manoeuvres. This force numbers fifty-one. They rank from Colonel to Captain, and all have been chosen because of their long experience and wide acquaintance with military matters. They are among the most efficient men in the army, and their selection as umpires is regarded as a high compliment to their ability.

The chief umpire is Col. Arthur L. Wagner of the General Staff, who was chief umpire at the Fort Riley and West Point manoeuvres last year, and who has been until recently the second in command at the General Service and Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He will be with neither army and will be supreme in authority as far as the action manoeuvres are concerned. Col. Jacob A. Augur of the Tenth Cavalry will be the senior umpire with Gen. Grant's army, and Col. Edgar L. Steever of the Fourth Cavalry will be the chief umpire with Gen. Bell's forces.

All umpires will wear the uniform of the divisions to which they are attached, and will be distinguished from the other officers by a white cap or helmet. Col. Wagner can wear either blue or brown uniform, and he will be accompanied always by a mounted orderly bearing his flag. Col. E. E. Britton, formerly in command of New York's Twenty-second, and well known as a writer on military subjects, is at corps headquarters, where he will remain throughout the manoeuvres as the guest of Major Gen. Corbin.

Contrary to his reported intentions Gen. Corbin will not view the manoeuvres from an automobile, but will use a horse. The several automobiles in camp are creating great excitement among the native horses, and there has been nearly a score of runaways. Fast time is impossible as the chauffeur is obliged to stop his machine every time an approaching horse shows signs of nervousness.

Gen. Corbin started out in his white automobile to make an inspection of the Brown camp at Thoroughfare, and on the sixteen-mile trip his machine had to stop several times in order that shy horses might be led past it.

DINNERS AT THE MANOEUVRES.

Governors and Foreign Attaches Alone Entertained at Nation's Expense.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The comment made by Representative Livingston of Georgia on the dining of guests at headquarters during the manoeuvres at Manassas is being discussed by army officers. During the past week there has been not a little entertaining of guests, not only at Gen. Corbin's headquarters, but also at all the various division, brigade, and regimental headquarters, but it has all been at the expense of the officers, who in camp, as well as in quarters, pay the bills for what their tables bear.

In the appropriations for the manoeuvres the fact was recognized that it was due from the Government to entertain representatives of other countries and the Governors of States that might send troops to take part in the demonstrations. In the arrangements for the manoeuvres provision was made for entertaining eight military representatives from foreign countries and seven Governors of States. These are the only persons who will dine at Government expense. When representatives from the United States are invited to foreign manoeuvres they are entertained as the guests of the country where the manoeuvres are held.

The charge made that Gen. Corbin has been exceedingly punctilious and required guests to wear a certain dress at dinner is without foundation. Owing to the dusty condition of the roads, word was sent to officers, for their convenience, that white uniforms would be the thing for dinner. Guests are privileged to dress as they please.

Mr. Livingston was misled by paragraphs published in a number of papers to the effect that Gen. Corbin had arranged to have formal dinners daily at his headquarters, to which none was to be admitted unless in full-dress uniform in the case of officers of the army and evening suits in the case of citizens.

TO SEE ARMY MANOEUVRES.

Advice for Those Who Would Witness Bull Run Operations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am in constant receipt of inquiries as to the best way to see the army manoeuvres. My advice is to take an umbrella and a pocketbook and alight from the Southern Railway at Wellington, Gainesville, or Haymarket—get out into a farmhouse somewhere adjacent to the Warrenton Pike before Monday night, Sept. 5, and await developments. The dooryards, orchards, vineyards, gardens, and cemeteries are exempt from occupation by the troops.

Nearly every farmhouse in the area is a boarding house which will accommodate from ten to fifty people each. The terms run from $1.50 to $2 per day, and some of the farmers propose to transport their temporary guests free of charge.

Those who wish to visit the Blue Army or the Brown Army should go to Lewis's Crossing or Thoroughfare.

Manassas is three miles from the Blues and fourteen from the Browns; seven miles from the centre of the area. Those who wish to avoid the saloons and a hot, dusty ride will remain on the cars instead of disembarking at Manassas. Those who desire to secure quarters in advance in Manassas or in the area of manoeuvres can receive a printed list of boarding places from the undersigned, there will be limited livery accommodations at each station.

A few saddle horses can be obtained, but they are in great demand.

ART SCHOOL'S TRIP ABROAD.

Mr. Chase Abandons the Old Summer Courses on Shinnecock Hills.

The Summer School of Art, at Shinnecock Hills, L. I., which has been for many years one of the points of interest for residents of the Hamptons to drive to, has ceased to exist, and the bare, windy, heather-grown slopes of the Hills, between Peconic and Shinnecock Bays, will henceforth miss the picturesque maidens in their glory, sunbrowned despite the sunshades, with their umbrellas, easels, and big hats. In their stead will be left mere golfers and caddies and the few pedestrians who find a reward for a windy walk in the superb views and exhilarating sea breezes of this part of Long Island. The school was William M. Chase's, and it is Mr. Chase himself who announces its demise. He has just returned from his second tour abroad with the school.

"The class of art students I took to Holland last year," said the painter, "settled the question how best to spend the Summer, or, say, two or three months of the Summer. The combination of travel, art museums, and work turned out all that I expected, for each in its way helps the other, and the stimulus is constant. The mere change of surroundings to a novel environment enlivens a pupil, and when he gets down to work the fact that he is in a foreign land, where foreign artists are liable at any time to call and see what he is doing, exerts a lively effect on his ambition. Then he sees from time to time the pictures of modern men and the old masters. Being with friends and fellow-workers, he does not get lonely and discouraged, as the solitary art student often does when first he goes abroad. It is really a lark, and yet hard work, as good a mixture as any one need expect."

"But this Summer you did not return to old Haarlem?"

"No. I believe it is best to change the scene each year. While last Summer we enjoyed that quaint, immaculate old Dutch town and painted the same scenery that found favor with Ruysdael, Hobbema, Hals, and Rembrandt, and while we had close to hand the incomparable pictures of the old Dutchmen at Amsterdam and Haarlem, this year we took London by storm. My agent found excellent quarters in a big studio at St. John's Wood, and lodgings for the students also great distance."

"And how were you received by the British artists?"

"With open arms—I never knew such kindness. Men of long-established renown—Alma-Tadema, Sargent, Brangwyn, Boughton, Shannon, and others—came to see us and invited us to their studios. The painters over there certainly live in great style. They were very sympathetic and left nothing undone to make the students feel that England is a second home. Naturally it was different in Holland, where artists are comparatively few and scattered, and the language makes a difference.

"You ask why I chose England this Summer. Chiefly because I wished my pupils to see the pictures in the National Gallery and the Wallace collections. In the National Gallery the old masters have been arranged chronologically, so that one can take a certain art period and on one day study that period by itself, leaving another for a second visit. The Wallace collections are marvelously fine. They supply just what London formerly lacked, the completest and finest set of works by Corot and the Barbizon landscapists, for instance, not to speak of other French work. You can imagine how stimulating to students it is to see masterpieces by the leading spirits of modern schools, pictures that establish standards."

"You have given up the Shinnecock Summer school for good, then?"

"Yes; that is now gathered to the past. There are no more schools for me. Last Summer work over here, which can be used by men and women who do not wish to go abroad; some at Cape Cod, another at Old Lyme, Conn. The National Academy and the Society of American Artists have Summer schools of art in different quarters; the Pennsylvania Academy of Art also. Such instruction as my pupils gained this Summer is important to their future in many ways in their professions, brings them in contact with the leading masters of the day, affords them the equivalent of the old system of Wanderjahre, which was a necessary course for apprentices to the useful trades and arts before they could set up as masters. They had to wander from their own towns, and their own country sometimes, in order to learn what was old fashioned in their home teaching, what was good enough to be preserved. I fancy that pupils who have been abroad under such auspices learn neither to overrate nor to underrate foreign examples, neither to think that America holds all that is worth while, nor to imagine that residence in Europe alone will make artists of them."

"Have you made any plans for next Summer's trip?"

"Not yet. But I am inclined to place Spain on the cards for next Summer. In Madrid, or near Madrid, my agent may be able to find just what we want, and then we shall have a chance to study the Spanish and Netherlandish schools at the Prado—Velasquez, Murillo, Coello, Goya, van Dyck, and perhaps make the acquaintance of some of the living Spanish artists, if at that time of the year they are in Madrid. I know the Spanish capital well, and, like most visitors to Spain, have enjoyed the delightful courtesy and charm of Spaniards, who form a unique race. Unfortunately, some of the best men do not stay much in Spain, being drawn away to Paris and Rome, where they find models, studios, art dealers, and private art collectors, a true art centre, in fact, which no Spanish city is at present in Europe, perhaps even more than in America, art is a kind of passport, and I am always amazed at the sympathy and kindness which meet us as soon as people learn who we are and what we are about. The ordinary tourist may not be regarded always with the most favorable eyes, especially when he hunts in bands, but every one seems to have a pleasant word for artists."

"And what are you doing in the painting line yourself?"

"I? At present? Neither here at Shinnecock nor at my studio in the city have I taken up work again seriously. I am off for St. Louis, where I shall have to serve on the jury. When I return I shall take up the interrupted portraits and other pictures with all the more zest because I have had a long Summer vacation."

FIGHTING MOSQUITOS BY DITCHING METHOD

What Three Years' Effort Has Accomplished at Lawrence.

PEST GREATLY REDUCED

Peculiarities of the Salt Marsh Mosquito and Difficulties of Fighting Them—Real Source of Trouble.

Edward M. Bentley, who has had considerable experience and success in stopping the breeding of salt-marsh mosquitoes by the ditching method, yesterday commented on an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Aug. 29, in which conditions in New Jersey were described, and in which it was pointed out that the operations undertaken near Newark have "only turned the meadows into a vast pond, a bigger mosquito factory than it had ever been before." "I am not familiar with the situation at Newark, but there must have been some radical error in the manner of digging the ditches, if it is true that they have been unsuccessful," said Mr. Bentley. "It is not to be expected that such treatment of the meadows will shut off the migration of mosquitos bred in regions which have not been treated. The salt marsh mosquito is a vigorous traveler and will drift with the wind for many miles. It is, however, certain that if the ditching were properly done, it would stop the breeding in regions to which it has been applied.

"It is an error to think that the ditches are for the purpose of drying the meadows. The object is to prevent the trapping of the water in pockets or depressions reached only by the monthly high tides. Regions flooded by the daily tides are safe. In some cases it is the purpose of the ditches to admit the daily tides to pools that were formerly reached by the extraordinary tides only; but in other cases they do drain and dry out such pools without admitting the daily tides.

EXPERIMENTS AT LAWRENCE.

"At Lawrence, L. I., this system has been steadily extended for the past three years. In 1902 six miles of shore line was ditched along the ocean front, and the succeeding Summer several miles on the north side adjoining Jamaica Bay was similarly treated. The method is also being extensively continued by private owners, who have spent several thousand dollars in the work, until the breeding has been eliminated along about twelve miles of shore line on the ocean side of Lawrence. During the present Summer three men have constantly patrolled these meadows, and it is safe to say that not a handful of mosquitos has been produced there during that time. The same is true of the regions on the Jamaica Bay side, so far as the ditching has been extended.

"There remains, however, quite an area at the head of Jamaica Bay which has not been ditched, and it is from this particular region that practically all the mosquitos which have reached Lawrence this Summer have come. Their progress from this region, when the wind has blown steadily from the north for several days, may be traced as definitely as the march of an army, and the time of their arrival at certain points can be predicted with certainty. There has been but one such invasion of any consequence during the present season. This occurred early in July, when a steady north wind blew for several days just at a time when the weather had become warm enough to permit the hatching of a large brood. In twelve hours they had arrived within half a mile of the village, and in twenty-four hours had spread through the village and reached the meadows on the south, where they were manifestly disturbed by their inability to find breeding places. In desperation they began breeding in a most unpropitious locality, where they had never attempted it before, but were immediately stopped, although it took 140 gallons of oil to do it. With a change of wind the retreat of the mosquitos was quite as marked as their advance. The larger part of them were blown out in forty-eight hours. Some lingered in protected places in the lee of the hedges and in inclosures where they could not escape. Since that time migrations have been unimportant, but may be expected on a north wind.

REMARKABLE SUCCESS.

"The conditions this year have been unprecedentedly favorable to mosquito breeding, because of the unusual amount of rain coming at frequent intervals," continued Mr. Bentley, "yet the conditions at Lawrence have been remarkable, in comparison with the years before this work was undertaken. Every evening this Summer, when the weather was warm enough, I have sat on an unscreened porch in perfect comfort. This has not been true of every residence, since some dwellings are more favorably located than others. Those which are more or less closely surrounded with hedges and shrubbery, in which mosquitos from outside regions have lingered, have more mosquitos than those which are more open and out of proximity to the shrubbery. There have been also cases in which rain-water mosquitos were produced near dwellings by reason of neglect.

"In years past, however, the conditions described in your article as prevailing in New Jersey were also characteristic of Lawrence. It was my custom to provide each chair on my veranda with a screen made by attaching a wire frame to the back of the chair and surrounding it with a tent which would reach to the floor. My gardener during most of the Summer could work only with a veil over his head and gloves on his hands. But such screens have not been used for three years, and last Sunday I searched in my garden for adult mosquitos, and found but four, sheltered behind a hedge. To show that the village appreciates the present situation, I would say that the appropriation for mosquito work was voted unanimously last Spring. Not a single voter made a protest, and it is expected that the work will be extended to cover the one remaining region from which mosquitos come.

START OF BREEDING RETARDED.

"One noticeable effect of the ditching seems to be that it prevents an early start of the breeding, even in outside regions. The salt-marsh mosquito seems to hibernate in both the larval and the egg state, the ground being loaded with eggs and larvae in the Fall, which develop in the Spring. For example, several small pools were carefully watched last Fall. They were filled with larvae which did not develop because of the low temperature. These pools were repeatedly frozen over, but when thawed out the 'wrigglers' were found as active as ever, and were finally frozen in when Winter came. The day before Christmas the frozen mud was dug up from the bottom of each pool and placed in a pail of warm water, and in two hours the larvae were once more alive and kicking. In so far as the reduction in the mass of mosquitos tends to reduce the number of eggs and larvae left on the ground in the Fall, to that extent is the start of the breeding retarded in the following Spring.

"I mention the foregoing facts in the hope that it may tend to prevent any abandonment of the ditching method by discouragement at its apparent lack of success. This work is a peculiar one, which requires tenacity of purpose and a patient continuation under discouragement. People generally expect too much from a small expenditure, and also forget that the work must be followed up and continued with diligence. Results come slowly and—what is particularly noticeable—people easily forget the former bad conditions and, knowing that work is being done, take more notice of a single mosquito than they formerly did of a thousand. In regions where winds blow from untreated areas the only results to be expected are that the breeding will be stopped on the areas which are treated, so that winds blowing therefrom will bring no mosquitos, and those which migrate into the treated region will have no opportunity of settling down there and breeding. Only an extended system of treatment reaching over a considerable area will have pronounced results. The direction of prevailing winds is an important factor in the work. I may also add that the engineering of the ditches is equally important. It is unnecessary to dig them to any pools which are well flooded by the daily tides.

REAL SOURCE OF TROUBLE.

"The real source of trouble is the pockets and depressions reached only by the exceptional high tides. These occur along the edges of the uplands, and can be reached at a comparatively slight expense. I have seen a considerable waste of money and effort by digging ditches in the wrong places and in the wrong way. If properly carried out, this system is extremely cheap and effective. I trust that the alleged experience in New Jersey will not lead to an abandonment of the work, but that, in spite of the apparent lack of success, the system will be carried out in such a way and to such an extent that benefits may be realized. Unless it is continued and extended, the money spent upon it is simply wasted. I will also add that, in my judgment, it should be rendered unlawful for the owner of any salt marshes or other lands to maintain thereon such a pestiferous nuisance as a mosquito hatchery. Then it would only remain for public-spirited citizens to see that the law was enforced."

ART NOTES.

The battleground of Antietam has been decorated with no less than thirteen monuments in memory of as many regiments of Pennsylvania Volunteers, and on Sept. 17 the anniversary of the battle these thirteen memorials will be unveiled. Organizations of veterans have stimulated American sculpture not a little, though it must be confessed that the quality of the average monument is terribly low. Apparently the majority of monument committees enjoy the hallucination that their taste is sufficient to select designs, and the results on some of our battlefields are more awful than the carnage for which the monuments stand. The poor soldiers who fit an' died into the Rebellion did not choose their death and would have preferred to remain unshot, unmonumented, and unsung. But the monuments at Gettysburg and Chattanooga are cold-blooded atrocities slowly prepared, and openly, shamelessly unveiled. They are lasting, too, and bid fair to freeze the blood of untold generations of persons who, 'tis to be hoped, will know enough of art to be dismayed.

The portrait of the poet Ariosto by Titian, already mentioned, formerly in the Cobham Hall collection, has been bought for the British National Gallery with the aid of a group of donors. The price was $150,000. It is easily the finest painting by the great Venetian in the gallery. Ariosto, if he it be, is a finely clad, somewhat haughty man, early middle-aged, standing by a balcony or parapet of stone. He is depicted at half length the size of life. He turns a three-quarter face to the beholder and looks from the canvas out of the corners of his eyes; his head is thrown back and his expression keen, bold, and perhaps a trifle disdainful. Over his right shoulder, which is toward the spectator, hangs a quilted cloak of a hazel color; one sees a bit of white shirt with a fine gold chain about the neck. He has full red sensuous lips, dark brown beard, and a great head of very black-brown hair to his shoulders, which throws brow and cheek into brilliant relief. The nose is delicate and finely chiseled. Titian has placed his name on the stone of the parapet. The picture is in an old frame heavily incrusted with figures-de-lis. It occupies a screen to itself in Gallery VII., where the Venetians have been grouped, an honor well deserved, for notwithstanding the wealth of marvelous pictures in the National Gallery this one fairly lays claim to the first rank. Among the subscribers to the purchase are Messrs. J. Pierpont Morgan and W. W. Astor, Lady Wantage and Lord Iveagh, Lord Burton, and Mr. Beit. Ariosto mentions Titian in his "Orlando Furioso." The portrait was painted in 1516, the year that Alfonso invited Ariosto to his Court at Ferrara.

Cardinal Vannutelli is said to have verified the charge that a wonderful ancient priest's cope lent by Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan to the South Kensington, London, is the same relic which disappeared some years ago from the cathedral at Ascoli, in Eastern Italy. It is said to be the finest object of the kind in existence. The attention of Mr. Morgan is to be called to it, and an investigation may ferret out the person who is to blame for selling a famous object from the cathedral's treasury. Such things are not left about where a thief could take them. Usually it is found that they have been sold by priests who care more for money to repair the church or embellish it with modern art works than for old vestments whose beauty they do not appreciate.

In this case, however, an outsider is at least one of the culprits. A Florentine named Ricardo Rocchigiani, who came to Ascoli some years ago and set up a photographer's atelier, was arrested and committed suicide in prison. The cope disappeared from the cathedral in 1902, when the premises were being cleansed, and of late Rocchigiani had been absent from Ascoli, stating on being asked as to his movements that he had been in Egypt. The cope was sold only recently to Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, who supposed that it came from Paris. On sending it for exhibition to the South Kensington, it was greatly admired; some experts decided that it was English work of the second half of the thirteenth century. When it was asserted that this was the stolen cope of Ascoli, astonishment was great. The basis of the cope is brocade, formed by gold threads woven on a kind of canvas. Fifteen whole and four half-circular medallions are embroidered on it, representing the Virgin, the Child, the head of Christ, the crucifixion of St. Peter, and figures of early Popes. The only point in which the cope has been injured in all these years is in the loss of pearls once scattered profusely over it. These were removed in order to pay a war tax levied under Napoleon I. The cope was a present to Ascoli by a native of the town who ascended the Papal throne in 1288 as Nicholas IV. As it has always remained one of the greatest treasures of the cathedral up to 1902. How the photographer could have obtained it without collusion with the keeper of the treasury is not easy to see. The death of Rocchigiani may remove the only chance to detect the culprit.

Railway companies as patrons of art are very modern phenomena and perhaps confined to the United States. For many years Thomas Moran painted pictures of the marvelous landscapes traversed by one of the great continental railways. Now it is C. H. Harmon of Denver who has an order for twenty-four paintings from the Santa Fé line. One represents the old Santa Barbara mission buildings, another the bay of Avalon on Catalina Island, a third a view of Coronado Beach in San Diego Bay seen from Point Loma. There are scenes from the Yosemite Valley and the Grand Cañon of Arizona, Pueblo Indian communal houses and establishments of the Catholic mission priests in California. Three already finished measure 12 by 18 feet. According to The Denver Post, the order was given by Secretary Paul Morton, who was Vice President of the Santa Fé before he accepted his place in the Cabinet at Washington. When the series is complete the railway company will exhibit them at Denver.

The Russians have only recently completed their art exhibit at the Art Palace in the St. Louis World's Fair. Four associations are represented: The Imperial Academy of Arts, the St. Petersburg Society of Artists, the Association of Artists of St. Petersburg, and a society which arranges exhibitions in Russian towns. A large portrait statue of Count Tolstoy by Ginsburg and Makofsky's masterpiece on canvas, "Peasants Towing Barges on the Volga," are exhibits by the Imperial Academy. Ancient Russian architecture is shown in seventy-three pictures by Rohrich, and "Views of Siberia" in nine paintings by Mme. Pedoshenko. Another group of pictures by Demiroff-Uralsky represents the Ural Mountains, famous since remote antiquity for their precious stones. "Awaiting the Pasha," the masterpiece of Soukharofsky, is one of the notable canvases in the Russian art exhibit.

PALATIAL ST. REGIS TO OPEN ITS DOORS TO-DAY

Called the Most Richly Furnished Hotel in America.

COST $5,500,000 COMPLETE

Building from Top to Bottom Marked by the Most Stunning Effects of the Decorator's Art.

The new St. Regis, at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, said to be the finest hotel in America in the way of furnishings and interior decorations, will be open for business to-day. It is the property of Col. John Jacob Astor, and will be under the management of R. M. Haan, the restaurant man. Trowbridge & Livingston were the architects, and Arnold, Constable & Co. did the furnishing. Including the furnishings, the hostelry represents an outlay of $5,500,000. The building alone cost $4,000,000.

Eighteen stories high, the St. Regis towers above everything in the neighborhood. The patronage which the management expects to attract is indicated by the locality in which it stands, the most exclusive residential section of the city. One is first struck by the outward appearance of the building, which, though it is eighteen stories high, rests on a plot smaller than the site of the Waldorf-Astoria.

One has but to enter the place to be impressed with its magnificence. It is there that the most money was spent. On the first floors are the public rooms, and on the Fifth Avenue side is the general dining hall and restaurant, the ornamentation being in keeping with the rich effect carried out all through the building. Connecting with the dining hall is the Palm Room, perhaps the most gorgeous of all. It is lighted by a skylight, supported by great marble arches, set with rare tapestries and wonderful mural decorations.

On the Fifth Avenue side on the second floor is the banquet hall and ballroom. On the same floor are the library, containing 3,000 books, and the two reception rooms, one of which is done in white mahogany throughout, and the other of Circassian oak. Some of the most valuable of the tapestries collected by Mr. Haan in his two years' search of Europe are to be seen in these rooms.

The principal apartment on the third floor is the state suite, a series of rooms that have no counterpart in America. This suite consists of two bedrooms, a private dining room, sitting room, library, reception room, and bath room. The various other floors are given up to bedrooms, single or en suite, and every one of them furnished in beautiful yet simple style.

An idea of the decorative scheme of the St. Regis may be had from a description of the banquet hall. Here the walls are of paneled marble of a dull white color. The doors are painted to harmonize with the general scheme, while the spaces between the doors and windows are covered with rich tapestries, the hangings being of yellow and white Venetian velvets.

The mechanical equipment of the hotel includes an ice plant and an electric plant. The heating is by direct radiation. The cold air is first filtered, and then heated by being passed over a system of steam coils. It is then forced into the rooms by electrical blowers.

The cleaning will be done automatically by a system of pipes connected with powerful vacuum pumps in the basement, the dust being drawn into the basement, where it is put into sacks, to be carried away. Other modern improvements are an incinerating plant and the most effective fire alarm system to be found.

SAND SHARK FOUGHT HARD.

Big Specimen Received at Aquarium and a Giant Turtle, Too.

A sand shark said to be the largest ever held in captivity and a leatherback turtle, also some pumpkins as to size in his class, registered permanently at the Aquarium, Battery Park, yesterday. The shark hails from three miles within Sandy Hook, where a fisherman picked him up, and the turtle registered from Bay Head, N. J.

A fisherman named Schmoor, who sets his nets in the lower bay, started out in his naphtha launch on Friday to gather the fish. He saw a great splashing on the water, and then he made out a long gray body enmeshed in the nets. The shark finally exhausted himself, and Schmoor went to get his launch. He hooked a scow to the stern, and the shark was placed in it. The fisherman's troubles began. The big fish fought all the way, and several times had been almost abandoned before the Aquarium was reached. The shark is nine feet long, and weighs nearly 500 pounds. The turtle was also found in a fisherman's nets. He is five feet long, and weighs 400 pounds or more.

Pr

PARKER A SURPRISE TO THE POLITICIANS

He Does the Talking While They Must Listen Meekly.

IS A TYPICAL AMERICAN

Has a Red-Haired Temperament, but Only Gets Angry on Questions of Principle.

Special to The New York Times.

ESOPUS, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Since the St. Louis Convention numerous politicians have become acquainted with a fact which may not be known to a good many of their countrymen, and that is that if Alton B. Parker is elected President the White House will have a tenant who is as strong a man as anybody who has occupied that office. It should be added that the strength is of the quiet kind as opposed to the strenuous or noisily revolving variety.

The testimony of visiting politicians, made for publication, goes for little. They have to approve the candidate of their party, and what they say is discounted. The testimony of men who have watched him day in and day out with alert eyes, trained by experience in that kind of work, is worth more. No newspaper man, Democrat or Republican, has spent a month at Esopus without being possessed by a firm conviction, willing or unwilling, that ex-Judge Parker is one of the strongest characters he has ever met.

No politician has come here to make the ex-Judge's acquaintance without getting a surprise, pleasant or unpleasant. One or two have come here to make demands of a candidate presumably anxious for votes and willing to listen meekly to the terms of party leaders. When they got here they listened meekly to a man who laid down the law to them, and they went away with no illusions about the extent to which they could control him.

Daily the newspapers have given the roster of those who came to see the Judge, and doubtless many who have read it have imagined that the visitors came to make dickers and deals or to post the ill-informed candidate about what he must do and about local conditions. The boot has been on the other leg. They have come to listen, not to talk. They have received information, not given it; and they have made no dickers and no deals. The boldest of them have become aware very early in the conversation that their candidate will listen to nothing of the sort.

No Chance to Talk Back.

It is not a tricky politician whom the Democrats have nominated for President, but a man of high ideals, almost quixotic in some respects, and of the most sensitive honor even in little details. One prominent politician, the head of a big organization, came here in a dictatorial mood to meet a candidate he had never seen before, and to take the short way with him. It was a sight for the gods to see that misguided man reduced to silence in five minutes; to see him sitting on the Rosemount porch silent as a clam, chewing on a cigar that had gone out, while in front of him waved the big forefinger which the Judge uses for purposes of emphasis and enlightenment. He never said a word for a solid hour—he had no chance—and he went away crestfallen, meek, and much wiser.

With this strength of character there runs a curious vein of simplicity almost childlike. He is not one prone to think ill of other men, and errs somewhat on the side of leniency in his judgments of them. But it does not take him long to find them out, and when he does there is no deceiving him.

No doubt the acute newspaper reader has smiled knowingly on reading the various accounts of the Judge's fondness for country life and farming and out-door sports, and has said to himself, "Aha! trying to get up the reputation of a Cincinnatus for the candidate." But the simple truth is that the casual newspaper pilgrims to Rosemount, visiting the Judge only for a day or two and recording the first impression, dwelt on those subjects because they are the most prominent ones of the Judge's daily life and the ones that instantly fix the attention of a new acquaintance. He can't help talking about farming and country enjoyments, and he would not abandon his horseback run on the hills about Rosemount for any consideration.

His conservatism and judicial cast of mind have been so dwelt upon that most persons who come here to meet him expect to meet a cold, reserved man, and are profoundly astonished and delighted to meet a warm and genial one, simple and direct in his ways and talk, and always the same to every visitor, high or low. If his picturesque looked in the least like him the surprise might not be so great. The black mustache and pale student's face, which the pictures show, give the idea of an unapproachable man. He is a red-haired man, with a red-haired man's temperament, and his face is high colored clear to the eyes.

A Red-Haired Temperament.

Yet the red-haired temperament is modified by judicial habit of mind. He flashes up quickly, as do most red-haired men, but seldom gets angry. When he does it is never on any personal matter. Those who have known him longest have never seen him really angry except on some question of principle. Once a law student used a letter in an unfair way. The Judge was furiously angry. The matter did not affect him personally; his anger was over the dishonesty the man had shown.

When he is angry he keeps down the manifestation of it so that a stranger would not be apt to know how serious his feeling really was. "I don't think," said one who knows him well, "that he ever said anything in anger which he wouldn't say a week afterward."

The Judge seldom shows elation over anything that happens to him. When on his way to his morning swim he was hailed by the information that he had been nominated for President, he said, "Is that so?" and went on to the river. When new and unexpected assurances of support from influential people have come to him, the Judge's chief anxiety has been to keep the newspaper correspondents from going astrdy and making the case stronger than it should be. His effort always seems to be to keep them from saying too many encouraging things about him.

The day he resigned from the bench of the Court of Appeals was the saddest day of his life since the death of his boy. He was giving up his life work, his career, and though he kept himself perfectly in control his regret was evident. To the men who had accompanied him from Esopus to Albany that day a new light was shed on the famous gold standard telegram. It was evident to them that here was a man who actually would not have cared if a nomination for President had been taken away from him after he had it within his grasp; his loved judicial work would have repaid him. And in their minds it is a question whether he would not, after all, prefer to remain in the humbler station and whether he is not sacrificing the chief pleasure of his life from a sense of public duty.

Attitude Toward Presidency.

It is a little bit difficult for the average man to take in Judge Parker's attitude toward the Presidency; hard to understand a man who balances the Presidency and the Chief Judgeship of the Court of Appeals in his mind, undecided which to prefer. It is absolutely the belief of those who know him best that he now seeks the Presidency entirely because of his desire to restore the Government to the old Constitutional boundaries from which it has escaped in consequence of the encroachment of the three branches of Government upon each others.

When he has done that he will be glad to return to private life, and hence it was not hard for him to make his announcement that he would not be a candidate for a second term. He believes that if, at the end of his first term, the Democratic Party is not capable of producing a man who can carry on his work it had better retire from politics. To carry on, unembarrassed by the temptation of a second term, the work of doing away with the executive encroachments that have confounded the distinction between the three governmental branches, is his ambition, and for this he has accepted a nomination which takes him away from the loved work of his life.

He confided to some of the leading Democrats of the Nation his intention to make the anti-second term announcement, and they were horrified. They told him that he would be misunderstood and ridiculed, and that it would be regarded as the play of a demagogue. It is considerably easier to kick the Palisades loose from their moorings than to move the Judge from a decision he has once come to after thinking it over for a long time. He is a stubborn man.

"I might be regarded as a demagogue if I merely fulminated against a second term," he told those eminent Democrats, "but if I deprive myself of the chance of a second term I don't see how my sincerecity can be doubted. And I don't care whether it is or not; I want the chance to go on record on this proposition."

And he went, amid much holding up of horrified hands, and despite a despairing letter written to him at the last moment by an eminent statesman whose protest by word of mouth had proved ineffective.

His Hobby.

All men have hobbies; the Judge's is the restoration of the Constitutional limitations surrounding the three branches of the Government. No appropriation bills will be passed by "Executive order" in his Administration; there will be no "constructive recesses," nor will any canal strips be ruled by one-man power exerted through the Marine Corps. If he is elected President he will enter upon the office mainly to do away with the new conception of the rights of the Executive. This need not be elaborated; all one has to do is to read his decisions as Chief Judge to find that he can no more keep the topic of Constitutional limitations out of an opinion than Mr. Dick could keep the head of King Charles I. out of his kite.

His low estimate of the things he does is the despair of those about him. When Arthur McCausland came to be his secretary, four years ago, he found that the Judge had not preserved any of his speeches, essays, or other productions. There were no pamphlets, daintily printed and guarded as the apple of the author's eye.

After a good deal of search, McCausland found four typewritten manuscripts of speeches, thrown carelessly into a drawer. They were all the Judge had to show for all his speeches and writings, and he had forgotten their existence or they would have been destroyed. They were a lot of loose sheets jumbled together.

McCausland made a noble endeavor to get back of that period, but could not do it, which was a pity, for the Judge had delivered more speeches prior to that date than he has since. McCausland had them neatly typewritten and gave them to his chief, with the suggestion that they ought to be bound. The Judge glanced at them, grunted good naturely, and hurled them into another drawer. The indefatigable McCausland rescued them again, preserved all the speeches and writings of the Judge in the four years following, and, when it looked as if his chief would surely be nominated for President, he had them printed and charged to the Judge. The latter grinned when the bill came in and paid it; it was the first he knew of the printing.

Threw Away Historic Document.

The gold standard telegram sent to the St. Louis Convention was drafted in lead pencil by the Judge and copied for the telegraph operator by McCausland. The Judge threw the draft away. McCausland rescued it. The Rev. Charles Mercer Hall, the Judge's son-in-law, is an autograph collector, and McCausland took his find to the Judge and said:

"You ought to give this to Father Hall for his collection."

"What, that thing?" said the Judge, regarding it with corrugated eyebrows.

"What for? What on earth would he want with that?"

"Well," said McCausland, apologetically, melting under the Judge's scorn, "it might be rather valuable for a man who collects autographs."

The Judge grunted. Plainly he regarded McCausland as a person of weak mind and his son-in-law as a crank.

"Well," he said tolerantly, "if you think he can make any use of it, give it to him; I don't want it."

McCausland copied the historic document on the typewriter and gave the original to Mr. Hall. Subsequently that gentleman allowed a newspaper to make a fac-simile of it, and the Judge was amused and surprised to find that many people throughout the country discussed eagerly upon its appearance, penmanship, and interlineations.

The Judge is a man of country ways, an up-the-Hudson accent, and a large, expansive, Ulster County laugh. His favorite amusement is to go picnicking with his family. When one of these hilarious events is on it is a great day with the Parkers.

There were twenty-five of them, from near and far, when the Judge harnessed up the horses for the picnic at Accord last Labor Day. That was a record breaker in numbers, but they have had some crowds of Parkers that footed up nearly to that total. Last Summer, when his mother was at Esopus, they took their lunch basket to New Paltz, where the Judge's cows are pastured.

On such occasions the Judge harnessed the horses, fed them, hauled the luncheon out of the wagon, and built the fire. The rest of the Parkers constituted the rank and file and obeyed orders, but the Judge did most of the manual labor as well as the superintending. These were the happiest days of his life. Then it was that his large laugh aroused the echoes of Ulster County and that the ermine and the dignity of the Court of Appeals were things which the visiting Parkers, pinch themselves as they might, could regard only as a not at all authentic dream.

If you can find a Judge of the Court of Appeals who can unbend and become confidential—for, as Judge Werner recently observed to a questioning reporter, 'You know a Judge mustn't be too natural'—you may learn that the excellent Judge is one of the most pugnacious fighters that ever sat on that bench. For they do have fights in high courts. It all looks beautifully dignified and cold-blooded when they hand down their majestic decisions, but before those decisions are reached there are hot debates, where the solemn language of the decisions is left off along with the limposing gowns.

In the case of the Court of Appeals the battleground is the handsome consultation room back of the courtroom. There, when a weighty case is to be decided, the Judges meet and do battle for their respective convictions. It would be more interesting than decisions if these battles could be reported in the newspapers, but the only audience is A. S. Brolley, the stenographer, and he is as close-mouthed as the father of all the clams.

In some courts Judges will go around and canvass their colleagues separately. Judge Parker never did this; he regarded it as unfair fighting and altogether a questionable thing to do. His fights were always conducted in the consultation room with all the Judges present, and there he would battle like a Trojan or a red-haired man.

The first skirmish would come in the consultation the morning after the argument in open court. There would be a preliminary vote, but that did not bind anybody, and the Judges would shift their ground afterward as they heard new arguments and obtained new light. This vote showed the first line-up and gave the Judges an idea of how hard they would have to fight.

The Chief Judge never made a fight except for a big principle. On small things—questions of practice and technicalities—he was content to register his opinion and let it go. But when a principle was at stake—such as his hobby of the constitutional limitations and usurpation, or on the labor cases—he would fight as only a red-haired man can. Then he would battle with his whole soul, and the matter would not end with one consultation. Battle would follow battle; he would leave no stone unturned; and here is the verdict of one who was there:

"He is the best fighter on the bench."

He rarely changed his opinion in one of these fights, because he is very slow to reach a decision. He canvasses a question on all sides before making up his mind, and it is next to impossible to shake him.

It is a little unfortunate that he was so little known to his countrymen before his nomination; it is hard to test a fair judgment in the height of a political campaign, where every word and action is distorted. If he is elected the people will have ample time to learn that he is a man of strong and powerful character; one whose ideals are so high that even among Presidents he has not much company, and who sticks to these ideals with the obstinacy that nature planted in him when she gave him his red hair and his big laugh; one who is as far as possible removed from the human iceberg type, who is a warm-hearted man, a fine fighter, and a very hearty, human, wholesome, typical American gentleman.

Electric Train Kills a Fishhawk.

A fishhawk came to grief Tuesday morning in Bristol by being struck by an electric passenger train on the Consolidated Railroad while it was flying home from the harbor with a fish just caught. The train from Providence arrived at Bristol at 8:50 o'clock, and as it was nearing Pappoosesquaw crossing Conductor Bowler heard a loud whack on the head car, and upon examination found that a big fishhawk had been killed by the train. The bird was picked up and carried to the railroad station in Bristol. It measured six feet from tip to tip of the wings.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

DEPARTMENT STIRRED BY STORY OF COTTON LEAK

Official Denies That Agricultural Report Got Out Early.

HOW THE SECRET IS GUARDED

Prof. Moore Also Answers Complaints of Leakages In Weather Reports Relating to Crops.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—The charge made by the Savannah Cotton Exchange that the cotton report leaked out from the Department of Agriculture yesterday has aroused sharp indignation among department officials. Acting Secretary Moore declares most emphatically that there can be no truth in the charge.

In a statement given out this afternoon he undertakes to show that some one has made a large mistake. The returns are received by separate forces of expert clerks, who are kept in rooms apart and locked, so that there can be no communication with persons outside until the footings are complete. Then the various sheets are taken to a room where trusted officials are charged with the duty of assembling the footings into the final grand total.

These men are kept under lock and key, so that there may be no possible attempt by outsiders to communicate with them or any attendant who may be on duty with them. Secretary Wilson himself has several times been one of the company in the room at the final work on the report.

The statement given out by the department suggests that the Savannah Exchange was unfortunate in its want of facilities for getting the report promptly, and says:

"The department has ascertained this morning that the Savannah Cotton Exchange is not one of the Exchanges that have arranged with the Western Union or Postal Telegraph Companies to furnish it with official Government figures by direct flash. Savannah receives the figures by way of New York or New Orleans.

"The Savannah dispatch in to-day's papers states that Savannah received the official figures about 1:30; it was therefore open to any one after the figures became public property at 1:15 to telegraph or long-distance telephone some person in Savannah, who would thus receive the figures fifteen or twenty minutes ahead of their being received in the usual way, but not ahead of their official promulgation."

In the same line with the complaints about the leakage of the cotton report there have been numerous complaints of the premature release of weather reports affecting the condition of crops, and Boards of Trade and commercial Exchanges have found fault with the system followed by the department. In discussing the matter to-day Mr. Moore said:

"For a long while the Department of Agriculture, and more particularly, of course, the Weather Bureau, has been bothered with complaints from various Boards of Trade and other organizations in the large cities trading in grain and produce, commodities which are so dependent upon the weather. Our reports, as well as our forecasts, are of vital importance to these speculators and investors, and we had to adopt some method of distribution which would be satisfactory to all.

"It would hardly become the cities with the best telegraphic facilities to oppose this order, because they will get the reports at the same time as their competitors. The result will be that these better-equipped cities will have to release what might be construed as an unfair advantage. They can't complain because they are placed on an equal footing."

Prof. Moore was asked if this order, permitting the agents of the Weather Bureau to be sole custodians of this very important news, while the speculators and investors are howling on the outside for the information, would not be too great a temptation for the agents.

"We thought of that phase of the situation," he replied, "and we realize we will have to exercise a little extra vigilance. Of course, we go on the supposition that all our agents are honest, but our force of Inspectors will keep on the lookout, nevertheless.

"It is very probable that some unscrupulous brokers, if any such there be, will make tempting offers to agents for inside information. It places upon the agents a great responsibility, but I am sincere when I say that I believe that practically all of them are of a caliber to resist such temptation as may be placed before them.

"The reports will be released at exactly the same time in all parts of the United States, and any active buying or selling by a broker a few minutes before the release would excite suspicion, to say the least, particularly if this was repeated three or four times and the broker was always on the right side of the market. I think the department will be able to take care of itself in this matter, and everybody will be better satisfied."

It has been urged that the department could escape all liability to criticism if the cotton reports were given out late in the day, after the Exchanges are closed. If the report were to be given out at 5 P. M., it is argued, the result would be telegraphed all over the country and published before the opening of business the next morning, and every dealer would have an equal chance to act on the information received.

RUNAWAY HORSE IN PARK.

Scattered Vehicles and Pedestrians and Finally Jumped Over Embankment.

A runaway horse attached to an unoccupied runabout created considerable excitement in the East Drive in Central Park, near One Hundred and Sixth Street, last night. Many carriages and pedestrians had narrow escapes.

At One Hundred and Fifth Street the horse jumped over an embankment and landed about fifteen feet below. It was unable to move out of the wreckage, and was badly cut about the legs and head.

The animal was owned by E. D. Coois of Thirty-ninth Street and Fort Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn. It was taken to a near-by stable.

AUTO CAUSES RUNAWAY.

Driver's Leg Broken and Policeman Loses Uniform Stopping Horse.

While driving on Green Avenue, in Westchester, last night, a horse, driven by Henry Holst of Morris Park, Van Nest, became frightened at a passing automobile and ran away. The carriage struck a telegraph pole and Mr. Holst was thrown out, breaking his leg. He refused to go to a hospital, but went to the residence of some friends near by.

The horse ran for a considerable distance on the sidewalk after Mr. Holst was thrown out, but was finally stopped by Policeman John Burke after he had been dragged a block and his uniform torn almost from his body. He was unhurt, except for a few bruises.

HOSPITAL INSTEAD OF PARADE.

Workman Stabbed While Buying Uniform to Wear To-morrow.

While buying his uniform last night for the Labor Day parade, Thomas Parker of 142 Broome Street was badly stabbed in the head and in the hand at Fifty-fourth Street and Third Avenue. Alonso Zulick, twenty-two years old, of 420 East One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, is locked up in the East Fifty-first Street Station, charged with the assault.

The altercation arose in the tailor shop of Samuel Black, at Third Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, where Parker got into an argument with Zulick. The latter picked up a pair of shears and stabbed Parker in the head and hand. Parker was sent to the Presbyterian Hospital.

IRISH PLAN FOR HOME RULE.

Passage of Land Act Removed Obstacles, They Believe—Redmond Has Great Hopes.

Now that the Irish National Party in the United Kingdom has obtained from the United Irish League of America a promise of $50,000 to aid its cause in the next general British elections, it is interesting to know just what the party managers intend to do with the money. John E. Redmond, M. P., leader of the party, has told his friends in New York something about his plans. He gave the league only a general idea of them during last week's convention, which arranged for the collection of the money in this country.

Within the last two years the Nationalists have accomplished the passage of the Irish Land act, practically abolishing landlordism in Ireland. The party brought about this first step in its programme because of its ability to control enough Parliamentary votes to hold a check on the two great political organizations in Great Britain—the Conservatives and the Liberals.

Henceforth the object is to retain votes sufficient to control the balance of power in Parliament. To get these votes the $50,000 will be used, together with what funds can be gathered at home. It is likely that the American subscription may be far greater than the amount promised. The league's officials say they hope to get $100,000, and this State alone is expected to give $20,000. The platform of the party has been announced. It includes home rule—nothing less. The doom of landlordism in Ireland was but a preface.

According to Mr. Redmond, who headed the Parliamentary delegation of four that came here to attend the American convention, the Irish National Party now controls 85 out of 102 Irish seats in Parliament. These 85 are regarded as sure—just as sure as the State of Pennsylvania is regarded by the Republican Party in this country. But the two Irish parties are sure to contest nearly every seat secured by the Nationalists, not necessarily with any hope of winning the contests, but in order to deplete the resources of the little party. Election booths, clerks, and inspectors—everything attached to the running of an election, is charged to the candidates. The State pays for nothing.

In the eighty-five sure districts, then, some of the funds of the party must be spent. But the Nationalists have other uses for money. For years they have been gaining new districts. Mr. Redmond says he expects to add those of Belfast and Derry this year—without doubt. Then there are many doubtful districts in Great Britain—districts where the Irish voters, though unable to elect their men, hold the balance of power. In more than 100 British districts there are so many Irish votes that no Conservative or Liberal candidate can be chosen without their approval. The Irish voters in these places cast their ballots in accordance as the respective candidates of the big parties are for home rule or against it.

Mr. Redmond and his associates claim to have behind them a better-organized Irish party than ever existed before, even better than that which followed Charles Stewart Parnell. They stand for moderation in the fight for home rule, and although they have not made any promises, it is said by their friends here that they look for the successful termination of their fight within one, two, or three years.

The fight for Irish home rule is almost as old as Ireland. When, after centuries of bloodshed and revolt, the struggle over the Gladstone bills was reached late in the last century, the chief arguments used by its British opponents was the existence of landlordism. The English said that the land question was an insurmountable obstacle. It was set forth that it was impossible to leave the landlords to the tender mercies of an Irish Parliament. Now, however, the Land act has been passed, and landlordism will have ceased to exist within comparatively few years—fifteen years at the most, says Mr. Redmond. So the Irish think that their greatest stumbling block is removed.

The Redmond plea for home rule is framed to appeal to the English, and the Nationalists do not dwell on arguments grown out of ancient hatred and prejudice. There is one British Parliament, says the Irish leader, for the government of millions of people at home and in the colonies and dependencies. Is it a physical possibility for a single legislative body to do the work? He says, No. Parliamentary institutions, he declares, are disappearing, because the one body cannot keep up its pristine influence and duties.

He cites the United States, with the great National Congress of two houses and the many State governing bodies; Germany, with a central legislature, supplemented by dozens of smaller ones in the different kingdoms, and other great empires that, unlike Britain, do not attempt to rule their wide possessions through a single legislature. The only way to preserve Parliament, say the Nationalists to the English, is to lighten the load of the House of Commons.

Just before the end of last week's convention of the Irish League Mr. Redmond said he considered English prejudice against home rule to be in a dying condition. Whether its collapse was a matter for the next year or two he would not venture to guess, but it was merely a matter of a short time.

CROWD PELTED POLICEMAN.

He Was in Plain Clothes—Had Tackled a Big Irishman.

An Irishman of Herculean size, Joseph Cauley of 406 West Fifty-fourth Street, got into a fight last night with a small man who was trying to escort a woman to a car at Fifty-third Street and Tenth Avenue.

The two men were pummeling each other when Patrolman Henry Steul of the Long Island City Police Station, in citizen's clothes, happened along. He put the little man and the woman on a north-bound Tenth Avenue car.

When he was starting to walk away he was set upon by the Irishman. A fight followed, in which the crowd numbering several hundred men, cheered the big Irishman on, not knowing who the other man was.

When the crowd had depleted several Italian vegetable men's wagons of their stock and had thrown the missiles at the policeman, somebody sent in a riot call. Sixteen men were sent from the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station. Then the big fighter was arrested and the crowd thinned away.

ADAMS MAY LIVE IN PATERSON.

Convict Transfers Property in This City for Several Residences There.

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 3.—There is considerable agitation here over the transfer of the Katz property in this city to a real estate agent, who is believed to have acted in behalf of "Al" Adams, the policy king, now in Sing Sing prison, and there is a rumor that Adams will reside here when he is released.

Adams transferred his property known as the Belden property, on Fifteenth Street, near Sixth Avenue, New York, for the Bernard Katz residence, at Carroll and Hamilton Avenues, and the house at 419 Broadway, which was occupied for a number of years by the late Philip Katz, and in which his widow still resides.

It is not known when Adams will come here, if at all. Bernard Katz says he will not vacate his house as yet, and that Mrs. Philip Katz will continue to live in the Broadway house.

ITALIAN BRUTALLY BEATEN.

Found in Baxter Street with His Face Battered Beyond Recognition.

An unknown man, probably an Italian, was found in front of 75 Baxter Street at 10:35 o'clock last night with his head and face battered until the features were beyond recognition. His skull probably was fractured.

The police of the Elizabeth Street Station sent the man to the Hudson Street Hospital, and arrested Michael Barchilino, 35 years old, of 75 Baxter Street, an Italian laborer.

He was taken to the station house with the bartender of a saloon at the corner of Baxter and Bayard Streets. There he said he had not seen anything, though he at first told the police he had seen the bartender throw the injured man out of the saloon. Barchilino was locked up, charged with being intoxicated, and the bartender allowed to go.

SCENE IN "MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH"
At The Savoy Last Night

London has already given its approval to "The Duke of Killicrankie," in which John Drew will make his appearance tomorrow evening at the Empire Theatre, so it is likely to be a success here. The play is by Capt. R. Marshall, author of "A Royal Family" and "The Second in Command." Miss Margaret Dale is Mr. Drew's leading woman. Fanny Brough, who played in the company with Charles Hawtrey last season, is also in the cast.

This is John Drew's thirteenth season under the management of Charles Frohman. It is Mr. Drew's custom every year to open the Empire Theatre with a comedy. Last Fall he opened his season in the Herald Square because the Empire was being rebuilt. Now he is at home again.

The story told in "The Duke of Killicrankie" concens a young nobleman who, being unsuccessful in his efforts to win the lady of his heart, decoys her to a lonely castle on the Continent. His friend imprisons a rich widow at the same time in the same place. The women are furious and make all sorts of plots to escape. Finally the men tell them to go home—that they are no longer desired. Then Mrs. Mulholland and Henrietta Addison suddenly discover that they really do want to marry their lovers after all. The cast:

The Duke of Killicrankie	John Drew
Mr. Henry Pitt-Welby, M. P.	Ferdinand Gottschalk
Mr. Ambrose Hicks	Lewis Baker
Alexander Macbayne	Richard Carrington
Butler	Robert Schable
Footman	B. W. Parmenter
The Countess of Pangbourne	Kate Lester
Lady Henrietta Addison	Margaret Dale
Mrs. Mulholland	Fanny Brough
Mrs. Macbayne	Constance Bell

"A Madcap Princess," in which Lulu Glaser will be seen at the Knickerbocker Theatre to-morrow night, is a musical version of the story of Mary Tudor, the heroine of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." As in the drama, so in the musical comedy—Mary Tudor elopes with Charles Brandon, evokes the wrath of her much-married brother, Henry VIII., and finally gains her ends. The three acts of the play show a May morning in the forest of Windsor, Mary's apartment in Bridewell house, and a typical English tavern of the sixteenth century.

Ludwig Englander has written the music of Miss Glaser's piece, and the book is by that most prolific of all librettists, Harry B. Smith. There are sixty voices in the chorus. The cast is as follows:

Mary Tudor	Lulu Glaser
Henry VIII.	William Pruette
Charles Brandon	Bertram Wallis
Sir Edwin Caskoden	Donald McLaren
Sir Adam Judson	Howard Chambers
Will Somers	Frank Reicher
Duke of Buckingham	Arthur Barry
Cardinal Wolsey	Ralph Lewis
Duke De Longueville	Guy Hoffman
Captain Bradhurst	H. Chambers
Farmer Blake	Reginald Barlow
A Friar	Maurice Sims
Landlord	Herbert Freer
Goody Blake	Elsie Thomas
Queen Katherine	Maud Ream Stover
Lady Jane Bolingbroke	Mary Conwell
Mistress Jane Seymour	Gwendolyn Valentine
Mistress Annie Boleyn	Rose Earle
A Page	Lillian Lipyeat

An automobile race, in which two cars go at full speed across the stage, is the big spectacular feature of "The Rogers Brothers in Paris," which will open the New Amsterdam Theatre to-morrow night. The musical farce is in three acts and five scenes. The first act shows a students' ball at the famous Bal Bouilier, in the Latin Quarter. The second act is made up of three scenes, the garden of the Tuileries, the Rue de Rivoli, and the Place de la Concorde. It is in this last scene that the auto race occurs.

The "Rogers Brothers in Paris" is by John J. McNally, with music by Max Hoffman, and lyrics by George V. Hobart. The play was presented in Buffalo last Monday. The cast is as follows:

Rudolph Kahn	Gus Rogers
Adolph Finkelsteiner	Max Rogers
George Hamilton Dodge	George Austin Moore
P. Sarsfield Kelleher	John Conroy
Walter Lee Leonard	Fred Niblo
Justin Little	Joseph Kane
Leo, the Lion Tamer	Louis B. Foley
Pierre Gorot	Frank C. Young
Marjorie Kellher	Josephine Cohan
Emilie Lamson	Dorothy Hunting
Rene Renaud	Emily Nice
Clairette Soule	Bessie De Voie
Francois	William Torpey

"The Spellbinder" is a comedy in three acts. It will be at the Herald Square Theatre to-morrow night, and will stay as long as the public likes it. Politics, described as "non-partisan and inoffensive," form the background of the play. The "boss," the "ward heeler," and the "henchman" all figure prominently. The scenes are laid in New York.

The company is headed by Ralph Delmore. Others are George Ober, Charles Dickson, Frank Russell, Eugene Shakespeare, Charlotte Townsend, Lansing Rowan, Violet Black, Gertrude Howe, and Adele Luhrman.

Denman Thompson will present a revival of "The Old Homestead" at the New York Theatre to-morrow afternoon. Mr. Thompson will appear in his old character of Joshua Whitcomb, the same character that he portrayed at the Fourteenth Street Theatre sixteen years ago. Josh is the shrewd, kindly, typical New England farmer. The former productions of this rural play have not been so magnificent in costuming and stage setting as this will be. The cast:

Joshua Whitcomb	Denman Thompson
Cy Prime	Charles Carter
Happy Jack	Walter Gale
Seth Perkins	Charles H. Clark
Frank Hopkins	Horace Wright
Eb Ganzey	Frank Knapp
Henry Hopkins	Gus Kammerlee
Judge Patterson	J. A. Hanna
Reuben Whitcomb	Hector Dion
Francois	W. E. Chamberlain
Aunt Matilda	Mrs. Morse
Mrs. Hopkins	Annie Thompson
Rickety Ann	Anita Fowler
Annie Hopkins	Blanch Kirk
Anna Maria Murdock	Venie Thompson

"Are You a Mason?" will be revived at the Garrick Theatre to-morrow afternoon. It will stay two weeks—until Clara Bloodgood comes in with the new Fitch play, "The Coronet of the Duchess." "Are You a Mason?" was first produced here three or four years ago. It achieved a great success, being pronounced one of the funniest plays seen in this city in years.

The plot turns around a gay young married man, who, to account for his late hours, declares that he is a Mason and a high officer of his lodge. It happens that his father-in-law adopts the same ruse. When brought together each believes the other to be a genuine Mason, and tries to give the proper signs, passwords, &c. The old man makes the better bluff, though, and denounces his son-in-law.

Leo Ditrichstein, Thomas A. Wise, and Henry V. Donnelly will interpret the principal characters in the revival.

The Broadway Theatre will open its doors to-morrow afternoon. The first attraction is "A Little of Everything," the musical mixture which has been at the Aerial Theatre all Summer. Fay Templeton, Peter F. Dailey, Joseph Sparks, Harry Kelly, Susie Fisher, Elphyne Snowden, and the rest will stay at the Broadway for two weeks, after which they will go on a tour.

The Offenbach Review still continues to be the best feature of "A Little of Everything." It consists of a collection of old Offenbach songs which were at the height of their popularity some years ago, but which have been almost forgotten.

The minstrel show and the burlesques are still going.

The Harlem Opera House will open for the season to-morrow with a matinée performance of "The Little Princess." Leonie Darmon will play the leading role of Sara Crewe. There will be matinées on Wednesday and Saturday.

"Rachel Goldstein" will be at the New Star to-morrow afternoon.

At the Third Avenue Theatre "One of the Finest" will be the week's attraction. One scene shows fifty small boys in swimming.

PLAYS THAT HOLD.

At Daly's Theatre Edna May in "The School Girl" continues to attract good crowds. The theatre, owing to the work done this Summer, is much more comfortable than it was before.

At the Lyric "The Royal Chef" has settled down for a long stay.

"The County Chairman" is not suffering from competition by new shows. It stayed here six months last season, but Wallack's is just as full these nights as it was in the Spring. The fame of the comedy has spread abroad.

Up at the Majestic "The Isle of Spice" has gone on smoothly despite some disputes about stage "business" that are now being settled in the courts. Agnes Cain Brown is singing the prima donna rôle.

"Piff, Paff, Pouf" stays at the Casino. Grace Cameron's song and Eddie Foy's comedy work are the features.

"Jack's Little Surprise" is still at the Princess Theatre. It has been doing pretty well, and the crowds seem to grow larger with every performance.

"The White Tigress of Japan" is as terrible at the American Theatre as she was a week ago. Eighth Avenue likes this melodrama.

Cockfighting is still popular in Fourteenth Street, which means that "Girls Will Be Girls" at the Fourteenth Street Theatre is losing none of its first-night success. It has proved a big "hit."

William Collier at the Criterion Theatre is bringing big audiences to see "The Dictator." The play will be here only two weeks more.

"Checkers," at the Academy of Music, is playing to packed houses. Thomas W. Ross in the title rôle is thoroughly competent, and he has a good company with him.

Nearly every theatre in New York will have a Labor Day matinée performance tomorrow afternoon.

VAUDEVILLE.

John T. Kelly returns to vaudeville at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre tomorrow afternoon. He will appear in a comedietta called "Senator McFee," and the cast will consist of Florence Veldran, Louis G. Christy, and Herman Lieb. Yorke and Adams, a team of musicians, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thorne are on the bill too. Others are Holden and Florence, Levine and Leonard, Louis M. Granat, Russell and Buckley, Eva May James, and Nessen and Nessen.

"Men and Women" will be presented at the Fifth Avenue Theatre this week. It is one of the most successful of the Belasco-De Mille society plays. Bonla will exhibit some remarkable makeup tricks. Prof. Kurtis will show a troupe of trained dogs. Bruce and Daigneau, duettists, have a singing specialty.

At the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre "East Lynne" will be played this week by the stock company. In the cast will be George Soule Spencer, George Friend, Marion Berg, Frank Sheridan, R. H. Chamberlain, and Ethylle Berg. The Kittie Trio will be first on the vaudeville bill.

"The Runaways" will be at the Fifty-eighth Street Theatre a week, beginning to-morrow afternoon. Arthur Dunn has his old rôle.

A panoramic view of Lake Lucerne in Switzerland is the latest picture on view at the Eden Musée. New figures have been added to "The World in Wax." The afternoon and evening concerts are given regularly.

Henry Lee, the impersonator, will be at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre when that house opens to-morrow. Theodore Roosevelt and Alton B. Parker are the two prominent men whom he imitates most often now. Another big act is that of Mme. Marzella's birds, which have been trained to ride miniature bicycles and do other stunts that require "almost human intelligence." In the bill are John Ford and Mayme Gehrue, Mazuz and Mazett, J. Warren Keane, Paul Spadoni, and Charles Falke Seamon.

Abbott Parker, who is said to have a picture of the crucifixion on his back made by a stroke of lightning, is at Huber's Museum. The hall is full of other "freaks."

The open-air concerts at Terrace Garden will be conducted this week by Adolph L. Rothmeyer, concert master of the Metropolitan Opera House. The Sunday concerts are still a big feature of the season at Terrace Garden.

The opening of the Orpheum Music Hall, on East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, has been postponed until Friday evening, Sept. 9.

O. Duncan, the Howard brothers, Allen J. Shaw, Wood and Ray, Harry Brown, Lambert and Pierce, Matthews and Ashley, and Radie Furman.

BROOKLYN AMUSEMENTS.

"The Eternal City" will be at the Broadway Theatre in Brooklyn this week. Edward Morgan is the star and Janet Waldorf has the part of Donna Roma.

CONEY AND MANHATTAN.

The Bostock animal show at Coney Island will remain but two weeks longer before moving to its Winter quarters in the Hippodrome in Paris. During these last two weeks Mowgli, the man-animal, will be the great attraction. Sappho, the lioness, gave birth to a cub a few days ago.

In Dreamland everything goes on smoothly. The "nigger" who makes a target of his woolly head got hit the other day and has been feeling badly ever since. "Fighting the Flames" is still the dominant feature.

In Luna Park the elephants are shooting the chutes, the miniature railway is winding in and out through cavernous tunnels, the winged boat is making its regular trips to the moon, the camels and the Indian Princes are parading in the great Durbar—and everything else that has been there all Summer is there still.

There will be a special Labor Day celebration at Pain's amphitheatre, Manhattan Beach, to-morrow night.

NOTES OF AMUSEMENT.

David Warfield's new play, "The Music Master," which will have its first American performance at Atlantic City on Sept. 12, was given a copyright performance in London a day or two ago. It will come to the Belasco Theatre on Monday, Sept. 26.

Hurtig & Seamon announce that Helena Frederick will make her début in vaudeville at their house on Sept. 12. It has also been announced that she was engaged to sing in "The Isle of Spice." It will be interesting to see how Miss Frederick can solve the problem of appearing at two different places at the same time.

Vecsey, the youthful violinist who will come to this country under the management of Daniel Frohman, has ended his European season and is resting at his home in Austria. He will give three concerts in Berlin and four in Hamburg before sailing for New York on Jan. 1.

William Bramwell, who played three rôles in "Captain Barrington" last week at the Fifty-eighth Street Theatre, will continue to play them all the season. The first night he had to do it because another man was sick; but he got through with the task so well that his manager decided to let the other man go.

Some friends of John T. Kelly have arranged to give him a "send off" when he appears at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre to-morrow. In the party are Lew Fields, Lillian Russell, Meyer Cohen, Abe Hummel, Robert Grau, and many others.

NAHAN FRANKO A CONDUCTOR.

Mr. Conried Puts His Former Concertmeister a Notch Forward.

Nahan Franko, who has been concertmeister of the Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra, is now a full-fledged conductor. Mr. Conried announced yesterday that he had engaged Mr. Franko, and the impresario seemed to be well pleased to give out the news. Everybody interested in music and musicians knows about the concertmeister. He has been the stand-by of the impresarios who have held sway at the Metropolitan for many years past.

Mr. Franko is not a foreign importation. That is, he did not gain fame as a musician abroad before coming here. Though he is of German stock, he won his way in this country. It was here that he began, and it is here that he has risen to the responsible position of conductor.
